Petitioners push for governance

Attorney General may get involved

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The matter of the board of selectmen's involvement in the Cat Dam hearings and the Conservation Commission membership shakeup may be soon turned over to the attorney general's office for investigation — and it was the board's own suggestion.

During the Sept. 27 selectmen meeting, petitioners of the board's controversial July 12 vote to unseat three seasoned members of the ConCom and replace them with three new members appeared once more to air their issues and seek some resolution.

Susan Kent represented the 120 petitioners at Tuesday night's meeting, though a few others were in attendance, including Karen Quigley and Agnes McCann. All have come before the BOS to express their disapproval on the matter during previous board meetings.

"It's not how we do things in Cohasset."
— Susan Kent, Petitioner

"It's not how we do things in Cohasset," Kent said, going on to say that people from all different parts of town, representing all parts of the political spectrum, and even people who have no interest whatsoever in Cat Dam feel strongly that the board acted unfairly toward the veteran ConCom members they dismissed in July. "They just want the board to be fair," she said.

Kent reiterated the group's request that the board rescind their decision and reopen the ConCom positions. Selectman Paul Carlson reminded Kent that the board does not have the authority to do so. Once the appointments have been made, it's up to the ConCom members to decide whether or not they'd like to step down from their posts; the ConCom does not

New bakery opening

Mother-daughter team bring cupcakes to Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Something wicked (good) this way comes.

This Saturday, October 1, Wicked Good Cupcakes will be opening its doors in Cohasset, one of the new establishments to open up in Old Colony Square. Cupcakes have proven to be quite the trendy dessert over the past few years, with new bakeries popping up featuring gourmet versions of the treats. One thing that makes Wicked Good Cupcakes unique, however, is that the owner and chief pastry chef are a mother-daughter team: Tracey Noonan and Danielle Desroches.

"We work well together," said Noonan of going into business with her daughter. "It's nice, and we enjoy it; I get to see her every day."

Wicked Good Cupcakes began as a homegrown business, after Noonan and her daughter decided to take cake-decorating classes together. Both shared an

Fore River Bridge

Selectmen wait to hear from Coast Guard

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The selectmen are nearly ready to speak out on the Fore River Bridge construction project.

Last month, the board heard a presentation from two members of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association asking for Cohasset's support of a bascule (drawbridge) design for the Quincy bridge's construction, to be complete between 2016 and 2020.

Most of the selectmen seemed to favor this design, which is smaller than the MassDOT's proposed plan for a vertical lift bridge (see sidebar).

Selectman Diane Kennedy drafted a letter on behalf of the board outlining their support of the bascule design; the board will vote to approve the letter once they have heard more details about the vertical lift design from the U.S. Coast Guard, which is in favor of widening

BY THE NUMBERS

Irene came with a cost

Tropical Storm Irene came to town on August 28-29 and left some costs in her wake. The following numbers are part of an initial damage report prepared for MEMA, to accumulate the initial probable damage from the storm throughout the State.

$9,044 Debris removal

$2,145 Emergency Shelter (3 N. Main St.)

$25,000 Roads/bridges (potential insurance coverage). Pole came down across Nichols Road and leaked transformer oil onto the roadway and gutters; Clean Harbors did remediation work before the pole was reinstalled.

$14,670 Sewer pump pumping

$44,654 Police, fire overtime

$4,757 DPW, facilities overtime

$100,270 Grand Total

Other numbers:
- Public safety officials responded to 118 emergency 911 calls in a 24-hour period.
- DPW responded to downed trees at 36 locations, seven of which involved coordinating with National Grid to shut off power.
- The fire department response to Irene did not end until the afternoon of Sept. 3 when the last of power was restored.

Police Officer Gregg Hartnett clears some limbs from the roadway in the aftermath of Tropical Storm Irene.

Attorney General may get involved

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The matter of the board of selectmen's involvement in the Cat Dam hearings and the Conservation Commission membership shakeup may be soon turned over to the attorney general's office for investigation — and it was the board's own suggestion.

During the Sept. 27 selectmen meeting, petitioners of the board's controversial July 12 vote to unseat three seasoned members of the ConCom and replace them with three new members appeared once more to air their issues and seek some resolution.

Susan Kent represented the 120 petitioners at Tuesday night's meeting, though a few others were in attendance, including Karen Quigley and Agnes McCann. All have come before the BOS to express their disapproval on the matter during previous board meetings.

"It's not how we do things in Cohasset."
— Susan Kent, Petitioner

"It's not how we do things in Cohasset," Kent said, going on to say that people from all different parts of town, representing all parts of the political spectrum, and even people who have no interest whatsoever in Cat Dam feel strongly that the board acted unfairly toward the veteran ConCom members they dismissed in July. "They just want the board to be fair," she said.

Kent reiterated the group's request that the board rescind their decision and reopen the ConCom positions. Selectman Paul Carlson reminded Kent that the board does not have the authority to do so. Once the appointments have been made, it's up to the ConCom members to decide whether or not they'd like to step down from their posts; the ConCom does not

Mother-daughter team bring cupcakes to Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Something wicked (good) this way comes.

This Saturday, October 1, Wicked Good Cupcakes will be opening its doors in Cohasset, one of the new establishments to open up in Old Colony Square. Cupcakes have proven to be quite the trendy dessert over the past few years, with new bakeries popping up featuring gourmet versions of the treats. One thing that makes Wicked Good Cupcakes unique, however, is that the owner and chief pastry chef are a mother-daughter team: Tracey Noonan and Danielle Desroches.

"We work well together," said Noonan of going into business with her daughter. "It's nice, and we enjoy it; I get to see her every day."

Wicked Good Cupcakes began as a homegrown business, after Noonan and her daughter decided to take cake-decorating classes together. Both shared an

Fore River Bridge

Selectmen wait to hear from Coast Guard

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The selectmen are nearly ready to speak out on the Fore River Bridge construction project.

Last month, the board heard a presentation from two members of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association asking for Cohasset's support of a bascule (drawbridge) design for the Quincy bridge's construction, to be complete between 2016 and 2020.

Most of the selectmen seemed to favor this design, which is smaller than the MassDOT's proposed plan for a vertical lift bridge (see sidebar).

Selectman Diane Kennedy drafted a letter on behalf of the board outlining their support of the bascule design; the board will vote to approve the letter once they have heard more details about the vertical lift design from the U.S. Coast Guard, which is in favor of widening

BY THE NUMBERS

Irene came with a cost

Tropical Storm Irene came to town on August 28-29 and left some costs in her wake. The following numbers are part of an initial damage report prepared for MEMA, to accumulate the initial probable damage from the storm throughout the State.

$2,145 Emergency Shelter (3 N. Main St.)

$25,000 Roads/bridges (potential insurance coverage). Pole came down across Nichols Road and leaked transformer oil onto the roadway and gutters; Clean Harbors did remediation work before the pole was reinstalled.

$14,670 Sewer pump pumping

$100,270 Grand Total

Other numbers:

- Public safety officials responded to 118 emergency 911 calls in a 24-hour period.
- DPW responded to downed trees at 36 locations, seven of which involved coordinating with National Grid to shut off power.
- The fire department response to Irene did not end until the afternoon of Sept. 3 when the last of power was restored.

Coughlin provides 5-year plan for K9

Over the past few weeks, the board of selectmen, notably Leland Jenkins, have been asking Town Manager Mike Coughlin to provide a five-year financial plan for the K9 he authorized the police department to procure last month.

During the Sept. 27 selectmen meeting, Coughlin provided the requested document, along with his capital budget revisions for fiscal year 2012 and a financial management action plan.

Coughlin also justified his plans to hire deputy chiefs for both police and fire, saying that the police department will save money and that the money for the fire deputy chief is already in the department's budget.

Woman charged with trespassing

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 38-year-old Plymouth woman is being summonsed for trespassing after her abandoned 2007 Mitsubishi Gallant was found in a yard off Jerusalem Road near Holly Hill Farm on Thursday (Sept. 22) at about 9:20 a.m.

Police said the car pierced a portable ice skating rink in the yard and got hung up there. They ran the plate, which came back to the Plymouth woman who admitted to leaving her car. Police said she and a man, in another car, had pulled off the road to find a place to "make-out" the night before when the mishap occurred. She apparently left with him. She is being charged with trespassing with a motor vehicle.

Raccoon destroyed

Police had to put down a raccoon that was hissing and had trouble walking last week. A Nichols Road homeowner notified police after seeing the aggressive-acting raccoon in the yard. After the animal was put down, the officer bagged it and brought it to the landfill. The raccoon had not been in contact with any people or pets, police said.

MVAs

• At 9:05 a.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 20), police investigated a single-car accident on Forest Avenue. Police said a 48-year-old Hull man in a 2000 Dodge Intrepid was headed north toward the water when he swerved to avoid an animal and went off the road. He struck some rocks and tore up some bushes, police said. His car had to be towed; there were no reported injuries. The Hull man was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes.

• At 4:46 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 23), police investigated a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Cohasset Travel. A 2008 Honda Accord, operated by a 58-year-old Weymouth woman, and a 2003 Toyota Camry, operated by a 25-year-old Scituate woman, both were neck-and-neck, headed south (toward Scituate) where the lanes narrow just past the entrance to Shaw's. Police said neither car would yield to the other and they ended up sideswiping each other. Neither car was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Scituate woman, (who was in the outside, right lane that was ending), was cited for passing on the right.

Summonsed

At 10:17 a.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 20), an officer on patrol observed a 2004 Toyota 4Runner traveling 46 mph in a posted 30 mph zone. He turned around and pulled the car over on N. Main Street. The woman operating the car produced a Brazilian passport but had no license although she had been in the U.S. for four years, police said. The joint owners of the car, a 34-year-old woman and a 45-year-old man, both of Abington, are going to be summonsed to court for allowing illegal operation of the car. Police said the Brazilian woman was renting the car from the couple that was aware she was unable to obtain a license. She is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding.

Hit & Run

Police responded to a call from a motorist, a 56-year-old Scituate woman, who said her 2008 Hyundai Sonata was "rear-ended" by an unknown vehicle while she was at Shaw's Plaza on Wednesday (Sept. 21). When she returned to her car she saw damage to the rear bumper. Unfortunately, the car was parked in a blind spot in the surveillance video and police have no leads.

Crash shuts down 3A for 90 minutes

On Wednesday, Sept. 28 at about 4:30 p.m., the Cohasset Emergency Dispatch Center received numerous 911 calls reporting a serious crash on Route 3A opposite Cohasset Imports, just north of Pond Street.

When officers arrived on scene, they discovered a 2001 Ford Explorer on its side with a man trapped inside.

Officers immediately entered the vehicle through a window and rendered first aid until members of the Cohasset Fire Department arrived.

Cohasset firefighters used the Jaws of Life to extricate the man, who had serious but non-life threatening injuries. The extrication took approximately 45 minutes.

Police closed Route 3A for approximately 1-1/2 hours while the crash was being investigated.

Preliminary reports indicate that the driver of the Ford Explorer was operating north when he crossed over the fog line and hit three parked cars that were for sale in the Cohasset Imports parking lot.

The Ford Explorer was totaled along with a 2004 Ford Mustang that was for sale, were damaged.

The man driving the Explorer has been identified as Daniel Price, 37, from South Boston. He was transported to South Shore Hospital by the Scituate ambulance with serious but non-life-threatening injuries.

No citation has been issued yet, but Police Lieutenant William Quigley indicated that charges are likely.

Quigley said alcohol does not appear to have played a role in the crash.

Police officers, firefighters and a civilian attempt to reach the trapped victim.

Hear Haydn sonatas at First Parish

CONCERT
The London Sonatas of Franz Joseph Haydn at First Parish, 23 North Main St. at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 16. Tickets $15, $12 for students/seniors.

ABOUT
The Third Sunday Music Series at First Parish Cohasset kicks off on Oct. 16th with a rare opportunity to hear Haydn's "London" sonatas performed on an English piano in the class of the ones Haydn composed them for.
Historical keyboard specialist and First Parish organist, Sylvia Berry will play a grand piano built in 1806 by the prestigious London firm John Broadwood and Son that was recently restored by her husband, accomplished instrument restorer and builder, Dale Munschy. This piano is a sterling example of the kind of pianos Haydn would have encountered during of his two London sojourns. English pianos were very different from those in his home of Vienna and it is clear that he tailored these compositions to fit their distinct characteristics. Haydn had a studio in the Broadwood workshop during his first London visit, so he knew these instruments well. The program will also include two lesser-known gems from the same period and Dale Munschy will be available to answer questions about the piano and its restoration.

WORTH NOTING
Haydn wrote all three of the "London" sonatas for women he befriended while in London. The two dazzling sonatas in E-flat major and C major were written to showcase the talent of esteemed virtuoso Therese Jansen Bartolozzi. The third sonata in D major, smaller in scale yet full of Haydenesque wit, was written for Maria Hester Park, a music teacher to members of the English nobility who was also known in intellectual circles in London.

ABOUT SYLVIA
Sylvia Berry has performed as a soloist and chamber musician in the US, the UK, Canada, and Europe. Since moving to Boston in 2005 she has quickly become a favorite by engaging audiences with lively commentary about the music and the instruments she plays. She is currently the organist at First Parish Cohasset.

Vandalism

The 40-year-old Cohasset landlord of a building on Depot Court is being summonsed to court on the charge of vandalizing property. Police said the landlord allegedly cut up a garden hose in a dispute with a tenant in the building.

Alzheimer's

An elderly Hull couple (the husband is 86 and his wife, 81), who both apparently suffer from Alzheimer's, were stopped again in Cohasset on Wednesday (Sept. 21) at Shaw's Plaza. An officer spotted the couple in their 2008 Toyota Camry pulling into the plaza. The husband's driver's license had been revoked and the registration was suspended, police said. However, the couple keeps driving. This time police seized the plates and had the car towed and impounded. The couple is being summonsed to court; the husband for operating with revoked registration and license; and his wife for allowing illegal operation of the car. The couple, who is also well known to Hull police, was transported to Hull and put into the custody of a neighbor. Police said their driving poses a public safety hazard.

Flowers

Police responded to a report of a man who took $40 worth of mums from a farm stand off Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the town line with Scituate last Saturday (Sept. 24). A plate number was provided. As it turned out the 37-year-old Norwell man had an agreement with the farm stand owner that he could take items and pay later, police said.

Spanking kids

A concerned motorist notified police on Saturday (Sept. 24) around 12:12 p.m. after observing the woman in the gray 2007 Mercury Villager minivan in front on her on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Beechwood Street get out of the car and start hitting her kids in the back seat. The woman witnessing the incident notified police and provided a plate number. Police pulled the minivan over on King Street. Further investigation revealed the two children, ages 5 and 8, were not injured and there was no apparent abuse. The mother, who lives in Hull, explained she was disciplining her children. Police interviewed the children. Police detectives were in contact with Hull police to see if there was any history of abuse and they also notified the state Department of Children and Families to see if there was a file on the family. Police said it appears the mother was disciplining her children but stressed it is not a good idea to get out in the middle of the road and start hitting your kids.

Alleged threat

A 51-year-old Cohasset man reported that while his wife was walking their dog in the Highland Avenue area, a man approached with his dog and the two dogs became aggressive but no contact between the dogs occurred. Both the dogs were leashed. However the man, who is 40 and from Cohasset with the other dog, allegedly threatened the woman that if her dog came any closer he would stab it. She told her husband who called police and the incident was logged.

Norwell teens

Police responded to a report of suspicious activity near the sports complex on Crocker Lane last Saturday (Sept. 24) at around 6:37 p.m. Two teenage boys, both 17 and from Norwell, had apparently been smoking marijuana as there was a slight smell of marijuana emanating from the vehicle. The father of the driver was called who arrived and took custody of the boys and the car, police said. Police did not find any remaining marijuana.

Cohasset's top dog

Before Erik came Cocoa, Cohasset's first K9

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The newest addition to the Cohasset Police Department, Erik the K9, has garnered his fair share of attention since joining the force last month. But many Cohasset residents may recall that around 40 years ago, there was another top dog in town.

In the late 1960s, a Cohasset police officer, the late Bart Winn, wanted to bring in a K9 unit. He was told the department could have a dog if he would pay for it himself.

"The town frowned on it," recalled his wife, Marlene. "They couldn't justify the need for the expense." A selectman named Arthur Clark "went to bat for my husband, trying to get the town to subsidize the cost of the dog," she said.

But Bart absorbed the $1,200 cost, purchasing a German shepherd from a Wrentham-based trainer named Jack Crowley. "Cocoa," as the K9 came to be called, joined Winn at his home on North Main Street with Marlene, five kids, and a menagerie of animals that included a horse, goats and turtles.

Marlene, who waitressed at the Cleaver's (now the Red Lion Inn), said the cost was a fortune back then, especially to an officer supporting a family of seven on a policeman's salary. But Bart had brought the idea up to Marlene, who encouraged him to pursue it.

"I thought it was a great idea," she said. "Bart was way ahead of his time."

Their son Paul, who contacted the Cohasset Mariner with the story of Cocoa, agreed.

Bart "put so much personal effort into making it happen," Paul said of the K9 program. "That's the kind of guy Dad was. He didn't care about the cost."

"We really thought it was going to take off," said Marlene of the program, adding that the mentality back then was simply "different."

The Winn family remembers having Cocoa at home for around eight years. The dog was relieved from police work and sold to a private security company.

"He didn't retire but changed careers," said Marlene. Giving up the dog, which had become a family pet, "was an emotional thing."

Retired Cohasset police officer Brian Cogill worked with Officer Winn back in the '70s during the six or so years he remembers Cocoa being around.

"We didn't use him much," Cogill said of the dog. "It was a different world."

Cogill seemed to recall the K9 program ending after the dog died or retired; a new dog was not brought in simply because the town didn't seem to need one.

Former Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan also had few interactions with the police dog. He joined the force in '74 and recalled seeing Cocoa go around with Bart. He also remembered that Cocoa did not get along with the chief Randolph Feola's Chihuahua; also, that the K9 officer liked to "jokingly" scare the other officers with the dog, commanding him to growl and bare his teeth.

Paul recalled his father having the dog "practice" on him and his four siblings, too.

"He would take us up to Whitney Woods, let Cocoa sniff our hats and mittens, and give us 20 minutes to run into the woods as fast as we could," Paul said. "We thought, 'There's no way he's gonna find us,'" but the dog always did. "I'd come out with my hands up!"

Paul said that Cocoa "could be as tame as a housedog." Then Bart would put a silver collar on Cocoa, give him his special command – "Time to go to work" – and the change in the dog's demeanor "was drastic — like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

With his teeth bared and his ears up, "Cocoa was serious business," said Paul.

But for all of the dog's bravado, the Winn kids were not afraid of him.

"He had a friendly side," Paul remembered.

Marlene added that the dog spent much of his time in a cage, and that Bart was the only one who ever let him out.

"I was cautious [with Cocoa], because I knew of his capabilities," Paul said.

"He definitely underwent a change in personality," Marlene said of when Cocoa was given his commands. "But Cocoa was a creature of habit, and knew when it was time to go work."

Neither Paul nor Marlene recalled a particular instance when Cocoa had to "go to work" for Cohasset, apart from when the Cohasset P.D. loaned the dog to other towns "on an as-needed basis." The next nearest town that had a K9 back then was Quincy, according to Marlene.

Cogill and Noonan couldn't remember a specific instance, either, though both officers acknowledged that it was a long time ago. Cocoa's prime was before his time, said Noonan, who added that many of the officers who were active then are gone today.

But Noonan supported the K9 then and continues to do so today, and has contributed to the current K9 fundraising program.

"I'm personally a big advocate of the dogs — they are a tremendous help," said Noonan. "It's a nice asset for the department to have; I definitely think it will be an asset to the town."

Noonan added that a K9 is more of a need today.

"Cohasset hasn't grown tremendously in size over time, but the amount of activity has," the former Chief said. "When you're waiting on a dog from another town, people are deployed all over the place trying to block perimeters; it's time-consuming."

After sharing a home with Cocoa, both Marlene and Paul Winn are happy that after many years, Cohasset finally has a new K9.

"I'm glad to have another one," said Paul.

"I think it's wonderful," said Marlene, who would like to meet "the new K9 and his master," K9 Officer Patrick Reardon. "It's forward-thinking, given the times."

Marlene added that she believes "it's a sign of the times" that the K9 program is moving forward now, rather than back in the '60s and '70s.

"I don't think the exposure was what it is today," she said, explaining that folks didn't think a K9 was needed "in a quiet bedroom community."

Now, said Paul, Cohasset "has come full-circle, from one person driving the crusade to many citizens pulling for it."

Paul hopes to honor both his father and Cocoa by having their portrait displayed in the police station.

the Fore River channel.

At the Aug. 16 selectmen meeting, Weymouth Town Councilor Victor Pap III and Gary Peters of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association presented selectmen with information on the bridge's construction. The topic came up again during the Sept. 13 meeting, where the selectmen discussed whether or not to sign on with the Neighborhood Association's request. Selectman Leland Jenkins wanted to hear from a representative from the Coast Guard to learn their side of story before the selectmen make a decision.

Jennifer Oram, assistant to the Town Manager, conducted initial research and spoke with Peters, and was able to locate someone from the Coast Guard who handles the subject. Oram told the board that she had yet to hear back from the representative, but will ask him to attend the Oct. 4 board meeting.

In the meantime, Selectman Kennedy has drafted a letter on behalf of the board indicating their support of the bascule bridge design. The letter was presented to the board during the Sept. 27 meeting.

"The Fore River Bridge is a critical gateway to the South Shore and has tremendous impact on the South Shore's economic development plans," Kennedy wrote. "It is imperative that the new bridge enhance the flow of traffic along Route 3A to strengthen ongoing economic development plans."

"There are two choices," Peters summed it up in a phone interview last month. "Big, slow and ugly or small, fast and beautiful. It's just that simple."

Fore River Bridge: Background

The bridge, located in Quincy, is a major gateway to the South Shore, and its design will impact Cohasset commuters. According to the MassDOT website (massdot.state.ma.us), based on 2009 traffic counts, 30,000 vehicles cross the bridge each weekday. When the bridge is raised to allow ships to pass, traffic screeches to a halt.

MassDOT details two potential designs — a 270-foot-tall vertical-lift bridge or a bascule (drawbridge) structure. The U.S. Coast Guard favors a vertical-lift bridge, which will allow for a wider channel so larger ships can pass through. The river's current 175-foot channel width would be increased to up to 250 feet.

The current bridge is a $60 million temporary moveable span bridge built in 2004. The permanent structure is expected to be complete by 2016 or 2020.

Thirteen towns are members of the South Shore Coalition, a subdivision of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council representing the geographic area of the Fore River: Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth. The Coalition is advocating for the bascule bridge design.

NEWS ALERT

Mosquito Control issues advisory

At the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project it is understood that the "psychological" end of summer has arrived for many people, Labor Day has passed, students are back in school and many people are pulling boats from their moorings, etc. However, the mosquitoes are not yet ready to leave people alone. They will continue their search for blood meals until the first hard frost, which is when temperatures fall below 28° Fahrenheit for a few hours.

Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project urges people to continue to take precautions by draining standing water on their property, including old tires; limiting exposure at times when mosquitoes are most active, dawn and dusk; by using EPA approved repellants, and to consider wearing clothing that will reduce the potential for being bitten by a mosquito.

Make Your Weight Loss PERMANENT!

By Brian Cook

Consider the pounds you've lost each year when you "go on a diet"... have some or all of them crept back? Learn how to get a handle on your weight loss efforts so that you don't experience that emotional, tumultuous roller coaster of weight loss and weight gain.

Consistency and commitment to exercise and healthy nutrition are key factors in long term weight management. You can't "diet" forever because going hungry is not sustainable and excessive exercise to "fix" over-eating results in fatigue, injury and discouragement.

Adopting a workout routine that is streamlined, convenient and integrates both strength training and cardiovascular training is optimal for long-term success. Practicing nutrition and eating behaviors that include a focus on natural foods, variety and personal enjoyment will allow your body to get the fuel it needs while not feeling deprived.

Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff holds clients accountable with a scheduled workout system. Our comprehensive body transformation program is rounded out with cardiovascular training, strength training and supportive nutrition to help you meet your goal.

For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com

Client Laura Stephens says, "I have no idea how many hundreds of pounds I've lost and gained over the years. Every spring I lose 10-15 lbs., feel really good about it - only to gain it back by next spring. This year I wanted a lifestyle change, not just a temporary fix and GISFW supports that! There is a wonderful sense of community, input on nutrition and a trainer who pushes you to be stronger than you think you are and to do more than you think you can! This is 25 lbs that I never intend to see again!"

Explorers: on the scene with Cohasset Police

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

With help from Sgt. Jeffrey Treanor, Police Explorer Aaron Bates gets dressed up in the "bite suit" at a K9 demonstration at CMHS in June.

Cohasset's police explorers program is only around two years old, but it's already received some top honors in town.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin recently recognized the troop of volunteer kids, which has 17 members from ages 14 to 21, thanking them for their assistance during and after Tropical Storm Irene. Several explorers were side by side with police officers throughout the event.

"We had four to five of them working during Irene, putting in 10 to 12 hour shifts," said Police Chief Mark DeLuca, adding, "They're all volunteers."

The explorers worked alongside the police and DPW, putting up barricades and cones, ringing doorbells, handing out bags of ice and helping with trash removal. The kids also worked at the Deer Hill School, giving out ice, and at the Senior Center's makeshift cell phone charging station.

"We have the greatest bunch of kids," said DeLuca. "Every officer in the department embraces the fact that they're there, and appreciates them being there."

The explorers appreciate being there as well.

"We loved it," said explorer Christian Cunnie, 14, of working with the officers during the storm. "I would rather do that than sit at home."

Cunnie, one of the youngest explorers, is co-captain of the group, along with Aaron Blake, 18, who promoted Cunnie after he took charge during this year's Cohasset Day. Cunnie acted as a leader in Blake's stead, who couldn't be there that day.

"He thought I did a good job," said Cunnie.

The explorers regularly help out during community events like Cohasset Day and the annual triathlon, doing everything from fingerprinting young kids in case they get separated from their parents, to working detail and helping direct traffic.

The program began two years ago, around when DeLuca became Chief. DeLuca talked to Jack Buckley, who teaches a criminal justice class at Cohasset High, about giving students the opportunity to learn about law enforcement and public safety while experiencing it firsthand.

"It was a no-brainer," he said of starting the program. "It's a great outreach tool for the kids of our community; it gives them the opportunity for them to get to know the police, and for the police to get to know them."

DeLuca "encouraged open communication between the citizens of Cohasset and the police," said Blake. "It's a good, wholesome community service program that allows kids to build a relationship with the local police department."

Dispatch officer Tom Wigmore and animal control officer Paul Murphy currently supervise the explorers. Lieutenant Bill Quigley kick-started the program by providing $1,000 to fund the explorers' matching polo shirts.

"That's how it started," said Blake. "We now have a total of 17 in the program, and we started with only three."

Through the program, Blake, Cunnie and the other explorers have gotten to go on four-hour police ridealongs a few times monthly, tour the South Bay House of Corrections and take a firearms safety course. If Blake's efforts pay off, the group will soon tour the Boston FBI headquarters.

Blake, as captain, is in charge of all field trip arrangements and grant writing on behalf of the group. Cunnie, as second in command, is responsible for all fundraising, scheduling meetings, and communicating with the supervisors, since Blake is busy with college. Blake is currently enrolled in the Harvard Extension School, studying criminology, and plans to go into federal law enforcement.

While Cunnie says he's "not planning to go into that field," he's only just starting high school and has plenty of time to decide what to study. He is thinking of going into event planning, and has logged plenty of hours helping out Bill Burnett with the Cohasset triathlon.

Both Blake and Cunnie hope to see more kids join the explorers.

"It gives kids an in-depth knowledge that most people wouldn't really have," said Blake.

Cunnie talked about little kids getting excited over the new K9 and police presence during Cohasset Day.

"Most kids don't know what the inside of a police car looks like," he said.

Both explorers encourage kids to join; the program is open to anyone from age 14 to 21. After 21, explorers can stay on in the program as advisors, if they choose.

To learn more about the police explorers, call the police station at 781-383-1212 and ask for Tom Wigmore, or email cohassetpoliceexplorers@gmail.com.

The experience of a lifetime

ASP looking for volunteers

Cohasset Appalachia Service Project, coordinated by Judy and Gary Ritts, is finalizing its volunteer roster for their 25th work-camp experience. Early next summer (June 23 - July 1), after a year of fund-raising and training events, the group will head to the Appalachian region of our country to work on houses of those less fortunate.

The project's goal is to make those homes "drier, safer and warmer" for the families they serve.

Tomorrow, Oct.1st, at midnight, marks the deadline for realizing a $75 savings on the registration fee ($250 after Oct. 1). Forms are online at www.CohassetASP.org or by calling 781-383-0345 to arrange a time to pick up the information.

Also, their first fundraiser, "The Pumpkin Patch" (North Main Street, entrance of Wheelwright Park) opens next Saturday, Oct. 8th and runs daily, 10 a.m. – 7 p.m., through Oct. 31.

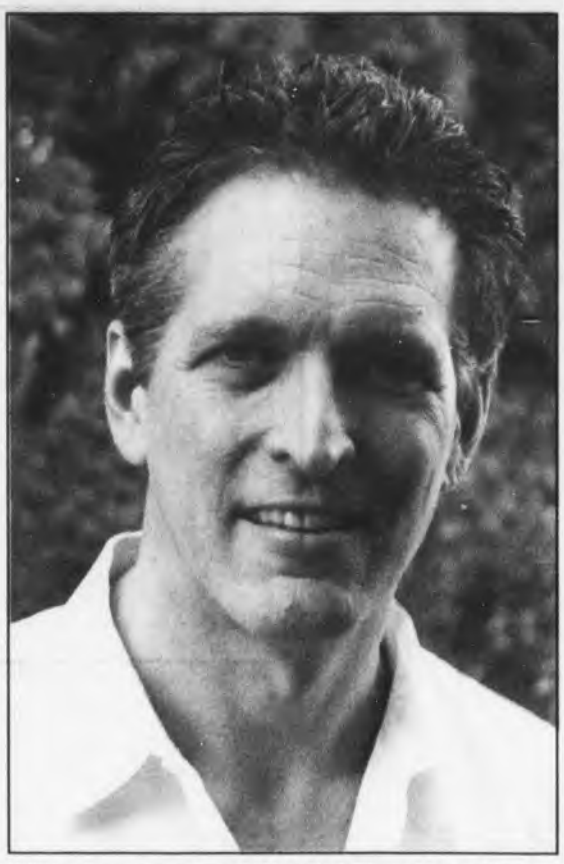
William Powers kicks off 'Sunday AuthorTalks'

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Does that "ping" get you out of bed in the middle of the night to check e-mail? Do your children text while talking with you? If ever there was a right time to confront the impact of the digital age on our lives, it's now.

William Powers, author of "New York Times" bestselling book "Hamlet's Blackberry," will kick off "Sunday AuthorTalks" at the Cohasset Library on Sunday, Oct. 2, at 4 p.m. In this entertaining and informative work, Powers sets out to solve the conundrum at the heart of our modern culture: how to enjoy the many benefits of digital technologies without being shackled to them.



His book—short, yet provocative—is about the influence that digital devices have on our relationships and on our abilities to reflect, focus, create, and problem solve. His words are sobering.

He shows how thinkers, from Socrates to McLuhan, have recognized the dangers of being hyper-connected and have strived to find various ways to turn away from voices of the crowd and ground themselves in their own creative and rational natures.

Powers reminds us that a society dominated by crowdthink cannot flourish—being continuously hooked up kills individualism and creativity. But he doesn't abandon us to his fears, rather, he offers ways we, too, can strike a smarter, healthier balance in our hyper-connected lives.

William Powers, a former staff writer for the "Washington Post," has written for a wide variety of publications, including the "Atlantic," the "New York Times," and "McSweeney's." An award-winning media critic, he lives on Cape Cod with his wife, author Martha Sherrill, and their son. This is his first book. Learn more at www.williampowers.com.

Following Powers' talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for conversation and book signing. "Hamlet's Blackberry" will be available for purchase.

Governor honors Cohasset resident

Dan Walsh retires after 38 years of state service

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Commonwealth's most recent chief security officer resides right here in Cohasset.

Dan Walsh, chief security officer of the state's Information Technology Division, was honored during a cyber security conference at MITRE Corporation in Bedford, during which Governor Patrick presented Walsh with a citation thanking him for his service. Walsh retired from his post on Thursday, Sept. 22.

Walsh is retiring from the public sector but is starting a new job in the private sector, bringing his expertise to the South Shore Hospital's information security program. Walsh has worked in the IT field since 1988, and became CSO for the state three years ago.

"I was really honored by the governor and his remarks," Walsh said. "It was a nice surprise.

"I have enjoyed my work with the state in the information technology department," Walsh continued. He explained that Massachusetts is one of the top states when it comes to information security, with "some of the most aggressive initiatives to protect the information of its constituents."

The Commonwealth's IT Division supports over 150 state agencies. As CSO, Walsh was responsible for protecting all the information systems, running day-to-day security and firewalls, in the various state agencies.

"It's a very important role," said chief information officer John Letchford, Walsh's supervisor

Walsh said he was honored to be part the state's IT department.

"It's been a terrific experience," he said. "I was fortunate to get the opportunity to participate in it."

Walsh also praised his supervisor, calling him "a great guy and great leader."

Letchford echoed the sentiment, saying that finding someone to replace Walsh as CSO will be "difficult."

"We won't find someone to fill those shoes," Letchford said, "but we'll do what we can.

"Summarizing Dan's strengths, he was extremely professional and considerate," Letchford continued, "and is renowned by many as a subject matter expert. He has a great attitude and is honest and direct... He made huge contributions in taking steps to protect the information of constituents in the Commonwealth."

Letchford called Walsh's retiring "a big loss for the state."

Walsh "started working right after the Bruins won their last championship," said Letchford, saying that perhaps, since the team won again this year, it was a sign that it was time to retire.

Although Walsh is leaving state service, he is looking forward to his new role with South Shore Hospital.

In the business world, Walsh explained, "they say you need business-smart IT people, and IT-smart business people. We need more of the latter, and I hope I'm able to bring some of that [to the South Shore Hospital."

PETITIONERS

have term lengths for members.

Carlson cited Mass. General Law chapter 40, section 8C, which states that conservation commissions are to be appointed by board of selectmen in towns, and that any member of the commission may be removed for cause by the board following a public hearing.

Carlson maintained that the board could not undo the decision to appoint the new commissioners and then remove them without cause. It turns out that that's exactly what the petitioners are asking the new ConCom members to do.

"We continue to call on the new commissioners to step down and become associate members for the sake of town harmony," Kent read from a document the petitioners group emailed to the board on Monday. "The three deposed commissioners should then be re-appointed. In light of [veteran ConCom member Veneta] Mrs. Roebuck's comments at the meeting this week, it is very clear that Cohasset will suffer if we do not have highly experienced and knowledgeable individuals representing the town on this very important commission."

Kent went on to say that she supported Selectman Ted Carr's suggestion during the last board of selectmen meeting to appoint a governance committee to be tasked with looking into town commissions and boards and how they operate.

But the petitioners are also pushing for a second committee — an investigatory one comprised of seven members, none of whom are currently serving on any boards or commissions, to sift through all of the board's and ConCom's public records, including audio recordings, broadcasts, internal memorandums and emails. The group is asking for Town Meeting to allot $5,000 for the committee to hire a clerk to record all proceedings.

Carr bristled at this idea, as did most of the board, saying that, for one thing, it will be difficult to find seven impartial people to volunteer to serve on this committee. Most of the board seemed to prefer

"I think the best way to go forward is to find someone impartial — the AG and the ethics commission."

— Selectman Fred Koed

to send the matter straight to the Attorney General's office. Carr said that he didn't understand what this committee could hope to accomplish without the proper jurisdiction, which the AG has.

"That's what they do every day," he said.

Quigley agreed with Carr that the matter should be turned over to the AG.

"There are things that went on that need to see the light of day," Quigley said. "I believe there have been some elected officials who have engaged in politics of personal destruction — that's dangerous in a small town, where we all know one another."

Quigley added that, "If we had enough people to sit on that committee, their lives would be made miserable and reputations would be attacked."

Carlson also said that he was in favor of a formal investigation, and all for the involvement of the AG. "They have the resources," he said.

Selectman Fred Koed concurred with Carr and Carlson. "I think the best way to go forward is to find someone impartial — the AG and the ethics commission."

"It would be nice to get to root of it locally," said Selectman Leland Jenkins, "but we know the AG can get to the bottom of it."

Kent continued to argue her point to the board: she didn't feel that bringing the AG in was necessary if there are citizens willing to donate their time to the investigation.

"Some people are willing to do it to clear the air," Kent said. She also felt that taking the matter to the AG implied that some illegal wrongdoing occurred, and that the petitioners are trying to get the board in trouble.

"It's not a witch hunt," Kent said. "We're not looking for someone to be guilty; we're just looking at the process and how we got to this place to prevent it from happening in the future."

Carr countered that the petitioners are suggesting that some wrongdoing occurred — by signing a petition in the first place.

Adele Janssens spoke up to express her confusion over what, exactly, the petitioners wanted.

"They want an investigation, but before that's even done, they're recommending the three new commissioners be replaced?" Janssens questioned. "What if, during the investigation, something is found out about the three [unseated] commissioners" revealing the ConCom, perhaps, violated open meeting law. "Would they still want the three commissioners to be replaced?"

The petitioners group remained undeterred in their mission.

"What's wrong with shining a light?" Kent asked the board. "We need to bifurcate with a governance committee."

Agnes McCann and Tom Callahan, both attorneys who signed the petition, also expressed their desire to see the entire matter undergo formal investigation. They both also drew comparisons between this event and political shakeups including the Great Depression and 9/11 (McCann), as well as apartheid (Callahan).

"When there's an event so distracting, so disturbing," said McCann, "we need to know all the facts, look into what happened and fix it to prevent it for the future."

Carr said he would notify the Attorney General, but Quigley said that she thought the petitioners ought to do it. The two agreed that they would each contact the AG office separately.

"I have them on speed dial," Quigley said.

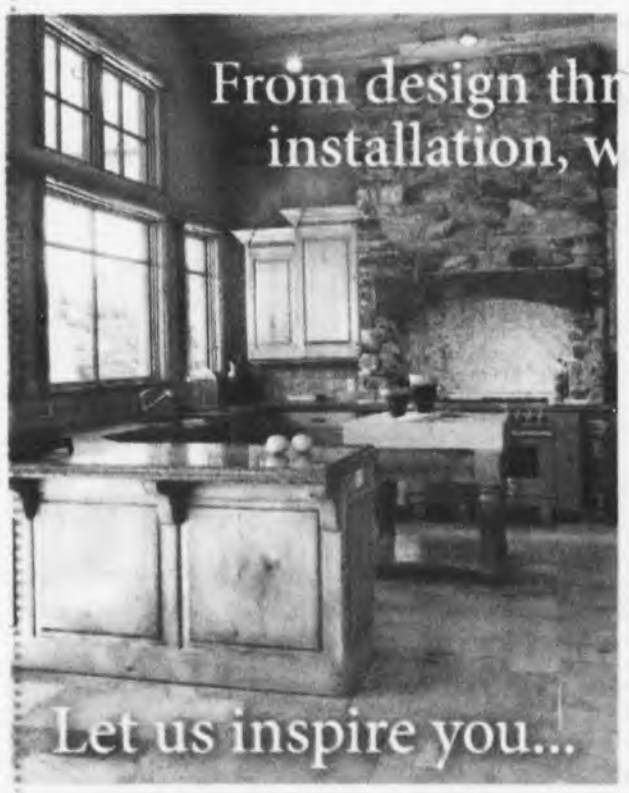
Cohasset Family Chiropractic gives back to food pantry

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Throughout the month of October, patients of Cohasset Family Chiropractic have a chance to help the community while taking care of themselves.

The relatively new practice, which opened its doors in February of this year, is offering patients a comprehensive initial evaluation (valued at $115) for $35 worth of non-perishable groceries to be donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Dr. Lisa Lewis, who lives in Scituate and had a practice there before setting up shop in Cohasset, said she was looking for a non-profit to support and approached the food pantry. She hopes this "win-win" fundraiser will help raise awareness.



"People don't get that there's a food pantry in Cohasset," nor "that there are people in need in this town," Dr. Lewis said.

While Lewis said that her new business isn't booming – yet – she hopes to offer the food pantry more support as her practice grows. For now, "anything helps."

As she brings her chiropractic services to Cohasset, Lewis hopes to serve the community as a whole.

"Part of doing business in a community is giving back to the community," said Lewis. "I hope to immerse myself in Cohasset."

Cohasset Family Chiropractic is located at 814 Chief Justice Cushing Highway/Route 3A. For more information or to schedule an appointment, call 781-923-1226 or visit www.cohassetfamilychiro.com.

OUR VIEW

Cocoa was the first

This week we found out that Cohasset Police had a K-9 unit about 40 years ago.

The news brought a collective smile to our faces – as the story harks back to a different time when the Chief of Police was Randolph A. Feola. Feola was chief from 1967 to 1980. He died in 1999. The Cohasset Mariner debuted in 1978 – just two years before Feola retired. Although, we were not publishing during the bulk of Feola's career – stories about him were legendary. Simply put: he was an old-time chief in a far simpler time.

Back in the late 1960s, then Officer Bart Winn was able to obtain a Cohasset police dog named Cocoa. Unfortunately, Cocoa did not get along with Chief Feola's Chihuahua. Be sure to read Erin Dale's report this week for the full story!

Now we turn the clock ahead to Erik. At the request of selectmen, Town Manager Mike Coughlin prepared a five-year outlook for the town's new K-9 unit. The good news is that about $35,000 in money, equipment and services have been donated. A non-profit has also been set up to cover the ongoing costs.

We have made no secret about our advocacy for the K-9 program in Cohasset. Public safety is paramount and police dogs have proven their worth in that area time and time again.

Community outreach and public relations are also critical in this day and time. "Community policing" which came into being in the 1990s has changed the face of police departments. While police must deal with crime — police work is no longer viewed as highly negative – but a positive partnership between police and the community, whether through a police explorer program, bicycle patrols, pill collection, safety-seat installation and so on.

The K-9 adds to the very fabric of that philosophy. Last week a photo in the Around Town column said it all. A young boy in the Cohasset Day Decorated Bicycle Parade was dressed as a police officer and in his red wagon being pulled behind his bike was a stuffed animal (dog) dressed as Erik the new K-9.

Although Erik will be called on to do some tough assignments – he has already, clearly earned a place in the hearts of Cohasset children. That's priceless.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A misleading caption

A recent caption to the picture on the front page of the Mariner (Sept. 16) regarding the Cat Dam hearing gave a misleading impression. None of the previous scientific studies involving months of sampling done over many years have been disproved based on new original field research.

All of the seven environmental agencies that independently reviewed the schedule NOI developed by the privately hired E20 consultants recommended not to implement their schedule for the operation of Cat Dam. Instead they commented that both the current schedule and the E20 proposed schedule are inadequate to protect the environment. The current schedule keeps the gates closed 90 percent of the time during the spring, summer, and fall and the privately proposed E20 schedule would keep the gates closed for 87 percent of the time during the same period.

Angel Food Project bids adieu

Sadly, it's time to say goodbye to The Angel Food Project.

Cohasset citizens may not be aware of the wonderful service The Angel Food Project has provided to our seniors for the last six years. On a weekly basis they have planned, purchased and prepared meals at the Center for Elder Affairs. As word spread about the terrific fresh, delicious, (and sometimes gourmet) meals being served every Wednesday, the number of seniors attending lunch swelled from under 10 diners to often as many as 36, filling all the tables in the dining room. There were Halloween lunches, Mother's Day Teas, holiday meals and much more. People started dressing up a little more for lunch; and the CEA began bringing in programs on Wednesdays for their larger audience.

In the winter of 2005, this "little project" was born out of a desire to contribute something meaningful to the community, as well as to fill a need faced by cutbacks. Fast forward to the fall of 2011 and much has changed. Volunteers who had children in elementary school are now taking those same kids to college. Careers have changed, life situations require us to move on. The volunteers have been loyal, generous in spirit, and have given much of their time. As facilitator of the project, I would like to thank each and every one individually. And I know I speak for the seniors who have grown so fond of our staff when I say, you really are "angels." Mary Cowan, Joanne Pecca, Bernadette Crawford, Polly Pyne, Janine Culhane, Susan Reagan, Connie Darcy, Eileen Rutledge, Pat Hague, Susan Sardina, Ann Helbock, Jan Todd, Teresa Littauer, Sarah Davis, Connie Noon, Marianne Lynner and Delores Roy.

Thanks also to the amazing staff of the Cohasset Elder Affairs who work tirelessly to enrich the lives of our senior citizens and have become friends to us all. It's been a privilege to give service and respect to the senior community of Cohasset.

Patty Johnson, 147 Beechwood St.

Faced with overdue changes

Cohasset should appreciate the perceptive and knowledgeable statement by Selectman Paul Carlson published in the Mariner of Sept 23, explaining the reason for the recent changes to the Conservation Commission. Observant readers will grasp that the Board of Selectmen had good reasons for their action, even though Carlson avoided harsh criticism. It is to be hoped that the foolish and uninformed noisemakers will not exacerbate the uncomfortable situation of the commissioners that were replaced. Uncomfortable also for the Selectmen who had to choose between making a necessary correction or avoiding their responsibility. Sadly, only three of the five Selectmen risked an unpopular decision, but the Town owes thanks to Selectmen Carlson, Koed and Jenkins who stepped up to the plate.

Granted, the sequence of events relating to the replacement was unfortunate (some say brutal), but the Selectmen were unexpectedly faced with an opportunity to make overdue changes. The majority chose to do their duty.

Idealism and defense of fairness is fine, and is facilitated by our democratic system, but it needs to be tempered by intelligent and knowledgeable consideration of why a situation has developed. Otherwise the product is hot air that may do more harm than good. Despite the emotional and thoughtless display at the hearing on Sept. 20, we should appreciate the freedom we have to express ourselves. Countless millions yearn for that freedom. All the more reason to use it intelligently and responsibly.

R. Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road

COMMENTARY

Balancing people's interests with the law

DEBBIE COOK

We listened to both sides, and did not engage in dialogue with either. That would not have been appropriate.

In last week's Mariner, Selectman Paul Carlson stated why he voted not to reappoint the three Conservation Commissioners, of which I am one. He said that property owners (read the Environmental 20 — a group of abutters on Inner Little Harbor) stated their concerns to the Conservation Commission, and his perception was that their viewpoint was not heard or discussed. He said that was why we had to go.

I would like to remind him that the Conservation Commission is a regulatory body, with one primary responsibility — upholding the state Wetlands Protection Act and Cohasset's wetlands bylaws. We did indeed hear the E20. In fact, we gave them extensions to collect more information, and to present their case. We scheduled additional hearings so they could present new strategies and ideas.

However, besides the E20, there was another group of abutters who want a different outcome for the operation of Cat Dam. They say they are impacted by algae and are concerned about the eutrophication of Inner Little Harbor due to high temperatures, low oxygen and low salinity, because Inner Little Harbor doesn't flush enough. They also were heard, and I am proud to say we treated them exactly the same as the E20.

Regulatory boards do not engage in discussions with one group over another. They take in the data and then they make a decision based on the laws they swear to uphold — in this case the Wetlands Protection Act — and, always, always the interests of the parties involved. I think Selectman Carlson forgot there were other parties involved than just the E20. They had interests and rights to be heard too. We listened to both sides, and did not engage in dialogue with either. That would not have been appropriate.

I have been on the Conservation Commission for nearly 20 years, facing many fractious hearings. It is a difficult job, because sometimes people don't get exactly what they want and they aren't always pleased. Being on a regulatory board certainly won't help you win a popularity contest. You do it because you believe in the importance of clean water (health board), protecting flood plains and upholding the zoning bylaw (Zoning Board of Appeals), and protecting wetlands and waterbodies (ConCom).

You listen, take in the facts, deliberate with your fellow commissioners, and you try to work out a solution that balances people's interests with the law, recognizing that compliance with the law is paramount. That is the way regulatory bodies have always worked and always should work. In fact, fairness, transparency and adherence to the law, whether it be the Open Meeting Law or the Wetlands Protection Act is equally as important for selectmen as it is for the Conservation Commission and every other board in town. Everyone should be heard and every viewpoint should be considered, and above all the laws should be upheld.

Debbie Cook lives at 281 King Street.

MAKING TRACKS

John Stanbrook is financial quarterback

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Cohasset's new quarterback — We have mentioned that there organizational changes underway in Town Hall. The main impetus for these changes comes from the new Town Manager who is responding to the recent audit that was done at Town Hall resulting from the Water Department financial issues. If you remember, the Water Department spent monies that could not be covered by their available revenue stream. Of course the auditor was very critical of the Town for having done this. The Commonwealth has also become vitally aware of the situation and is looking at Cohasset very carefully. And, the Town had to provide funds from our accounts at Town Meeting to make up this difference in the Water Department. This then drained the Town's coffers and makes it difficult for us to finance the things that need to be done in the Town.

Consequently, as Mike Coughlin the Town Manager aptly states, John Stanbrook, our new Director of Finance, must be the quarterback for all that affects our financial health. Of course, almost every action in Town Hall has financial ramifications. These must be properly accounted for so that we know where we are financially. The first step implemented was a new financial software system. The old system was antiquated and was a major contributing factor to our problems. The new system, when fully implemented will let us see our financial status at any time, accurately.

A very important change was actually begun by our Interim Town Manager, Steve Lombard before Mike Coughlin arrived. This was the implementation of a purchase order (PO) system, which was begun as a paper system and will be totally computer based shortly with the new software. What is a PO system? The PO system assures that all expenditures are properly authorized before they are initiated and an account identified to pay the bill when it arrives. The prior totally manual system was literally overwhelmed with a huge stream of bills that had to be properly accounted for as a result of the $13 million Little Harbor Water and Sewer Project. This was a particularly difficult project from an accounting standpoint because the contractor invoices had to be divided up and charged to multiple accounts for Water, Sewer, and Drainage portions of the project. The paperwork was immense. And all of this on top of the "normal" town accounting work flow with no additional personnel resources. Something had to give, and it did. The result of the PO computer-based system is that there will be no expenditures made without available funds to pay for them. That puts one major auditor finding to bed.

A Water Department caution —The Water Department has been in most of your minds, especially when you get your water bill. But, we would like to focus on an issue rather than finance this week. You may remember that recently, some unknown person threw an unknown item into Hingham's water supply, Accord Pond. In these days of uncertainty and sensitivity to possible terrorist actions, Aquarian Water took the step of closing the pond until they could be certain that the water supply was safe. As you might imagine, the Cohasset Water Department is on the constant lookout for actions that might affect its water sources. That's why there are prohibitions against certain actions on and around them. For example, see the Lily pond sign in the photo below.

You will notice that the sign prohibits motorized boats from using the pond. Why do you suppose that prohibition exists? If gasoline or oil were spilled into the pond it would be serious and the plant might need to be shut down. As a point of information, the processes that are used to prepare our water for consumption were not principally designed to remove hydrocarbons, thus have minimal ability to remove gas or oil from the water. That's why it would be serious. For the same reasons gasoline powered augers for ice fishing are not allowed. People have been seen on the pond in the winter with gasoline-powered augers for ice fishing. For similar reasons, portable electrical devices are not allowed due to the potential hazards that batteries can cause.

Similar precautions should be kept in mind for other sources such as the Ellms Meadow well field or the Aaron River Reservoir that feeds Lily Pond. W all need to be vigilant around all of Cohasset's precious water resources. If you see something suspicious report it to the Police Department.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

'Greatest German of all time'

MARY KENNEDY

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, 1749-1821, part 2

That I am the only person in this century who has the right insight into the difficult science of colors, that is what I am rather proud of, and that is what gives me the feeling that I have outstripped many.

Goethe, novelist, poet, and playwright, considered his 1400-page treatise "Theory of Colors," published in 1810, his most important work. He did write, however, that much time would pass before it would be understood and accepted by scientists. He also believed that his theory would "rest in a dormant state until the year 2000."

Until Goethe, no one had even questioned the validity of Isaac Newton's ideas – published a century earlier – about light and color. Always observing nature with the eye of an artist (in his youth, he had seriously considered devoting his life to art), Goethe rejected Newton's mathematical approach in the treatment of color, arguing that light, shade and color are associated with emotional experience. Scientists today agree that elements of both theories are correct.

Even as he spent all of his adult life revising and perfecting his monumental work, Faust, (called the greatest long poem of modern European literature), Goethe was deeply involved in studies of natural science. As part of his fascination with mineralogy, he collected rocks – more than 17,000 samples, making up the largest private collection in all of Europe. An accomplished botanist, he helped found the field of comparative anatomy. In his "slim pamphlet" "The Metamorphosis of Plants," Goethe coined the term "morphology." His ideas influenced 19th century naturalists in developing this science that deals with the forms and structure of animals and plants.

He never stopped writing, exploring, stretching the boundaries of thought and accepted theories in a multitude of subjects.

In 1784, he proved "once and for all" the existence of the intermaxillary bone in the human jaw. In his day, the belief was that the bone existed only in animals, thus proving an essential difference between man and beast. Religious doctrine insisted that man was completely separate from the animal kingdom. During his research, he secretly imported an elephant's skull, hiding it in a locked chest – "otherwise people may think I am crazy." The discovery of this "little bone" as he called it, later contributed to Darwin's theories on evolution, also rejected by religious authorities decades later.

Growing older, Goethe remained active, joked about death, and at age 75, hearing that a friend his age had died, wrote scornfully: "75! What fools men are that they have not the courage to live longer than that!" (This at a time when the average length of a lifetime was 50 years.) He never stopped writing, exploring, stretching the boundaries of thought and accepted theories in a multitude of subjects. In truth, as a later poet noted, "he could not stop for death."

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe was deeply involved in studies of natural science. COURTESY

In March, 1832, waiting impatiently for spring, Goethe caught a cold, took to his bed, and was tenderly cared for by his daughter-in-law Ottilie. He refused medication, saying that the open air would soon restore him. Someone later wrote that just before he died, he said to a servant standing by the shuttered window, "More light, please."

On Aug. 28, 2011, in a poll conducted by a newspaper in Frankfurt, Germany, Goethe was voted the greatest German of all time. (The runners-up were Albert Einstein and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.)

FOR THE RECORD

This is not only a test

GREGORY MATHIS

A discussion during a recent staff meeting about how we were going report on the latest round of MCAS scores got interesting. It always gets interesting when you put this many numbers, facts and figures in front of journalists.

The fact is the results tell only part of the MCAS story. To get beyond the numbers to try to provide some real perspective as to what is or isn't happening in a particular classroom or school is far more challenging, and really what's at the core of the Education Reform Act of 1993.

Part of the reason is in the evolution of MCAS. In the beginning it was easier to compare and contrast and track trends. Students took the test in fourth, eighth and 10th grades. Now MCAS is administered in every grade up to 10th grade, except one, two and nine. To look back over the years wouldn't just be comparing apples to oranges, but grapes, bananas and kiwi as well.

My idea to get a better understanding of impact of the many sides of MCAS would be to get a student, teacher, parent, school administrator and politician in one room. Sounds like the beginning of a good joke, but standardized testing and its implications aren't a joke.

From the student's perspective, it would be telling to follow his or her progression through each grade and each round of MCAS, leading up to graduation. A lot has been made about the pressure and anxiety associated with the high stakes test, so asking about that could provide some insight.

We know teachers have a lot to say about MCAS. If we could get them to speak frankly would they tell us they spend too much of their classroom time teaching to the test? Or maybe they would tell us MCAS has actually provided structure and standardization to the curriculum and it has been an effective teaching tool.

Parents are mostly concerned about their own child. If their child does well, there are very few issues. Pressure and anxiety mount if their student struggles. If students are being taught to perform well on standardized tests, do parents feel they are being cheated out of a greater educational experience?

It's hard to get much more than hyperbole and spin from school administrators. They may tell you how well their school or district did, but you'll hardly ever get a straight answer if the results aren't up to par.

And then there is the question of what motivates politicians in all of this. It was politicians who established the Education Reform Act of 1993, as well as No Child Left Behind and the Race To The Top at the federal level. There is a lot of federal grant money at stake for states and substantial money being made and spent as a result of administering MCAS and that's always motivation for politicians to get involved.

I think most parents are mostly concerned about how their own children do, and beyond that there's interest in how their school is doing versus other schools in town, and where the district ranks in the region and the state.

Educators hate the rankings, but the media loves it, mostly because it's a number we can understand.

SENIOR SCENE

Fall season fun picking up

LOUISE SMULLEN

A large crowd gathered for the end of summer annual picnic hosted by Michelle and Michael Hubley of Red Fox Farm. While the appetizers were being passed around Marjie Murphy led a game of human Scrabble.

Father Mulvehill of St. Anthony's and the Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational served up the first course of clam chowder. While dessert was being served song sheets were passed out, and we all sang as Gary Ritts accompanied the singers on the keyboard. Prizes were awarded for guessing the correct weight of a huge pumpkin and for the horse-drop contest. It was a delightful way to end the summer activities.

The Monday morning Cohasset Café has opened at the Lightkeepers. Opening day saw a large group enjoying coffee, tasty treats and greeting friends and newcomers. It's a pleasant way to begin the week. All are welcome.

The fall season activities at the Center have begun. Line dancing has started up on Tuesdays at 1:30, as have the weekly seminars. The first presenter was Vic Campbell of the Quincy Historical Society. He related the history of the Granite Railway. It was the first commercial railway in the U.S. It was built to haul granite blocks from the quarries in Quincy, Massachusetts, to the Neponset River where they were shipped to Charlestown for use in building the Bunker Hill monument.

We were pleased to hear the Rev. Margot Critchfield of St. Stephen's Church. She spoke about spiritual growth as we age, and about forgiveness and healing.

At another seminar the presenter was Patricia White, SSES Director of the Mass. Ombudsman Program. This consists of many individuals who drop in unannounced at nursing homes and other care-giving facilities. They talk to the residents and take note of diets, meds, condition of clothing and more. She advises anyone who visits a friend or loved ones in such a facility to do the same and to report anything that seems amiss.

Upcoming seminars are as follows: Oct. 5, Medicare update 2011; Oct. 12, Managing Your Blood Pressure; Oct. 19, Bingo with Prizes; and Oct. 26 My Friends is Sad. What can I Do?

Upcoming seminars are as follows: Oct. 5, Medicare update 2011; Oct. 12, Managing Your Blood Pressure; Oct. 19, Bingo with Prizes; and Oct. 26 My Friends is Sad. What can I Do?

The Oct. 5 evening seminar is cancelled. As of this date the November evening program is set for Nov. 1. Light supper will be served from 5:30 to 6 p.m. p.m., and the program is from 6 to 7 p.m. titled "Should I Stay or Go?" It is about downsizing, capital gains taxes, agencies to help with curb appeal and selling articles in your home. If you plan to be there for supper, make a reservation by calling 781-383-9112.

Our New England weather is living up to its reputation – cool enough to snuggle beneath an extra blanket one night, the next night only the need of a sheet and the fan turned on. Of course, we know the cold will arrive soon enough.

Water Commission deficit debated

Last week, town auditor Tony Roselli, along with town accountant John Stanbrook, reported a $350,000 deficit in the water department. This was news to Peter DeCaprio, chairman of the water commission, who said that this week was the first he'd ever heard of it.

DeCaprio appeared before the selectmen during the Sept. 27 meeting to present his take on the issue, providing figures to show that the department does not have an operational deficit.

DeCaprio said that any deficit is a collections matter, and that the commission is still waiting on unpaid bills, including one from the school department. During the Sept. 21 school committee meeting, the group said that based on what they learned from the Sept. 20 board of selectmen meeting, the water commission is not allowed to collect interdepartmental bills.

DeCaprio also said that, during interim Town Manager Steve Lombard's tenure, the town shorted the water commission $53,000.

"There's so much misinformation out there, I wanted to clear the air," DeCaprio said. "It's not an operational deficit but relates to receivables." DeCaprio added that he believes the commission is in good shape financially, was upset that the town auditor did not call him, and that he had to find out about the alleged deficit after last week's board meeting.

The Town Manager recently asserted his authority to jointly manage the water and sewer departments, and made his first appearance at a water commission on Wed., Sept 28.

Alt. energy and school board meet

The school committee and alternative energy committee came together on Wed. Sept. 28 during the AEC's first meeting since July 20. The two groups have met before to discuss installing solar panels on the roof of the middle-high school.

The school committee's liaisons to the AEC, vice chairman Jeanne Astino and school business manager Dave DeGennaro, presented the AEC with an RFP (request for proposals) for potential energy firms that could install the school's solar array.

The AEC members agreed to look over the RFP and give their recommendations for how to proceed. The group also discussed whether or not the school committee should prepare a warrant for special Town Meeting; the AEC recommended that the school committee do so, since the school will be leasing the roof to a private entity in order to install the array and negotiate purchasing the energy produced at a lower rate than the school currently pays.

The AEC also discussed drafting an RFP for their project to place a solar array on top of the town's landfill. Chairman Conrad Lagenhagen has been in talks with BrightFields, an energy consulting company, to have them conduct a feasibility study on the landfill to assess potential costs.

"I suggest we go to BrightFields for a feasibility study, then construct an RFP and identify a handful of prospects to send the RFP to," said Lagenhagen. "That's the next step on the project."

Committee member Marie Caristi-McDonald thanked the Cohasset Mariner during the meeting, saying that former reporter Nancy White was the impetus behind the two committees coming together.

South Shore Democrats Unity Party

South Shore Democrats and Independents are welcome to mix and mingle with like-minded locals and meet Democratic office holders, Senate primary and other candidates at the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's fourth annual Unity Party. Helene Lieb has agreed to host the Unity Party at her home at 18 Deep Run, Cohasset, from 7 to 9 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 1. There will be drinks and hors d'oeuvres, a silent auction, live music, conversation and some speeches.

Attendees will hear words of wisdom and inspiration from John Walsh, chairman of the Massachusetts Democratic Party, as well as some other elected officials. Congressman Garrett Bradley will be in attendance as well as Senate primary candidates and local candidates.

Suggested contributions are at several levels: $35, $75, $100 and $150. Checks payable to Cohasset Democratic Town Committee can be mailed to Peter Pescatore, Treasurer, 12 Lantern Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025. Tickets will also be sold at the door.

Call Kevin McCarthy, chairman of the CDTC, at 781-534-0509 for more information.

HEALTH NOTES

Singing to a healthier you

STEVE BOBO

At a conference of the Society for Public Health in London, Grenville Hancox, professor of music, described the change as "extraordinary" that can take place through singing together.

Other factors affecting Health A great variety of considerations affect an individual's health. We have all heard the continuing mantra: Eat foods with less fat; veggies; avoid sweets, get plenty of exercise, etc. But many other factors add to one's relationship between his health and way of life.

Singing & Health - Ever since the inauguration of the "blue-rinse brigade," a British concoction, choirs are certainly "on-trend." The Choir of the Year competition, the UK's largest amateur choral contest, last year saw entries increase by a third, while the TV show Glee has even made singing cool for teens and also, all-gay choirs; a cappella groups for doctors and choruses for lawyers. But while the feel-good effects of singing are well-documented, experts now believe that joining a choir could improve the symptoms of a range of health problems including Parkinson's, depression and lung disease. At a conference of the Society for Public Health in London, Grenville Hancox, professor of music, described the change as "extraordinary" that can take place through singing together. He told how he and colleagues witnessed people with respiratory problems learn to breathe more easily; those with depression — beat the "blues" and patients with Parkinson's disease "standing tall" and singing loudly. Nonetheless, Health Notes hopes the singing is on key.

Environmental Factors affect human health in important ways, both positive and negative. Positive environmental factors sustain health, and promoting them is preventive medicine. Others include: sources of good nutrition (farming: soil quality, water availability, biodiversity, genetically modified organisms. Healthy pursuits: hunting, fishing. Be careful when drinking, cooking; cleaning; observe sanitation rules. Air quality; ozone layer (protection from UV, cancers, etc); space for exercise and recreation; waste recycling and disposal all are important in maintaining good health.

Negative environmental factors include: Conditions favoring disease vectors; invasive biota (viruses, bacteria, etc), their hosts and vectors; Environmental Disruptions: floods, droughts, storms, fires, earthquakes, volcanoes; Air Quality: pollen and pollution leading to respiratory diseases or cancers; Water Quality: biotic and artificial contaminants; integrity of water transport and treatment; monitoring and management of municipal, agricultural, industrial outflows to the environment (gases, liquids, solid wastes);

Human changes of the environment often affect health; creating conditions that favor disease, disturb and release noxious levels of previously bound chemicals (e.g. mercury released becomes poison) or biota (e.g. methane released from thawed peat contributes to climate change); temporary, intense, life-threatening heat islands (e.g. urban heat waves ex-acerbated by climate change); Not to mention nuclear, biological or chemical warfare or terrorism;

Attitude about what we see and hear. Some think we watch too much TV. video and sound: both TV and cell; require a special format - (adjustable on Cellular as to color clarity, etc. though not on most TV's) Many elder people have a TV in more than one room and many use the cell only for emergencies; keeping it on their persons or in their car but not turned on. Picture size is vastly bigger on most TV's because of the exponential effect. We are now looking at ever smaller formats on cell phones, etc. It's difficult to know whether such changes have an impact on general health.

Detectable elements: Most trends of one kind or another have some effect on health. The mind is willing to accept that generally, uniformity is more attractive than irregularity; therefore, as you go on through life, it's OK to adjust as necessary. Change is generally good.

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote *President rarely votes

Volume 37 - Report No. 38 September 23, 2011

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on three roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

NEW TEACHERS PAY LESSER AMOUNT INTO RETIREMENT FUND (S 2010)

Senate 14-20, rejected an amendment that would reduce from 11 percent to 9 percent the portion of salary a newly hired teacher must pay into the retirement system in the first three years, at which point the teacher reaches professional teacher status, also known as tenure, and would pay the 11 percent.

Amendment supporters said the reduction would be an incentive for people to enter the teaching profession. They noted new teachers are paid a lot less than longtime ones and initially should not have to pay as much into the system.

Amendment opponents said the amendment is well-intentioned but only addresses a small part of a large problem. They argued the Senate must address the larger problem including the fact that the private sector pays more than the public sector. Others said this proposal would reduce the amount of money in the retirement fund to the detriment of all teachers.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment reducing a newly hired teacher's contribution from 11 percent to 9 percent. A "No" vote is against the reduction.)

TEACHERS AND UNION POSITIONS (S 2010)

Senate 34-0, approved an amendment that would provide that teachers who become part-time by taking a second job with their union still be credited with full-time service as a teacher for pension and benefits purposes. The teacher would be required to pay monthly into the retirement fund the amount he or she would have contributed had he or she been teaching full-time.

Amendment supporters said under current law, only teachers who stop teaching and take a full-time job with the union are eligible for the full-time credits and benefits for that time period. They argued teachers who teach part-time and work for the union should have the same opportunities as teachers who decide to work full-time for their union.

USE SURPLUS REVENUE FOR RETIREES (S 2010)

Senate 34-0, approved an amendment that would require when the state or local pension fund becomes solvent, any surplus be used for the benefit of the retirees.

Amendment supporters said this would ensure that any eventual surplus is not returned back to the state or local communities. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ALIMONY CHANGES (S 1989) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a bill making major changes in the state's alimony laws including allowing some alimony payments to be reduced, suspended or terminated upon the payer reaching the full age of retirement or the remarriage or cohabitation of the recipient.

It also bases the duration of payments on the number of years the couple was married. For marriages of five years or less, the maximum alimony term would be 50 percent of the number of the months of marriage; 5 to 10 years would be 60 percent; 10 to 15 years would be 70 percent; 15 to 20 years would be 80 percent; and more than 20 years would be up to the judge and could be mandated indefinitely.

Supporters said current alimony laws are outdated and don't make sense in today's society. They noted the proposal would encourage both parties to terminate their relationship upon divorce and live independently as soon as is practical. They argued that many unemployed husbands are burdened with unnecessary and unfair lifetime alimony payments they must come up with even if they are laid off.

WEST NILE VIRUS - The House gave initial approval to a bill requiring the commissioner of the Department of Public Health, when issuing public health warnings about the dangers to humans associated with the West Nile Virus, to include all known risks to pregnant women. LIMIT NEW DOCTORS' HOURS OF WORK (S 1142) - The Public Health Committee held a hearing on legislation that would create an Advisory Council for Resident-Physicians to study and make recommendations about limiting the work hours of resident-physicians in Massachusetts hospitals.

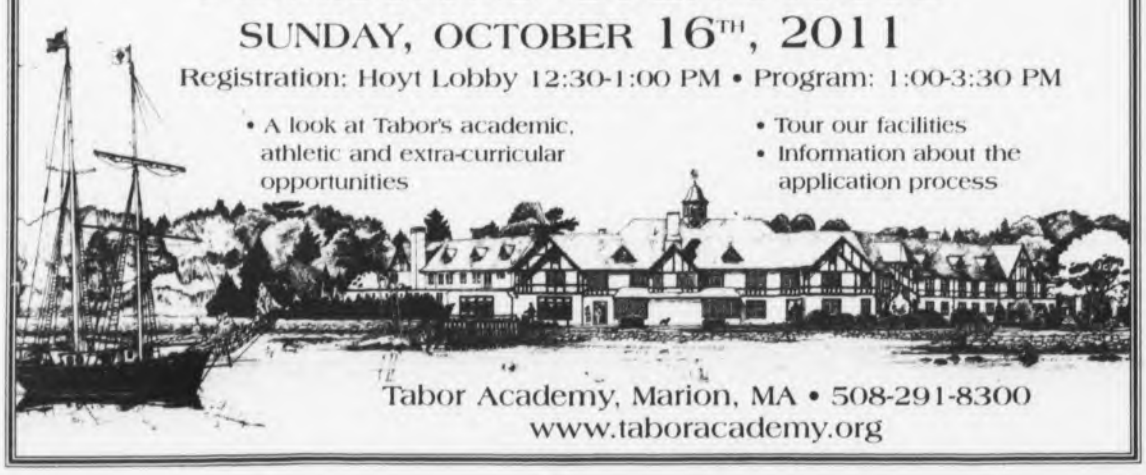
Supporters point to studies showing that overworked residents make major medical mistakes that cost lives.

Opponents say the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education Board of Directors already approved new regulations for residents based on "recommendations made by the Institute of Medicine in 2008 and evidence collected during a 16-month review of the scientific literature on sleep issues, patient safety and resident training."

MAKE SEX ED OPTIONAL IN SCHOOLS (H 155) - The Education Committee held a hearing on a measure that would mandate all sex education courses in local schools be offered on a strictly elective basis and require written parental permission in order for a student to participate. Current law allows schools to make sex education a part of the regular curriculum but permits parents to exempt their children with written notice to the principal.

The proposal would give parents five school days advance notice, an opportunity to review the materials used in the course and the option to ask teachers and administrators questions about the course.

Supporters said many parents are not involved enough in their child's education and would not know that they have the right to opt out of the sex education class.



Opponents said appropriate sex education is important and argued the current system is fair and works well.

COMMENTARY

ConCom was fair and equitable

MARGIE & STEVE BROWN

It was our experience that the Con Com – every one of its members – listened to the audience with objectivity and impartiality.

We believe the statements made by Koed, Carlson, and Jenkins about the "attitude" of the previous Conservation Commission (ConCom) are incorrect based on the following information. A review of the written and/or oral transcripts of the meetings should confirm the points made below.

Koed, Carlson, and Jenkins have claimed that prior to July 12th, the Con Com was "adversarial" to the citizens interested in the Cat Dam issue. Quite the opposite...the adversarial actions were exhibited by the members of the E20 at the Con Com hearings — not by the ConCom. For example, the behavior of some members of the E20 before the ConCom was so disrespectful that one of the E20's own members apparently resigned from the E20's executive committee in protest. More detail below.

The E20 was granted hours of speaking time and multiple extensions, postponements, and even a recess, which we will describe below.

Carlson has stated that the ConCom was not impartial, judicious, fair, or equitable in its treatment of the public. As members of the public who attended every Con Com hearing on Cat Dam, we heard no statement from members of the ConCom that could support Carlson's conclusions. Carlson should quote those statements from the public record that he thinks support his conclusion. Although Selectmen Carr and Kennedy sought out opinions from non E20 members, no such attempt to obtain views from both sides was made by Koed or Jenkins.

Koed has also complained that the ConCom did not notify the Board of Selectmen (BOS) early on that changing the Cat Dam schedule would require a Notice of Intent. He called it a "gotcha" moment. His comment is disingenuous – he was a member of the 2007 Board of Selectmen who ruled that the Con Com should not be involved in the Cat Dam proposals. See below for details.

ADVERSARIAL — An adversarial atmosphere was created by members of the E20. One of the most upsetting hearings was when one of the members of the E20 started to make personal attacks. The chairman, Dave Farrag, reminded him that it was inappropriate and asked him to refrain from making these comments. That member of the E20 rudely replied that he would not stop talking, and he continued his harassment. Shortly afterwards, another member of the E20 started along a similar vein. Despite these attacks, the ConCom remained patient and implacable.

FAIR and IMPARTIAL — During the Con Com hearings on the E20 Notice of Intent (NOI), the transcripts will demonstrate that E20 members, their hired consultants, and their attorney took the vast majority of the time available to express their views.

EQUITABLE — The ConCom allowed the E20 to extend the hearings at least twice. The ConCom granted one extension so that the E20 would have time to go to the BOS and request a change in the NOI. The E20 wanted to water down the NOI and remove the indication that it was a wetlands restoration project. Of course, the BOS granted the request. Another time the E20 asked for an extension in the earlier hearings because their lawyer wanted more time to review the material.

In addition to these extensions, the E20 was able to postpone hearings twice by obtaining emergency BOS meetings to ask for the postponements. The BOS had to ask for the postponement since only the "petitioner" or the Con Com can request a postponement The E20 had no problem getting emergency BOS meetings convened and gaining the BOS support for postponement.

When the Co Com chairman called for the vote to close the hearing, the E20 and their lawyer requested an unusual "recess" so that they could confer out in the hall. The Con Com graciously allowed the recess while the rest of us waited.

JUDICIOUS — It was our experience that the Con Com – every one of its members – listened to the audience with objectivity and impartiality. What they did not do was share their individual opinions about what was being said – either by the audience members or the E20-hired attorney and consultants. This was judicious to wait until all the testimony and comments were completed, particularly since an appeal of a decision either way was possible.

At the final hearing (before the July 12 massacre), one member of the E20 asked the Con Com to share what they were thinking prior to the hearings being closed. The Chairman of the Con Com said they had already consumed more than the time allotted for Cat Dam that night on the agenda, and they didn't want to keep the other people who were scheduled on the agenda waiting. Mr. Creighton (a Con Com member) stated that he felt they should spend maybe fifteen minutes sharing their thoughts. The Con Com voted not to begin their deliberations at that point but did immediately schedule the date for final deliberations. This decision made sense to us since future deliberations would be open to the public and much more time would be available for a full discussion of all the issues.

GOTCHA — The first Cat Dam related petition by about 17 neighbors (not the E20) to the BOS in late summer of 2007 asked the BOS to involve the ConCom in managing the Cat Dam gates. Our letter is on file. Koed was serving on this BOS. As petitioners we were told by the BOS in no uncertain terms that they did not want the ConCom involved and that they believed the neighbors should make decisions about managing the public water in Inner Little Harbor. The BOS chose not to accept the Commonwealth's jurisdiction over water and wetlands. (An individual can own the land under the water, but not the water itself.) The BOS, including Mr. Koed, refused our proposal to engage the ConCom.

At all the hearings the Con Com conducted themselves professionally with great equanimity and patience. They were never rude to the E20. The E20 was granted nearly every request they made publicly. The Con Com members who were not reappointed on July 12th never once, in our opinion, acted in an "inequitable" manner.

If the BOS felt the ConCom behavior was so egregious to warrant not reappointing three commissioners, then why did the BOS never speak to the ConCom chairman or the commissioners about rectifying their behavior prior to July 12th? Why didn't the BOS provide specific examples to support their claims of the Con Com not being "fair, impartial, equitable, and judicious?"

All the Cat Dam hearings were recorded by a stenographer. The text should be available, and perhaps the audiotape, and you can judge for yourselves. If there is a tape available, you could clearly hear the aggressive tone of voice expressed by some E20 members — but never by ConCom members.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Grant support appreciated

The Board of the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. (CLT) would like to thank the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. and its Community Trust Committee for their recent gift of the final $25,000 portion of a four year $100,000 grant to the CLT first announced in 2008.

The CLT was established in 2006 with the mission of increasing and managing the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's endowment fund. The South Shore Music Circus's very generous grant represented a huge vote of confidence in the CLT during its first years and has enabled us to support the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in many ways during a time of reduced Town funding.

In recognition of the South Shore Playhouse Associates' generosity, the CLT sponsored public lectures by nationally known authors Tracy Kidder in 2009 and Nathaniel Philbrick in 2011. These events were extremely well attended and gave the Town as a whole the chance to learn about the work of the CLT and to acknowledge the South Shore Playhouse Associates' leadership grant. - interest in art — Desroches, 22, is an art school graduate, while Noonan worked as a commercial photographer.

The two started posting their handiwork on Facebook for friends and family to see. Before they knew it, they were asked to cater events.

"Danielle and I started about a year ago," said Noonan, "and it just grew and grew and grew."

Now, the pair is happy to be opening their first retail space.

"It was time to take the plunge," Noonan said. "We're very blessed and fortunate that the work we've had has kept us busy."

Noonan said that the shop décor is quite creative, reflecting the owners' personalities and mutual love of art. The same could be said of their cupcake creations. The shop's website showcases a gallery of whimsical treats with gourmet flavors, such as "Chocolate Lab" "Jack Russell Terriers," and "Dalmatians," which are decorated with fondant bones or fire hydrants.

Other quirky cupcakes include: "Mocha Madness," featuring mocha buttercream frosting, chocolate vermicelli and a chocolate-covered coffee bean; "Chocolate Guinness and Bailey's," baked with actual Guinness Extra Stout and swirled with cream cheese and buttercream frosting infused with Bailey's Irish Cream; and "Maple French Toast and Bacon," featuring cream cheese, buttercream, maple and cinnamon frosting and, you guessed it, bacon.

Noonan said that she and Desroches are "very excited" to bring their unique spin on cupcakes to Cohasset.

"Cupcakes are huge," said Noonan of the dessert trend. "Everyone loves them."

Cohasset varsity on a roll

The Cohasset golf team improved to 7-0 this season after a 32.5-21.5 win over Carver at Squirrel Run's Par 30 course.

The Skippers are also 7-0 in the South Shore League.

Previous wins included a 29.5-24.5 win over Abington and a 37.5-16.5 victory at Harwich's Cranston Valley.

Cohasset is at Norwell Oct. 5 at 3:30 p.m.

YOUTH FIELD HOCKEY

Eighth graders open strong

The Skippers Eighth Grade Field Hockey Club is off to a big start, with two wins in two games so far this season.

The team played as a cohesive unit to come away with a big win against Scituate Friday afternoon. Alexandra Leahy netted a pair of goals for the Skippers in the second half to account for the scoring.. Mid-fielder Maria Waters assisted on the first goal. All forwards and midfielders kept the pressure on, out shooting Scituate.

Goalies Grace Lucier and Madison Jones gave the Skippers a shutout, and the defense fought hard to secure the win.

YOUTH HOCKEY

Seahawks battle Canton

Over the weekend Coach Chris Olivieri took his South Shore Seahawks Pee Wee B team on the road to face off against a resilient Canton squad. The Seahawks kept the game close after two periods with great saves from Matt Kirslis and solid defensive play from the blue liners. Staying determined on the offensive side Samuel Williams fed Ryan Hohman in the top of the slot where he scored top shelf, keeping the game in reach entering the third.

Canton kept the pressure on and despite several flurries from the Seahawks offense they walked away with a 7-1 loss.

Coach Chris said the team made some great plays and never stopped hustling, adding that their continued improvement will keep them very competitive this year.

Righting the ship

Boys hit halfway mark on a roll

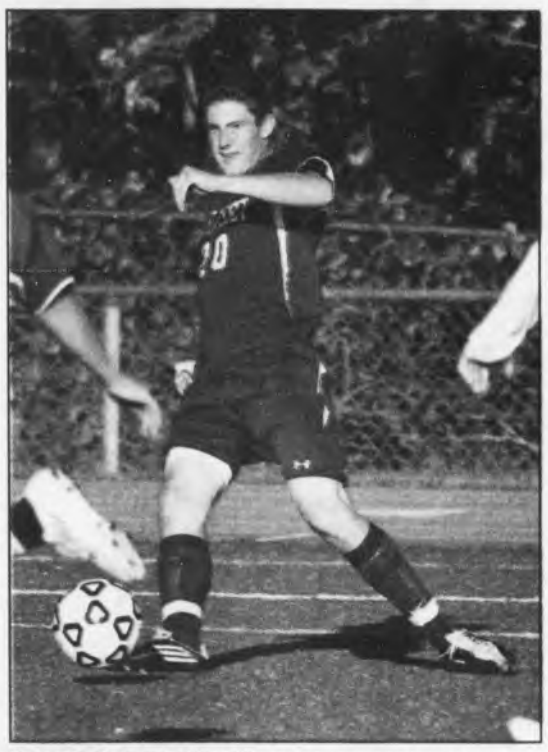
By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Opening the season with a 0-2-2 record wasn't exactly the way Cohasset boys soccer coach Jim Willis hoped to start a new campaign.

With high hopes after a trip to the Div. 4 South Sectional Final last season, Willis was looking for his team to hit the field running.

It took a while, but as Cohasset heads into their Homecoming game against East Bridgewater on Saturday, things are looking better.

After the slow start, the Skippers have come around to win four straight games, including wins over Harwich and Mashpee, two teams that were undefeated when they faced Cohasset.



Friday, Cohasset beat Harwich 2-0 on the road and followed that with a 3-2 victory over Mashpee on Monday.

"We had a great win over Harwich on Friday," Willis said. "That was their first loss. They lost their goalie to a concussion in the first half and brought in their JV goalie. He was amazing. He saved two penalty kicks and had the game of his life. It could have been 5-0. I think Mashpee was the strongest team we've played. They were 5-0-2 when we played them."

Willis is pleased with where his team is now.

"Everyone is playing well," he said. "We had three shutouts in a row. Our freshman goalie Patrick Federle has been great in goal. We have another freshman, Teddy Craven, who has stepped up. The freshmen started the season a little nervous. We gave up a couple of weak goals in the rain against Abington. Now the freshmen have figured it out."

Cohasset preparing for League schedule

Gatehouse News Service

There's nothing like a meaningful meaningless high school football game among friends.

That's the way it was Friday night as Scituate (Patriot League) defeated Cohasset (South Shore League), 14-10, in non-league action at Alumni Field.

"That's what I love about having Scituate on our schedule," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said, citing strong rivalries against neighboring towns where the players from both sides have played together in youth football and American Legion baseball.

"Even though it's a non-league game, it's intense, a great tune-up for the league schedule. It's nice to win a game like that, but it's not critical because in the long run they're meaningless."

"It's good to play meaningful meaningless games, if you know what I mean, as opposed to some team you don't have a rivalry with. It's nice to have those games that the kids can get up for but they don't necessarily have an effect on the league records."

Scituate got the best of the rivalry this season, raising its record to 2-1 (all non-league), while Cohasset dropped to 1-2 (also non-league).

Cohasset won the last two meetings.

Scituate coach Herb Devine was pleased to get the win.

"This was a big win for us," he said. "As a team we've been battling all year long to play complete games. It's nice to see the defense play well. They picked up the offense. The last couple of years we've lost to Cohasset. It's a good hometown rivalry."

Scituate scored the game-winning touchdown with 4:30 left in the game when

SPECIAL PROJECT

Blue and Pink

The athletes and coaching staff of Cohasset High School will be kicking off their first athletic program wide community service project this Friday, September 30th, at the Homecoming Football Game vs. Carver.

The project will continue throughout the month of October. All of the fall athletic teams and coaches will be wearing pink sweat bands with the CHS "C" logo for the month of October in honor of breast cancer awareness month. The captains of each team will collect a donation for each sweatband from all the players and coaching staff.

The sweatbands will also be available at CHS sporting events. The suggested donation for a sweatband is $3 but any and all donations are welcome.

All proceeds from the donations will go to the Dana Faber Cancer Research Institute in Boston.

A special thanks goes out to Ron Goodwin at Goodwin Graphics in Cohasset for helping us with the project.

Anyone interested in receiving a pink "C" sweatband can pick one up at a CHS game or contact Athletic Director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103 or email at rford@cohassetk12.org.

You can view a picture of the "C" sweatbands on the Cohasset High School Athletics Page at www.cohassetk12.org or the Goodwin Graphics website www.cottonfeelsgood.com.

As a community service project, athletes will wear pink "C" sweatbands to proceed the Dana Faber Cancer Research Institute in Boston. They will be selling the sweatbands at game. COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset/Hull battles Rockland

The Cohasset/Hull High boys and girls cross country teams traveled to Rockland Tuesday afternoon for their third meet of the season.

The girls' race was a tight affair from start to finish. The Lady Skippers/Lady Pirates battled Rockland for almost all of the first 10 places, but came up just short, 25-30, when the final score had been tabulated. Captain Christina Secatore once again led the way for Cohasset/Hull, finishing in third place in a time of 20:49 over the 2.8 mile Rockland course, which was just a few seconds behind the second place Rockland girl.

Teammate Olivia Franklin grabbed fourth spot in 21:56, outkicking a Rockland opponent for that position. Captain Corin Postell, who was amidst the trio dueling for fourth, ended up in sixth place in 22:01.

Cohasset senior Stephanie Brierly nabbed seventh place with a solid run of 22:33 and Ellie Tedeschi completed the CHS/HHS score sheet with a 10th place effort in 22:52, which was just four seconds behind the ninth place Rockland girl. Emily Robbins also competed for CHS/HHS and came home in a fine time of 28:53 for 13th place overall.

Girls coming around after tough start

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset girls soccer coach Deb Beal has won enough games and coached long enough to know that every year a team will have its own personality and that there are years where it may take a while to really get things rollin.

That has been the case with the Cohasset girls soccer team this season.

After a slow start, Cohasset looks like it has found a personality, and according to Beal, it is a good one.

"To date we sit at 2-4-1 overall," Beal said. "It doesn't seem possible that we are seven games in to a season of 18 already but I can tell you that over the past month we have taken tremendous steps in improving our individual skills and team play.

"When the season began I had a full plate, I was returning to school, I was introducing a new junior varsity coach and I was trying to plan for the upcoming season. It's always interesting to me that I spend the whole summer planning and then when the kids show up on day one they may not return as what I had anticipated. They never cease to amaze me, they work hard and they take responsibility over the summer to get themselves into shape and prepared for the season. Every year we do a timed two-mile run as the first assessment, this year was no different but it was remarkable to me, that not one athlete walked. That, I have never

5 To Watch

Chelsea Savage, Pembroke: While her team was unable to tame the tough Bowdoin Park (NY) course on Saturday, Savage took an impressive and eye-opening third place in the varsity girls race, running 20:02 on the muddy hills. Savage appears poised to follow in the footsteps set by Heather Connick a year ago for Greg Zopatti's Titans, yet another senior putting together a year to remember.

Caroline Mulrey, Whitman-Hanson: The freshman was a strong fifth runner for the Panthers on Tuesday in their tri-meet with Silver Lake and Hanover, running 21:20 for 5K at their home course, and keeping within 30 seconds of their dominant pack of the Baker sisters, Gianna Cacciatore, and Jenny Dimascio. W-H's only weakness last year was their gap from 4th to 5th, and this freshman looks more than poised to close that up.

Mike McConville, Hingham: The senior Harborman dominated the course at Scituate High School, all 2.8 miles of it, in 15:28, giving his Hingahm teammates the boost they needed to crack the top 5 of this poll. It's still too early to see whether they can give league heavyweights Pembroke or Whitman-Hanson a run for their money in upcoming dual meets, but it's impossible to write McConville off as a threat for a top 3 finish in the Patriot League.

Olivia Lanagan and Clara King, Notre Dame: The sophomore Lanagan (21:08) and junior King (21:13) were 36th and 37th at the Amherst Invitational, third and fourth for the Cougars on the day behind Elizabeth Constantino and Kelsey Whitaker. NDA looks poised for a run to All States this fall, but needs continued contributions from their pack, including seniors Jess Bouzan and Sarah Brennan, who also ran well. NDA was 3rd at the meet, behind only Haverhill and Needham, but should start to see themselves moving up as the season rolls along.

Kevin Thomas, Marshfield: This time, teammate Joel Hubbard couldn't keep pace, but Thomas was dominant at the Amherst Invitational, placing second (15:49) only to Brookline's Chernet Sisay. Flooding forced the race to move more to the roads, making for some faster-than-normal times, but Thomas was able to run away from a stellar field, including Jeremy and Colin Bennie of Wachusett, Drew Beck of Oliver Ames, and Mark Perry of Brookline.

Meet to Watch

Bay State Invitational, Wrentham, Saturday, Oct. 1: Basically every team in the region will take to the Wrentham Developmental Center to traverse the 5000 meter course on Saturday, and local teams have fared well there in recent years. In 2010, Weymouth's girls took 4th in the DI race, followed by Notre Dame in 7th, and Whitman-Hanson in 10th. In the DII girls race, Pembroke was 3rd and Norwell 10th, and the Weymouth boys used a win form Northeastern Husky Steve Sollowin to come away with the 3rd place trophy for the DI boys.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Cohasset boys on the bubble

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The third week of high school soccer produced a new landscape in the rankings. The Hingham boys and Weymouth girls still hold down the No. 1 spot, but the girls' side this week underwent a major overhaul from No. 3 through No. 6. The boys' rankings remained relatively intact, with the exception of Silver Lake entering the six, moving all the way up from unranked to No. 6. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 25.

Boys

1. Hingham – A 5-1 loss to Sandwich did little to hurt Hingham's place in the top six. Sandwich, which enters the week at 5-0, is the No. 1 team in the state. Following the loss, the Harbormen bounced back with a 3-0 win over Pembroke, and a 3-2 victory over a rising Hanover side. Hingham improved to 5-1 on the season.

2. Weymouth – Wins over Wellesley, a 2-0 defeat, and Needham (2-0), put the Wildcats at 5-0-1 and in first place in Bay State Carey division. They're knocking on Hingham's door to overtake the Harbormen and grab the No. 1 spot. Another winning week may just be enough to do that.

3. Silver Lake – The Lakers continue to dominate and this week enter the rankings at No. 3 after sitting unranked for the past two weeks. The Lakers beat Hanover, 5-1, dominated Whitman-Hanson, 6-1, and tied Duxbury, 1-1, securing a key point in the Patriot League. The Lakers come into the week at 4-0-1 and in first place in the conference.

4. Duxbury – The Dragons did what they were supposed to do – win the games that they're supposed to win, beating Scituate, 4-0, and a winless North Quincy side, 4-0. A 1-1 tie against league nemesis Silver Lake sent their record to 3-0-2 and marked the first time since the first week of the season that the Dragons didn't secure three points.

5. Marshfield – The Rams had a tough week in the Atlantic Coast League, taking on two dangerous teams. They secured a 2-0 win against Dennis-Yarmouth, and then drew, 1-1, with a Plymouth North team that is making some noise. The Rams come into week four with a 2-0-2 record.

6. Norwell – Another team taking care of business within their league is Norwell. The Clippers remained atop the South Shore League by topping winless Rockland, 2-0, followed by wins over Abington (4-0) and East Bridgewater (2-1). At 5-1-1, Norwell hasn't lost since its season-opening loss to Scituate.

On the bubble: Plymouth North, Scituate, Cohasset

Week Two Rankings:
1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Duxbury, 4. Marshfield, 5. Scituate, 6. Norwell

Girls

1. Weymouth – The Lady Cats handed Wellesley only its second loss of the season, a 3-2 defeat, and then followed that up with a 4-1 win over Needham to improve to 6-1. They hold down second place in Bay State Carey, one point behind Newton North.

2. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons remained perfect on the season, picking up a 3-0 win over Scituate and a 4-0 win over North Quincy. Duxbury has yet to allow a league goal this season and entered the week with a 4-1 overall record.

3. Marshfield – After seven days off, the Lady Rams had three games in four days, and they won all three. They beat Notre Dame Academy, 4-1, Plymouth North, 1-0, Dennis-Yarmouth, 9-1. At 5-1 overall, the Lady Rams also remain a force in the league, holding down first place in the Atlantic Coast League.

4. Hingham – A new entry Inside the 6, the Harborwomen picked up a 4-1 win over Pembroke followed by a 3-0 win over Hanover, both on the road. This kept Hingham unbeaten at 3-0-1.

5. Braintree – The Lady Wamps remain on an absolute tear, last week taking a 2-1 win over Framingham and a 2-0 win over Norwood. With the two victories, Braintree upped its winning streak to four games.

6. Plymouth North - In a battle of two teams capable of winning the Atlantic Coast League title, the Lady Eagles fell, 1-0, to Marshfield last week, and in so doing, dropped three spots.

On the bubble: Scituate, Norwell, Hanover

Week Three Rankings:
1. Weymouth, 2. Duxbury, 3. Plymouth North, 4. Marshfield, 5. Norwell, 6. Braintree

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. GIRLS SOCCER seen. These girls came back in fantastic shape and I was thrilled. So much preseason work can be modified when the kids are fit. This is one of the fittest teams I've had in my 14 years at CHS."

That didn't translate into wins right away, as Cohasset was still a young and inexperienced group.

"We opened up our season at home against Abington and suffered a 2-0 loss, we traveled to Scituate and face a 3-0 loss, and we went to Norwell next and got hit with a 6-0 loss," Beal said. "Are you seeing a trend? We were and we didn't really like it. I don't feel that in those three games we were being outplayed and nor did we give up but we weren't playing and connecting as the team. A lot of soccer has to do with communication, trust and dedication. Profound thought, huh? But it's so very true in that if you cannot rely on your teammates to pick up slack, to cover your back and to trust that you will for them also there's a pretty big recipe for disaster there."

Beal knew problems can be fixed. She's been there before.

"We weren't comfortable and we were not doing our jobs well, we were doing them, just not well," she said. "So we take a breather and we face each game with renewed spirit and enthusiasm. The girls were excited and we pressed forward."

After that short break, Cohasset got back to it.

"We faced Hull at home and senior captain Katie Brennan finally found the net and scored the lone goal for us that sealed the game., Beal said. "We traveled to Rockland next and became victims to the insecurity again on the field; we stopped trusting and began spinning. We took the lead off another Katie Brennan goal and continued to play well until after halftime when we gave up two goals, one at 3 minutes and another at 23 minutes. It was gut check time and the kids proved not only to me but to themselves that we still had some fight and Katie Brennan, our leading and only scorer at this point, scored the tying goal and that's how we ended."

Next was a tough loss on the road.

"We then traveled to Carver, which wasn't our best outing," Beal said. "We got outplayed and out hustled to 50-50 balls all day long. I'm not sure what the problem was but there was some pretty powerful disconnect on the field. We left with a 4-1 loss despite another Katie Brennan goal."

Beal said the team needed an extra boost.

"So now we need to find another scorer because relying on one person to finish day after day is not a great situation for the 'finisher'", Beal said. "We hosted Harwich in the rain and began to show signs of stellar play. We were moving better off the ball and we were connecting passes to feet as opposed to space. The girls are really working hard and I believe that as more and more connections are made their confidence in themselves and more importantly in the others will show improvement all over the field."

Cohasset found the scorer.

"Junior Kate Sookiasian found the net first that afternoon and we played with a one goal lead until we gave up one with about six minutes remaining. This is the point hen you see what the kids are made of and what makes them tick. There were eleven Cohasset on the field after the goal that were not leaving that field with another tie, or worse another loss. The field was very wet and footing was slippery so lots of calls were being made that provided scoring opportunities. Freshman Emmy McGoldrick capitalized on one of those moments scoring on a direct kick with 3:36 to play. It was her first varsity goal, her first of many."

"We take a breather and we face each game with renewed spirit and enthusiasm. The girls were excited and we pressed forward."
Coach Deb Beal

Beal is expecting even more improvement from her squad.

"I'm very pleased with our efforts and as we move on I can't believe that we will not improve as players but also as teammates," she said.

In the Mashpee win, John Mills scored the game-winner with 17 minutes left to play. Cohasset had gone ahead 2-0, but Mashpee tied it back up.

"John Mills has scored a couple of big goals off the bench," Willis said. "That has really helped."

Offensively, Jonah Adkins and Pat McCormack are the team's point leaders.

Adkins has two goals and three assists, while McCormack has five goals. They have had some help.

"Our senior captain, Jamie Timothy has been outstanding outside and Nick Tangherlini has been stepping up the offensive pressure. They have been all over other team's defenses. Jamie had two goals against Hull."

Sam Morris has also been putting pressure on from the outside.

Defensively, senior Brendan Kearney and sophomore Joe Buckley have been very good not only defending, but in transition, helping to propel the offense.

Willis is hoping for a win on Saturday.

"This is our first time playing East Bridgewater this season," Willis said. "They're also in the middle of the pack. If we can win that game we finish the first half of the season 5-2-2. It's a huge game for us. We're getting better and better and better. I think if we win that game, we'll go into the second half feeling better."

Saturday's game is at 5:30 p.m. The girls will play at 3:30.

Admission to the games are $5 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens.

"It was a very close and exciting race," said Cohasset/Hull head coach Ted Coyle. "The outcome was decided by just a couple of places. Our girls ran hard and gave it their best."

The boys' side was bolstered by the return of Hull junior Nick Cimetti, who had missed the first part of the season. Nick showed his top form from last year and took third place overall in 17:57. CHS/HHS captain Harry Hellboch was next across the line for the Skippers/Pirates in seventh place in 19:31. Rounding out the top five for Cohasset/Hull were Matt Menice in 23:00, Tom Saide in 25:55, and Chris Daniels in 28:35. Jack Quigley (34:51) and Kristophe Suprenant also competed for CHS/HHS.

"The boys are continuing to improve, which is our primary goal," said Coyle. "They're working hard and we'll be looking for everyone to get faster as the season progresses."

The Cohasset/Hull boys and girls will be back in action Tuesday, hosting Mashpee at Wheelwright Park on North Main Street.

South Shore League cross country standings through Tuesday: Norwell 3-0, East Bridgewater 3-0, Rockland 2-1, Carver 1-1, Cohasset/Hull 0-3, Abington 1-2, Mashpee 0-2, Harwich NA.

FOOTBALL

Matt King intercepted a Jamie Faber pass in the end zone as Cohasset was pinned on its 4-yard line. Faber's attempt to get the ball out of harm's way failed, and King was there to capitalize.

The extra point by Manny Gomes gave Scituate a 14-10 lead, and it held up.

"Andrew Churchill made a big play there," Devine said. "He got after the quarterback and chased him. Matt was right there to make the interception. It was a great night all around for Matt."

King made sure the lead was safe when with 1:19 left he recovered a fumble deep in Scituate territory.

Scituate surprised the crowd on what was essentially a trick play on its first possession with 6:08 left in the opening quarter.

Quarterback Lucas Barisano pitched to running back Mike Stewart, who unloaded a pass to Alex Way that went for 81 yards and a touchdown, giving the Sailors a 6-0 lead. The kick by Gomes made it 7-0.

After a scoreless second quarter, Cohasset tied the game at seven when running back Kyle Livingstone raced seven yards for a touchdown 14 seconds into the third quarter and Shane Haggerty's extra point kick made it 7-7.

"It's nice to have those games that the kids can get up for but they don't necessarily have an effect on the league records."
Coach Pete Afanasiw

Livingstone led all rushers with 95 yards on 21 carries.

Cohasset took a 10-7 lead with 8:11 left in the fourth quarter when Haggerty nailed a 20yard field goal.

While the loss was meaningless in a sense, it left Cohasset with some questions to answer as they headn into their South Shore League schedule.

"We're trying to regroup," Afanasiw said. "We have to eliminate mistakes. We have to cut down the penalties. We had about 75 yards in penalties."

There was also the fumble and interception.

"We were deep in their zone a lot," Afanasiw said. "We moved the ball well between the 20's, but when we got close in we would self destruct.

"Some of that was our own fault, other times it was the other team making good plays.

"We had them where we wanted them. They scored the 80 yard touchdown on the first play, then they had about 35 yards the rest of the way. They only had six first downs the whole game."

Afanasiw said his team's two early losses may have taken a toll.

"They're struggling with their confidence a little bit," he said. "They'll pick up. A lot of these kids have been playing football their whole lives. They know how to play and what it takes. They have what it takes.

"They have what it takes. Now the challenge of the staff is to get then back on task. The first three games are meaningless. It's better to play teams that are up a division or two. That helps when we start league games.

"We could have played powder puffs and run up 50 points a game, but not improve"

Cohasset will be home on Friday night for Homecoming with a 6 p.m. kickoff. The Homecoming Dance is at 8 p.m.

The Homecoming court will be announced at halftime.

New Beginnings at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Like most New Englanders, I treasure the warm summer months. They give me the chance to recharge my batteries for the school year ahead. But my true favorite season is fall, when we join our students in embarking on new beginnings at the University of Massachusetts Boston.

A couple of weeks ago I had the privilege of welcoming some 16,000 new and continuing students to our harborside campus at our Fall Convocation, the ceremonial kickoff to the new academic year. It is truly an honor to greet students who come to the University of Massachusetts Boston from across Massachusetts and from 136 countries for a great, student-centered, urban public research university experience.

And it is wonderful to know that so many opportunities await them in each of our eight colleges. For example:

- Our College of Education and Human Development's Teach Next Year program, which offers young and mid-career professionals the opportunity to combine in-class instruction with in-school experience;
- Our College of Liberal Arts, which continues to add programs, such as the new PhD in Developmental and Brain Sciences;
- Our College of Management, nationally ranked for its undergraduate and MBA programs, many of which include international study and collaboration;
- Our College of Nursing and Health Sciences, the state's leading source of nursing professionals, with programs that are ranked among the best;
- Our College of Public and Community Service, which offers its students amazing opportunities to intern in state government;
- Our College of Science and Mathematics, a national leader in green chemistry, with the first doctoral program in the nation in that field;
- Our McCormack Graduate School of Policy and Global Studies, whose centers and institutes help shape public policy in Massachusetts and beyond;
- And University College, which offers a host of opportunities for people seeking career advancement or looking to expand their horizons.

It's also wonderful to see our campus already transforming according to our master plan for expansion and revitalization. The foundation for the Integrated Sciences Complex is being poured right now; it seems that each week brings a new milestone in its construction. When it is completed in 2013, our students will enjoy access to its 220,000 square feet of state-of-the-art research facilities, high-tech classrooms, and teaching laboratories. I am excited just imagining what our students will make of the opportunities this space presents to them.

I invite you to see for yourself what else is happening at Greater Boston's only public university by joining us for our fall Open House, held on campus on October 15. All are welcome to attend; please visit our new website at www.umb.edu to register.

NDA SOCCER

Notre Dame Academy starts out strong

The Notre Dame Academy Girls Soccer team has started out its 2011 season on the right foot with 7 extremely well played matches against seasoned teams.

The Lady Cougars are looking to improve on their 2010 season earning a 19th seed in the south for the state tournament after finishing the regular season 8 wins, 6 losses and 4 ties.

NDA is returning eight seniors to this year's squad along with four talented freshmen. The Cougars have one of the toughest schedules in the state with almost all their opponents being tournament qualifiers from last year. Head coach Liz Lima, now in her fifth year at NDA, believes this year's squad has the experience to hopefully make some noise in the state tournament.

The Cougars are lead by senior captains Lauren Varela and Gabby Kenyon, who have both been regulars in the Cougar lineup since their freshman year.

Notre Dame started off their season with a tough opening game at powerhouse Franklin High School. Franklin made it to the final four in the state tournament last year and returned most of its starters. The Cougars had to play in a torrential rain storm for most of the game at Franklins turf field with playing conditions that were very tough.

NDA was down early in the second half 2-0 when senior Lauren Varela found the upper left hand corner of the Franklin net from about 30 yards out to cut the deficit to 2-1. Franklin then scored two goals in the final 15 minutes to put the game out of reach as NDA lost its opener 4-1.

The Cougars second game of the season pitted them against Ursuline Academy in Dedham on Sept. 13.

NDA came out firing on all cylinders for their home opener as the Cougars carried the play for most of the game and came away with an impressive 6-1 victory. Harvard bound striker Lauren Varela scored 4 goals and had 2 assists and junior forward Alex Dalton scored 2 goals and had and assist.

Freshman Bridget Hobin had the first assist of her high school career. Freshman Goalie Maggie Elliot played solid in net. Playing impressive defense on the back line were seniors Meghan Sullivan and Abby Rajotte.

Notre Dame faced off against Pembroke on a beautiful fall day last Friday at home. Playing their best game of the season so far, according to head coach Liz Lima, the Cougars put on an offensive show with a 9-2 victory over Pembroke. Despite not having their starting goalie due to an injury, senior Lindsay MacQueen filled in at net and did an outstanding job.

With an impressive passing display, NDA put up 7 first half goals in going out to a 7-1 lead. The lady Cougars tacked on 2 more in the second half to finish with the highest goal total in one game in several years. Senior forward Lauren Varela set a new NDA scoring record with 7 goals in one game. Varela also had an assist and now has an incredible 12 goals in the first 3 games of the season. At this pace, Varela could set the single season scoring record at Notre Dame.

Great defensive performances were turned in by senior Abby Rajjotte and junior Morgan Sullivan.

NDA faced a very tough Bishop Fenwick team on a rainy Friday in Hingham. The Cougars carried most of the play during the match and came away with a 1-1 tie. Fenwick scored early in the 6th minute of the match to go ahead 1-0. NDA came back in the second half with a goal by junior Alex Dalton on an assist by Lauren Varela.

Great all around games were turned in by junior Amelia Brown and Sophomore Allison Zaccheo. Notre Dames last game in this stretch was played at home against powerhouse Brockton High School. In a very physical, intense game,

The Cougars played extremely well in the tough loss with great games turned in by senior Madison Caron, juniors Brooke Morley and Morgan Sullivan.

LIFE AT CHS

Go Blue! Homecoming football tonight!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

The football boys request that fans wear all white to the game. The Homecoming dance is neon themed and will take place immediately after the game tonight.

If you were to visit Cohasset High School last Monday, you would've been extremely puzzled. You would have seen some students dressed in boldly-printed Footie Pajamas, teachers in striped PJ bottoms, and seniors in togas and golden wreaths (or, for one, a headpiece made out of real tomato leaves...). If you stopped by on Tuesday, you would've noticed students dressed as cops, construction workers, and all varieties of superheroes. Some dressed as Bruce Springsteen, Madonna, and Nirvanna on Wednesday. On Thursday, cavemen and tour guides roamed the halls of CHS. And, on Friday, if you weren't wearing blue and white, you were shunned.

You're probably wondering, what was going on at the High School this week?! The answer is simple: it was Spirit Week! Monday was Pajama Day, Tuesday was Profession day, Wednesday was Musical Idols day, Thursday was Safari Day and Friday was Blue and White Day!

Due to Rosh Hashanah, the Pep Rally, which is traditionally on Friday during Spirit Week, was moved to Monday. It was the perfect way to kick off the week! Team captains got to say speeches, the Cohasset Fight Song (circa 1957) was sung, cheerleaders taught some students how to dance, and a teacher-student musical chairs match got to be particularly intense (unfortunately the teachers won). Additionally, the Student Council announced that a student from each grade would win a free late pass for having the best costume on each Spirit Day. Lastly, the Homecoming Court was announced and consists of seniors Anna Seraikas, Taylor Tabb, Sage Stebbins, Amber Silvia, John Collins, Jamie Faber, Morgan McCarthy, and Chris Murphy. Come to the football game tonight versus Carver at 6 p.m. to find out who will be crowned Homecoming King and Queen! The football boys request that fans wear all white to the game. The Homecoming dance is neon themed and will take place immediately after the game tonight.

On Tuesday, both the girls' and the boys' cross country teams lost to Rockland. The girls' race was extremely close, but Cohasset-Hull ended up scoring 30 points versus Rockland's 25. The golf team had multiple matches this week and are hoping to win a League Title for the 3rd consecutive year. Field hockey played rival Harwich Tuesday. Their homecoming game is today in Hull at 3:30 p.m.! The boys' soccer team's homecoming game is tomorrow at 5:30 p.m., and the girls' is at 3:30 p.m.. Both teams are playing East Bridgewater. Seniors don't have to pay for any of the homecoming games!

Clubs are taking off at CHS, with the first Art Magazine meeting, a Volunteer Club meeting on Thursday, three Student Council meetings this week, Spinnaker planning sessions, and more! Additionally, the Homework Help Center at the Cohasset Library, led by National Honors Society members, has its first session on October 4th.

Well, that's it for this week Cohasset! I hope to see you all at the football game tonight (in all white), and to see all of the students at the Homecoming dance. See you next week.

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly during the school year.

SEPAC

Estate planning for specia needs families

The Cohasset SEPAC presents John Mahoney, Certified Special Needs Financial Advisor, on Tuesday, Oct. 4th at the Paul Pratt Library with 7pm coffee and conversation and the presentation at 7:30-9pm.

Mr. Mahoney's presentation "Estate Planning for Families of Children with Disabilities" will focus on the importance of estate planning for special needs families. The seminar will help families identify the cost of providing lifetime support for a seriously disabled child, select sources of funding, determine the need for a Special Needs Trust (SNT) and choose appropriate strategies for investing SNT assets on a child's behalf. The presentation will also help clients address estate-planning concerns with coordinated solutions that meet the needs of both the child with a disability and other members of the family. Finally, teaming with professional advisors such as SNT attorneys and disability organization advocates/care managers to deliver coordinated, customized solutions. "Instruction in estate planning is a must for all families who have children with disabilities," states Diane Herth, SEPAC president

Mr. Mahoney comes to us from Merrill Lynch Wealth Management Advisors. Over a twenty-year business career, he has worked with many clients in a fiduciary capacity at American Express, Charles Schwab and Scudder Mutual Funds. He has also been Chief Financial Officer for two independent schools. He earned a Master of Business Administration from the Isenberg School of Management at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst and a Master of Education degree from Old Dominion University in Virginia.

GIMME SHELTER

Buddy & Holly to stay together

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping someone will come forward to adopt this brother-sister, dynamic duo.

Buddy is a male tuxedo and Holly is a jet black female.

They are playful, gentle, adorable, and definitely have the potential to be lap cats. They are litter trained and up to date on all their shots. They get along quite well with children of any ages. HSAR would like them to be adopted together, as it's twice as much fun for both the kittens and the adopters.

HSAR has a shelter filled with adoptable felines, so please check out their website at www.hsar.org to view some of the available cats and kittens.

HSAR is offering a $50 reduction of the adoption fee for every cat and kitten in the shelter for the entire month of September. They are doing this in order to find suitable homes for current residents and free up space for other homeless cats and kittens.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

HSAR thanks the many people who generously donate to their cause. They couldn't do it without you!

HSAR's 2012 Kittendales Calendar is now available. Joanne Berman, and her sister, Susan Berman Davis have donated their time and talent to this collectible and unique calendar. It makes a great holiday gift. All the kittens are from HSAR. It's a great combo of adorable kittens and fine-tuned male physiques.

Due to a printing error, anyone purchasing a Kittendales Calendar at Endless Summer can call the Shelter to have it replaced with the corrected printing. More info on the HSAR website.

Right now, investing in your home is the smartest move.

In this economy, you may lose money on most other investments. That's just not the case with this one. When you choose the most reliable replacement windows, you're investing in your home, and you'll see your returns every day when your drafts are gone and your heating bill is lower.

For a strong window that will last, look to the company that has lasted.

Renewal by Andersen is the exclusive start-to-finish replacement window subsidiary of Andersen Windows—a company with a 108 year reputation for quality. Our replacement windows are held to Andersen's same high standard, while some other less reliable windows have been reported to leak and fail after just a few years.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 10, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone from your past could arrive with welcome news concerning your future. Meanwhile, avoid taking sides in a workplace confrontation until you have more facts to go on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A decision about a relationship could have longer-lasting consequences than you might imagine, so be sure of your facts before you act. A trusted friend can help.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A strained relationship could be restored with more personal contact between the two of you. Letting others act as your go-between only adds to the ongoing estrangement.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) New facts could mean taking a new path toward a goal you've been hoping to reach. However, be sure all your questions are answered before you undertake to shift directions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good week for all you fine Felines to turn your attention to some important considerations, such as your health, your job situation and the status of important relationships.

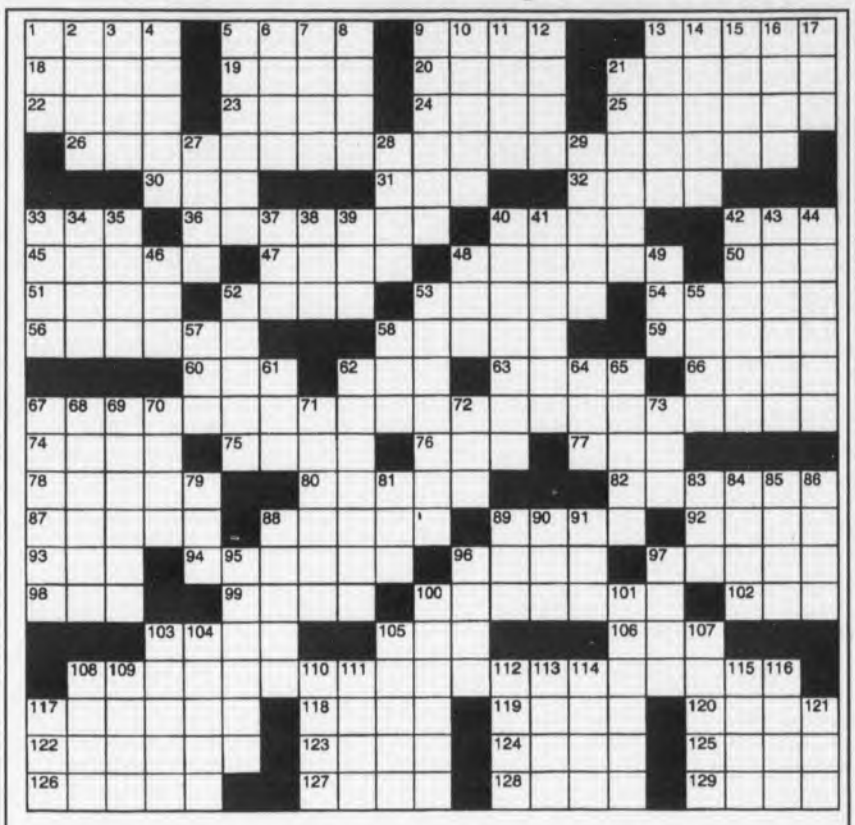
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Avoid making a quick decision about a matter that needs more study. Keep your mind open for possibilities, even if they don't seem plausible — at least not yet.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might welcome the emphasis on openness in relationships that mark this period. But it's a good idea to avoid sharing personal secrets with people you hardly know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There are still some questions that need to be asked and answered before you can feel confident enough to make a potentially life-changing decision.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some lingering effects from a now largely resolved workplace confrontation could make things difficult for you. Act on this before it becomes serious.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You feel you're finally in control of your own life after months of making compromises and concessions you never felt comfortable with. Congratulations.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) No sooner do you decide to pass on one job offer than another suddenly turns up. This one might not have everything you're looking for, but it's worth checking out.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Congratulations. With Jupiter's strong influence dominating this week, don't be surprised to get some good news about a troubling financial matter.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are usually kind and loving. But you can be highly critical of those who don't measure up to your high standards.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Blessing of the Animals is Sunday

Join the clergy of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church to give thanks for all of the animals that fill our lives with joy at the Blessing of the Animals at 5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 2 on Cohasset Town Common. Bring your pets to receive a special blessing! Last year, more than 40 dogs, cats, hamsters, rabbits, and fish attended along with their humans and everyone joined in a wonderful outdoor celebration of God's diverse creation. Please bring an item to donate to the local animal shelter.

The Blessing of the Animals is celebrated on the first Sunday of October because it is the closest Sunday to the feast day of St. Francis of Assisi, who was a great friend of all animals. Francis lived during the late middle ages, but he never seemed to belong to the world he inhabited. He rejected the decadence and riches of his family, and took a vow of poverty. He formed a group of monks who, unlike most other monks, never sequestered themselves in a monastery away from the wild world. Instead, Francis's monks lived in the world, preaching about how Jesus cared for the poor and for the people no one really ever noticed. Francis found the joy of God in every piece of creation: in the animals and birds and trees and in each human face.

Francis lived a short, but full life – a life full of God. He was made a saint two years after he died, which was an unprecedented short period of time. Today, he is most well known for his peace, his dedication, his love for all, and especially for his love of animals. This Sunday, join St. Stephen's in following his example, and bring all of your furry, feathery, and scaly friends to the Common so that we can give thanks to God for their companionship and for the joy they bring to our lives.

WORSHIP NOTES

Lecture series at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series "Listening to Other Voices: Without a Vision, the People Perish: Why a Religious Tradition?" will take place at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 13.

Sohaib Sultan will present "In the Footsteps of Mohammed: The Spiritual Path of Islam." People now live in an age of extremism – not only violent extremes, but also extremes of self-indulgence, materialism and entertainment. Sultan will explore how the Prophet Mohammed was an exemplar of a contrary approach – the purification of the heart and soul from the desires and wants of selfish ego – the spiritual path of Islam. With a spiritual discipline of compassion, the aim is to produce a loving personality that manifests itself in compassionate living. Sultan is the first full-time Muslim Life coordinator and chaplain at Princeton University. He has lectured here and abroad on Islam, Muslim cultures and Muslim-Western relations. Author of several articles and books, his first book, "The Koran for Dummies," (Wiley 2004) is part of the "Dummies" series.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Reservations will not be taken. Seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, visit the website at glastonburyabbey.org.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Suzana Omran

COHASSET – Suzana Omran, adored wife, mother, daughter and friend has died, Sept. 23, at age 37, surrounded by her family and loved ones. She bravely fought breast cancer with grace and determined fervor.

Suzana's spirit lives on in her forever loving husband Mohamad; her three beautiful daughters: Sireen, Leila and Samar, and the loving Mitri family: her father Robert, mother Souad; sister Andrea and brother Robert Jr.

Suzana was a caring preschool teacher whose pure and loving spirit was a bright light of strength and compassion for everyone who met her.

She has forever changed our lives and we are better people for knowing her. She will be missed every single moment of every single day, but her spirit lives in every life she has touched – no matter how briefly.

A gathering was held to celebrate Suzana's life on Saturday, Sept. 24 2011 at Inly School's Meehan Family Artsbarn at 46 Watch Hill Drive, Scituate, MA, from 5-7 p.m.

Please call the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset, MA at 781-383-0200 for additional details.

In lieu of flowers, please send a donation to the Inly School and write in the "Sue Omran Fund" in the memo line.

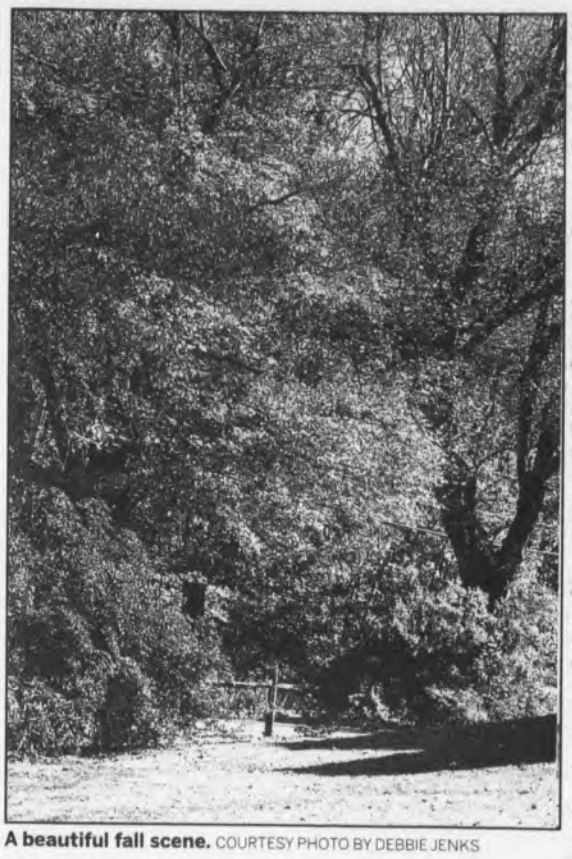
COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Autumn garden seminar, tour Thursday



By Jan Todd
Special to the Mariner

How do we treat them to best insure that the perennials will return next spring and summer? Should we mulch?

We have mixed emotions as we look at our autumn gardens. Traditionally New England has amazingly beautiful falls with blazing trees, golden flowers, migrating flocks, and sun. We want our October garden to be attractive. We are even hoping that several species of flowers and greens may hang around long enough to find their way to our Thanksgiving centerpieces. Juxtaposed with that aesthetic hope is the question of what should be done now? When, where, and how does one plant bulbs for next spring or prune shrubs and trees? Many of last spring and summer's perennials and annuals look sad or are spent. How do we treat them to best insure that the perennials will return next spring and summer? Should we mulch?

These are just a few of the topics to be considered when the Community Garden Club of Cohasset presents its seminar concentrating on Cohasset's autumn gardens. Drying flowers, what to leave to create an attractive winter landscape, what not to cut down so as to feed the winter birds, and techniques of planting will also be discussed. Join this seminar and visit six local gardens on Thursday, Oct. 6. The seminar will begin at 9:30 a.m. at Lightkeeper's Cottage, after everyone has gathered a hot drink and some homemade goodies. The lecture will last about an hour and notes will be distributed. There will be a horticultural table and a question and answer period. Then six local gardens will be open for participants to visit at a pace that is comfortable for you.

Tickets are for sale in Cohasset at Darilynn's, Buttonwood Books, Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room, and in Scituate at Kennedy's Country Gardens. Tickets purchased before Oct. 6 cost $20. If purchased on the day, tickets cost $25. The best deal is the all inclusive $75 ticket which covers all costs for four garden tours, the autumn, winter on Jan. 26, early spring on April 5, plus the final garden tour on June 14 which includes a celebration lunch to mark the conclusion of these garden tours. OPEN HOUSE TUESDAY

Paul Pratt Homework Center opens

Homework Center

Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library, Paul Pratt Memorial Library offers an academic enrichment resource that encourages local students to improve their study skills and receive free tutoring help.

All are welcome and encouraged to join the volunteers and staff of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Homework Center, now in it's 4th year. The Open House is from 5:30-7 p.m. this Tuesday, Oct. 4th on the top floor of the Discovery Museum, Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Students, parents and teachers are especially encouraged to come see what the Homework Center is all about and to meet the new Homework Center Coordinator, Ms. Jill Kelley. The Open House will include a brief orientation, homework help and refreshments. The Homework Center is designed to support what is happening in our local classrooms.

Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library, Paul Pratt Memorial Library offers an academic enrichment resource that encourages local students to improve their study skills and receive free tutoring help. The Homework Center, founded in 2008, offers all students in Cohasset a welcoming and supportive place to sharpen their study skills every Tuesday night from 5:30-7:00pm (except holidays and holiday weeks).

The Center was created by many Library advocates: Friends of Cohasset Library Outreach Coordinator, Marjie Murphy; Paul Pratt Memorial Library Trustee Chairperson, Stacey Weaver, and the Library Director, Jacqueline Rafferty. The Homework Center is staffed by Coordinator Jill Kelley Coordinator, a qualified teacher, who will support the National Honor Society students who will be offering tutoring services to the students. Ms. Kelley will assist students in finding a tutor and offer general supervisory assistance to successfully complete their assignments. The Coordinator will also guide students to important learning resources and materials available in the library. The Homework Center is proud to announce that there are now laptop computers available for supplemental and appropriate online learning accessibility. As a special refreshment, pizza is offered for each student of the Homework Center.

Numerology talk on the meaning of 2012

Deirdre Morgan, a numerologist and holistic counselor with more than 30 of experience in the intuitive/metaphysical field, will share an "Overview of 2012 – "What's ahead in the new year for us as individuals and a community?" on Tuesday, Oct. 4, at the Second Congregational Church.

Morgan will address the political, social and economic shifts that are already taking place and will continue next year; how they will affect our mindset; and give her insights on the adjustment that we will most likely have to make. There will be a time for audience questions and participation. This is one of the few times during any given year that Morgan will make predictions about the collective future.

Morgan's talk is open to the public and will begin at 7:30 p.m. A $10 admission fee will be collected at the door. Second Congregational Church is at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, right beside Town Hall. For more information, call 781-383-0345 or visit the website at scc@2ndcc.org.

Mitigating million-dollar loss

Jeweler helps victim of coin scam

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It seemed like a good deal at the time.

When Richard (who asked only his first name be used), a businessman and resident of Sandwich, was approached over telephone sales calls to purchase collectable coins, he decided to go for it. It was 2002, and gold cost around $250 an ounce. Richard had reason to believe the price would skyrocket to $2,000 (CNNMoney lists gold's current value at approximately $1,650 per ounce).

Over the course of a decade, Richard would end up paying around $1.2 million for coins that were not worth the amount he paid for them. His collection, in total, was worth only $400,000 at current metal prices. Richard spent $96,000 on one coin that he later found out had been purchased at auction for $35,000 before being sold to him.

Water deficit

Dispute over just how big

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During the past few board of selectmen meetings, debate has sparked over the water department's deficit — mainly, is there or isn't there a significant deficit? And just how big is it?

According to the town's director of finance, John Stanbrook, there is a deficit, indeed, and a rather considerable one. Water commission chairman Peter DeCaprio, however, begs to differ, and appeared before the board of selectmen on Tuesday, Sept. 27, to say so.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin and Stanbrook attended the following night's water commission meeting and once again presented the deficit figure. During last week's selectmen meeting, the deficit was said to be over $350,000.

In a Sept. 30 email to the board of selectmen, Coughlin wrote that Stanbrook, along with town auditor Tony Roselli, double-checked their original calculations and wound up adjusting the estimated deficit by $95,397.77. According to the

Why we're pink

So what's with the pink newspaper today?

Every GateHouse newspaper in Massachusetts is Painting it all Pink today in support of the Massachusetts Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure and its efforts to increase awareness during October, which is Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

In this issue you will find stories about the state of research and treatment for breast cancer, as well as facts about breast cancer.

We've also included information about the Susan G. Komen Massachusetts 5K Race for the cure being held Sunday, Oct. 30 in Boston.

Sponsored by

GEORGE WASHINGTON TOMA TV AND APPLIANCE

Pink is the "official" color for breast cancer awareness, and many of the advertisers in this edition are flying their colors in support of the cause.

We give special thanks to George Washington Toma TV and Appliance— our sponsor for this week's pink newspaper kicking off the Paint it all Pink campaign.

A portion of the advertising revenue and part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold on newsstands today will be donated by GateHouse Media to Komen MA.

We will be publishing more stories throughout the month to raise awareness and tell the stories of the men and women affected by breast cancer and the survivors and their families who are working to find a cure.

POLICE BEAT

Eractic driving reports on the rise

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

In the police log this week there are numerous reports from concerned motorists reporting erratic or speeding drivers. Police said cell callers who report an erratically operated vehicle should be aware of their own location and let the dispatcher know which way there are headed, such as south on Route 3A near Tedeschi Plaza.

The caller should try to provide a description of the vehicle and plate number if possible and stay on the line with the dispatcher providing location updates. However, police warn the caller should not engage the erratic driver in any way.

Police stress that a caller should always do so safely and pull over if they need to in order to make the call.

Dead skunk

The Animal Control Officer removed a dead skunk that was inside a white trash bag on the side of the road near St. Joseph's Villa last week.

Intoxicated

The wife of an intoxicated 45-year-old Cohasset man took custody of her husband at about 9:38 p.m. on Monday (Sept. 26). A 45-year-old Highland Avenue woman called police after seeing a man, who appeared to be drunk, on her enclosed back porch. Police identified the man at the scene and his wife was notified and she agreed to pick him up.

Rock thrown

A 43-year-old S. Main St. woman came home from work last Tuesday (Sept. 27) and discovered someone had tried to throw a rock through a front window, breaking a 4-foot by 2-foot double pane of glass. The rock, which also damaged the screen, was sitting between the screen and the window, police said. The incident is under investigation.

Port-a-potty

A concerned Bancroft Road caller reported to police on Wednesday (Sept. 28) at around 7:17 a.m. that a man had spent a lot of time in the port-a-potty on Milliken Field. The caller provided a description of the man and said he was headed toward the school. Police could not locate the individual.

Speeding

A 43-year-old Cushing Road man notified police on Wednesday (Sept. 28) that there was a lot of speeding on his street. Police said the street is used by students heading to school and put the radar trailer there. Police will also be keeping an eye out on Cushing Road before and after school.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident at lower King Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) on Friday (Sept. 30) at 2:49 p.m., Police said a 2008 Land Rover, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset boy, and a 2005 Honda Element, operated by a 61-year-old Hingham woman, were both on lower King Street. The Land Rover was first and pulled out too far onto 3A; the teen operator then backed up and hit the Honda that was behind him. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no reported injuries. The teen was cited for failure to use caution.

Past A&B

A 45-year-old Hingham woman went to the police station on Thursday (Sept. 29) to report a possible assault and battery that occurred in the past at a local establishment. The report is under investigation.

Vandalism

A 16-year-old female METCO student who dozed off on the long bus ride to school awoke to find her $150 designer handbag had been vandalized with a Sharpie pen by an 18-year-old girl and fellow student. The 18-year-old admitted to the incident and agreed to make restitution, police said. The high school notified police about the incident at 7:43 a.m. on Friday (Sept. 30).

Larceny

Police are investigating the apparent larceny of about $12,000 worth of items including Tiffany flatware, candlesticks and serving platters from a house on White Head Road. It is not clear when the larcenies took place as the house, which is owned by a 60-year-old Cohasset woman, has been looked after by another family while she was traveling. The owner discovered the missing items recently when getting ready to put the house on the market. Police are looking into the possibility that house cleaners are responsible as tenants living there reported some stolen items of their own about six months ago.

Bicyclist struck

A 61-year-old Cohasset man in a 2007 Nissan Altima reported hitting a bicyclist at the three-way stop at Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road on Saturday (Oct. 1) at about 9:40 p.m. The motorist reported providing his information to the bicyclist who went on his way. Police said the Cohasset man did the right thing by reporting the incident as soon as he could. There was no cell phone service at the accident scene.

Ride home

A 911 caller from Mobil Mart reported that a woman, who was possibly drunk, was banging on the door as the store was closing at around 10:54 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 1). The police sergeant on duty found the woman walking along Route 3A. She is 26 and from East Bridgewater. Police said she did not appear to be drunk and transported her to the police station where she called for a ride home. There is no longer pay phone service at the Mobil Mart.

Police officers and firefighters at the scene of a single-car accident Tuesday night. Police have charged the operator with drunken driving (second offense).

Cohasset woman faces second OUI offense

Also charged with illegal wiretapping

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 32-year-old Cohasset woman is facing drunken driving and illegal wire tapping charges following a single-car accident at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday (Oct. 4) on Nichols Road.

Police said Chelsea Orr, 101 Nichols Road, was under the influence of alcohol when the black SUV she was driving home struck a wall and flipped over.

Orr was arrested at the scene for operating under the influence of alcohol and transported to the hospital to be checked over after a paramedic found her hiding in some bushes.

Police said Orr, who was showing signs of intoxication, failed a series of field sobriety tests at the scene and admitted to having been drinking at a local restaurant in Cohasset.

Orr refused to submit to a blood test at the hospital where she was medically cleared by hospital staff. Refusal of a blood test results in loss of driver's license for 120 days. Orr was transported to the Cohasset Police Station for the remainder of the booking process.

Police said Orr, who is hockey legend Bobby Orr's daughter-in-law, was belligerent and threatened to have the officer fired. According to the police report, she used Bobby Orr's name and said she was very powerful. Her belligerent behavior continued: she informed police she had secretly tape-recorded conservations between police and herself on her iPhone, and threatened to sue. Police said she apparently used her cell phone to record the conversations and did not inform police she was doing so.

Orr, who was held on $1,000 cash bail, which her husband paid, is facing charges of operating under the influence of liquor (second offense); negligent operation of a motor vehicle; marked lanes violation; and unlawful wiretapping, which is a felony. Her phone was seized.

Nichols Road was shut down for more than an hour following the accident.

She plead not guilty when arraigned on the charges Wednesday at Quincy District Court.

Orr's first OUI was in Barnstable in 1997; that case was continued without a finding.

Hear Haydn at First Parish

Soloist plays Haydn sonatas on 19th century piano

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Between the two of them, Sylvia Berry and her husband Dale Munschy know quite a bit about antique musical instruments.

Berry, fortepiano soloist and organist at First Parish, along with Munschy, an instrument restorer and builder, are bringing back the sounds of Haydn's sonatas the way the tunes were meant to be heard back in the late 1700s.

"Those of us who play historical instruments are trying to play ones that are originals or copies of composers who were using them at the time," said Berry, who chose to play sonatas by Haydn on her English piano because it's the type the classical composer would have used back in the late 18th and early 19th centuries (Haydn died in 1809).

During her Sunday, Oct. 16 concert at First Parish at 3 p.m., Berry will be playing a grand piano built in 1806 that was restored by her husband. The piano, built by the London company John Broadwood and Sons, serves as an example of the type of instrument Franz Joseph Haydn would have played during his time in London.

"The Broadwood and Son grand I'll be playing, which Dale restored, was built in London in 1806 and is #3448," said Berry. "Haydn spent time in London and even had a work studio in the Broadwood shop during one of his visits. Broadwood was known as one of the best makers in London, if not the best. He had a royal contract!"

Munschy obtained the piano in 2009 from the Curtis Institute of Music in Berry's native Philadelphia. Munschy found out that Curtis was planning to deaccession the instrument from their collection.

"He was told 'if you can move this piano, you can have it,'" Berry said. "He was able to get this priceless antique instrument for free."

Berry and her husband also found pictures of their very piano in a French book on the history of the piano, published in both France and England during World War II.

"That's our actual piano," Berry said. "The company put in a serial number, and it matches the one in the book. Pianos weren't black back then," she added. "It's like looking at a piece of handmade furniture; you can see the patterns in the wood. Every piano looked different [back then], like a fingerprint."

Munschy got right to work on the instrument's restoration.

"He had to take it apart, break the case open and put it back together," said Berry. "It was scary, because it's over 200 years old."

During the process, Munschy uncovered signatures of the people who built the piano in the 1800s.

"It has a time machine quality to it," Berry said.

Berry explained that her husband brings an expert's touch to antique piano restorations, since he started out as a pianist himself.

"He is a professional piano technician," said Berry. "A lot of technicians don't play. But that's the reason his work is so good; when he finishes [restoring] an instrument, he can sit down and play it, and knows if it sounds good."

Berry, who hails from Philly, studied at the New England Conservatory in Boston, and spent six years living in the Netherlands studying the fortepiano at the Royal Conservatory in The Hague, met her husband after moving back to the Boston area. Munschy was working at the Harpsichord Clearing House in Rehoboth, where Berry brought her harpsichord in for repairs.

The two were married on October 24 last year.

"Since I'm into this early keyboard thing, people like myself who do that are interested in how it works," said Berry. "After work, I can talk shop with him. As a performer, he knows what I go through, so it's nice."

Berry said that Munschy will be on hand during her Oct. 16 concert to answer questions about the Broadwood piano and the restoration process. The two also plan to bring their laptop and share pictures of the instrument being taken apart and put back together.

COINS

It's something that Cohasset Jewelers owner Mark Cirone sees all the time. Well-to-do elderly customers, many of whom are smart and successful individuals, fall victim to coin scams. Cirone recently shared the story of how he helped one client recover several hundred thousand dollars, after he'd lost more than double that amount through fraudulent purchases.

"Some people just trust," said Cirone. "And these are multi-millionaires, professionals who are simply too busy to do the research."

And if these coin deals "sound too good to be true," it's because they are, Cirone said.

Of the widespread coin collecting scams out there, the jeweler said, "It's commercial carnage."

Richard, a wealthy business owner from the Cape, was contacted by over-the-phone salespeople calling from what he thought were reputable North American mint companies. The names he shared off-record are household names, but due to a legal agreement, they could not be printed in this article.

These scammers are "very rampant," said Richard. "The salesmen tell a good story on the phone. They start out small, [asking for] $1,000, $2,000. You work your way up to $25,000, $50,000. They try to get your confidence, build a rapport with you. They try to convince you that there are thieves out there, but they're not one of them."

Richard said that he fell prey to the coin cons because he had never been a coin collector, and did not know the true market value of the coins he was being sold.

"I was only in this for the investment," the business owner explained. "I wanted to get a good return on that investment.

"I'm a businessman," he added. "I'm a risk taker. I thought it was good timing; gold was a good buy."

However, Richard quickly learned, no deal is worth it "if you're paying too much up front."

Richard turned to Cirone, a family friend from whom his children had purchased their engagement rings over the years.

"We knew we could trust him," said Richard.

Cirone went to Richard's home in Sandwich and helped him catalog three safe deposits worth of coins.

"It was quite obvious he had been grossly overcharged on these coins," said Cirone.

Richard was originally planning to sell the lot at an auction in Texas, where, "on the high side," he would have recouped around one-third of what he paid for them, according to Cirone.

"We didn't choose that route," the jeweler said. "I thought we could probably do better."

A lifelong coin collector, Cirone was able to connect with contacts he knew in the coin business for help. Richard and Cirone worked with a numismatic society ("a watchdog agency whose owner is a well-renowned coin expert," said Cirone) that believed Richard had a case. They hired a lawyer, whose fees were paid by Richard, to write letters to the coin company (which goes by several different names, but is a single company headquartered in Minnesota) and ask for a reimbursement.

Through their methods, "we were quickly able to get the coin house to take the last three years' purchases back for a 15 percent re-stocking fee," said Cirone.

These coins had a market value of only $165,000, but the seller bought them back for over $300,000, "netting my client approximately double their current street value," Cirone explained. "While he's not made whole from the transaction, I was able to mitigate his loss."

Overall, Richard "ended up recovering $150,000 more than he would have recovered had he just sold [the coins] back to the marketplace," Cirone said.

In exchange for the reimbursement, the coin house asked for the re-stocking fee, and for their name to be kept out of the press. The entire process, from Richard contacting Cirone, having him research the market value of the coins, work with the numismatic society and the attorney and eventually get reimbursed by the coin company, took about six months starting around March of this year, said Richard.

Cirone wants other gold and coin buyers to know that if they, too, believe they have been the victims of fraud, they have options.

"There are avenues to recoup the losses if people have sustained them in their dealings buying gold and coins," the jeweler said.

He also urges customers to know "the integrity of the person you are dealing with."

"We're fiercely proud of the fact that we've won the Best of Boston Award [several times]," said Cirone. "It's reflective of how we treat our customers. We want to offer the best option for them. I could never take advantage of someone; it's not our style."

For coin buyers like Richard who have stumbled into a bad deal, "we're a great recovery option," Cirone said.

Richard is grateful to Cirone, who earned a small commission and consulting fee, for the help.

"Mark orchestrated the whole thing," Richard said. "I was on the fringe — they needed me to verify that Mark was working on my behalf."

Despite the bad deals he bought into, Richard said that he has yet to sell all of his coins back, however — of the 75 to 100 coins he estimated buying over the past decade, he still has a few left.

"My bet is that gold is going to be worth $5,000 an ounce," he said. "So we'll just hang in there — I'm going to hang onto those coins for a while."

FORE RIVER BRIDGE

Coast Guard to weigh in Selectmen hold off on sending letter

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The board of the selectmen is waiting a little longer to send a letter to the Mass. Department of Transportation (MassDOT) voicing their support for a bascule bridge design for the Fore River Bridge construction project.

The latest draft of their letter, penned by selectman Diane Kennedy, was presented during the Tuesday, Oct. 4 meeting. The board was first made aware of the Fore River Bridge issue, and how the new construction will affect Cohasset and its commuter population, during a presentation made during an August board meeting by representatives from the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association.

The Neighborhood Association asked the Cohasset board of selectmen to consider signing on with their group, along with the South Shore Coalition, in support of a bascule (drawbridge) design as opposed to a larger vertical lift design, the latter of which is being proposed by the MassDOT and the U.S. Coast Guard.

While most of the Cohasset selectmen were ready to side with the groups in favor of the bascule bridge, a few wanted to wait and hear what the Coast Guard had to say first.

Jennifer Oram, assistant to the Town Manager, said during last week's board meeting that she had tried to get in touch with a local Coast Guard representative and was waiting to hear back. This week, Oram told the board that she spoke with John McDonald, a local Coast Guard rep, and is also planning to speak with a rep from New York. She is trying to arrange a time for McDonald to make his case at an upcoming board meeting.

The board will wait until then to make a decision on which side of the construction debate to support.

DEFICIT

fiscal year 2011 deficit analysis paperwork, this amount is from an illegally paid bill and was accidentally counted twice.

"As such, the deficit now stands at $274,130," Coughlin wrote. "This may change as reconciliation progresses.

"The bottom line is that the water deficit remains significant," Coughlin continued, "Stanbrook's analysis of the reasons for the deficit was correct and the commission is now confident in his revised calculation."

Coughlin went on to say that the commission also accepted the joint management concept with the sewer commission, along with the role of the town manager as chief financial officer of the town, and therefore overseer of both the water and sewer departmental expenditures.

During the Oct. 4 selectmen meeting, Coughlin said that following his and Stanbrook's appearance at last week's water board meeting, "We believe the water commission is comfortable with the perimeters of the deficit."

The commission's chair, however, begged to differ.

"I completely disagree with that," DeCaprio said during a phone interview. "There's double-counting in that deficit; I'm not sure that number is robust."

DeCaprio previously indicated that during interim town manager Steve Lombard's tenure, the town shorted the water department by $53,000. He also said that the deficit has to do with receivables, and is not an operational deficit.

Water commissioner Lenora Jenkins said that the department is missing $104,000 in payments by the school department, and is "still working with the state on that."

The school committee brought the issue up during their Sept. 28 meeting. In an interview following their October 5 meeting, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that per a law passed in 1994 and reaffirmed in 2008, the water commission should not be billing town departments.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro said that the school has paid this bill for the past six years, even though they were no longer required to.

"We still did not get an explanation as to why we cannot collect a bill from the school," said DeCaprio. "The state is telling us this receivable is counting against us... the town is saying we're not allowed to collect from other departments. If we just eliminated the school's receivable from our deficit and corrected the mistakes from the double counting from stuff we've already paid for, we would not have a deficit."

DeCaprio maintains that the deficit "is 100 percent receivables."

Jenkins agrees: "The problem is [with] receivables," she said. "It's very frustrating; we have people coming down on us. They don't realize the reason we're having problems is because people are not paying their bills to us."

However, "with municipal finance law, you can't count receivables," said Jenkins.

DeCaprio believes that the town finance department has made "admitted mistakes."

"The double counting is a mistake on their part, and has still has not been rectified," he said. "We're still carrying that as a deficit."

"Until we can come down with numbers and get reconciled, it's hard to accept that number," said Jenkins. "I'm with Peter on this; I just don't see it.

"It will take us a long time to rectify their figures with our figures," Jenkins concluded.

Jenkins added that the water department is "seriously looking into a shut-off policy," which she said was discussed during their last meeting. "We want people to be up to date and current."

Deficit discussed during several recent meetings:

September 20: Town auditor Tony Roselli appears before board of selectmen and reports water department deficit of $350,000.

September 27: Water commission chairman Peter DeCaprio attends the selectmen meeting and claims that the number is inaccurate, and that it was the first he'd heard of it; he tells the board that if there is a deficit, it's not an operational one but is due to receivables; part of the problem, he states, is that the water department has not been able to collect from the school dept., and that the town shorted them $53,000 during interim manager Steve Lombard's tenure.

September 28: Town manager Mike Coughlin attends his first water commission meeting and asserts his authority as joint manager of water and sewer; director of finance John Stanbrook also attends, and presents an adjusted deficit figure, reducing it by $95,397.77.

The school committee meets and discusses the school's outstanding water bill; they refer back to a 1994 law, reaffirmed in 2008, that states that they do not have to pay an inter-departmental bill because the water board is not allowed to bill town departments

October 4: Coughlin tells the board of selectmen that the water commissioners were presented the adjusted figure last week, and that he believes they are "comfortable with the perimeters of the deficit."

October 5: Following the school committee meeting, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo reiterates to the Mariner that the school is not neglecting paying their bill, but that they are being told not to per the law; school business manager Dave DeGennaro says that the school has paid their bill for the past six years, even after they no longer had to do so.

BRIEFLY

Facebook policy being considered

During the Wednesday, Oct. 5 school committee meeting, a subcommittee consisting of members Jeanne Astino and Linda Snowdale updated the board on their charge to revisit and revise the wording of a professional conduct policy on staff members' use of Facebook and social networking sites.

Astino reported that she and Snowdale discussed adding a word to the existing policy (which has yet to be formally adopted). The policy states that the school stresses maintaining decorum in an online digital world and discourages personal communication with students; "personal" was the word added to the policy.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that she would like to work with Astino and Snowdale on the policy, since she and the school principals would be enforcing it.

Astino said that while the policy does not prevent people from using Facebook, "it's good business practice" to have one in place.

School solar panel update

The school committee's liaisons to the alternative energy committee, vice-chairman Jeanne Astino and school business manager Dave DeGennaro, attended last week's alternative energy committee on Wednesday, Sept. 28 and presented them with an RFP (request for proposals) for potential energy firms to consider installing a solar array on the roof of the middle-high school.

The school committee wants to solicit the AEC's input before submitting the RFP to firms. Astino and DeGennaro brought the latest draft of the RFP to Wednesday night's school committee meeting. DeGennaro reported that he had emailed the latest draft to the AEC members and had made a few changes from his original draft. AEC member Marie Caristi-MacDonald sent him a few quick changes; DeGennaro is awaiting additional suggestions.

DeGennaro also said that he is trying to find out when the roof was built, and who built it; the age of the roof will determine the type of array that can be installed. DeGennaro also plans to discuss the matter with town manager Mike Coughlin and "Greenbush Guys" Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, town engineers and special assistants to the town manager.

Sheriff joins fight against homelessness

Recognizing that homelessness is a significant factor in the crime rate, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has agreed to share statistical data with researchers in an effort to decrease homelessness and its drain on public resources.

"In many cases, there appear to be links between habitual criminality and habitual homelessness," Bellotti said.

Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is working with the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance in order to track the correlation between homelessness and the commission of crime.

MHSA is working with research evidence showing that helping a homeless person find permanent housing actually saves taxpayer money. For instance, annual Medicaid costs for homeless people plummeted by 67 percent when they found permanent housing.

The Sheriff's Office gathers information about inmates upon their intake at the Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham. MHSA and its partner, Case Strategy Group, have found certain statistics from this information to be valuable in determining how best to attack the problem of homelessness. Bellotti recently met with MHSA executive director Joe Finn and Case Strategy Group founder James Quinn to discuss how best to coordinate the transfer of data.

"The fight against crime requires us to constantly think outside the box and to recognize that so many of these societal problems are inter-related," Bellotti said. "The smart approach is a comprehensive approach, and that is the approach we are taking."

AROUND TOWN

Cabaret coming back for fifth year!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Happy fall

Hello Cohasset, I hope that everyone has settled into the fall season relatively well and are embracing the cooler weather, changing colors on the trees and taking the time to enjoy it all. I want to wish everyone a great, happy and safe Columbus Day weekend.

Cabaret

Here is a great date that needs to be entered into your calendars now! Another year and Cohasset Cabaret will be back for the 5th time. The show dates will be Friday and Saturday night Nov. 4th & 5th at 8 p.m. On both evenings a social/ raffle hour, with appetizers provided, will take place from 7 to 8p.m.. This year's Cabaret is being directed by Douglas Trudeau, who is known to South Shore audiences as the founder and director of Showstoppers. He has written, "That's Entertainment" for this year's Cohasset show. The Showstoppers have performed throughout New England, Florida and as far west as California. The show will be comprised of solo and group numbers, comedy, and of course toe-tapping dancing. A special treat will be Broadway Kidz a talented group of young people who range in age from 10 to 14 who will sing and dance their way into your hearts with two delightful musical numbers.

You can try your luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "Cabaret Style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry. Tickets are on sale now and the cost is $25. You can purchase tickets at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-413-7540 for further information.

Benefit

The Adamo Day Spa & Retreat is hosting a benefit day for the Susan G. Komen Foundation for the Cure and wanted to share this news with the community. On Friday, Oct. 14th from 11 a.m.-2 p.m., come and join others for an afternoon of complimentary services and help to raise money to find a cure. Linda Crisafulli from Dr. Perricone and Adamo's staff will be giving complimentary express facials, eyebrow shaping, card readings, chair massage & spray tanning for the face. Any donations will be donated to the Susan G. Komen Foundation for the Cure. Healthy snacks and Tazo tea from Starbucks will be served, there will be a raffle for a spa gift certificate. For each Swan Boat Boston Mint lip-gloss sold, $5 will be donated to the charity. Please call the Spa to reserve your complimentary appointment at 781-383-3011.

Award

Congratulations to Cohasset's John McNabb, who received the Dexter Brackett Award for the Most Meritorious article published in the Journal of the New England Water Works Association in 2010 for his article "Successful Rehabilitation of Cohasset's Ailing Water System" and the Journal Award of Special Recognition for his 2010 article "Analysis of the Massachusetts Drinking Water Infrastructure." The award was presented by Marcis Kemp, chairman of the Publications Awards Committee, and Michael Covellone, president of NEWWA, at the 130th annual conference of the NEWWA in Newport, R.I., on Sept. 26.

John was an elected Water Commissioner in Cohasset from 1997 through 2010 and was chairman 1998 through 2005.

Gridironfest

Go Blue, Go White, Wanna Win? Fight, Fight! The Gridiron is hosting the "Gridironfest" at Atlantica on Saturday, Oct. 29th to raise money for the Cohasset High School football program. From 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. the Gridiron will host this first annual event with great raffle prizes, appetizers, music and a cash bar. Tickets are $25 for the function. For further information please call Lillian Curley at 781-383-0695. This will be a great night out to support school sports in town, in this case for the Cohasset High School Football program. Book your babysitters, tell your friends to do the same and get ready to a night filled with fun.

Witches ball

Halloween is coming, Halloween is coming, skeletons will soon be after you... The South Shore Art Center will hold a Halloween celebration on Friday, Oct. 21 at 8 pm at the Red Lion Inn. Andrea Hillier, event chair, is seeking donations for the Witches' Auction to be held throughout the evening. She can be reached at hilliersinboston@yahoo.com. The event is titled "The Witches' Ball" and will include fabulous food, entertainment, fortune telling, and an auction of art, travel opportunities, jewelry, gifts, services and more! Donations to the auction are still being sought; call the Art Center if you are interested in contributing . Guests are encouraged to dress creatively for the event — perhaps a favorite artist or painting, a witch or warlock, a politician or a construction worker — all are welcome! Tickets for The Witches' Ball, at Red Lion Inn are $75 for Art Center members and $85 for non-members. Tickets must be purchased in advance. All proceeds support the exhibitions and education programs of South Shore Art Center. To purchase tickets, visit www.ssac.org or contact the Art Center at 781-383-2787.

That is the news for this week. Send all of your news for next weeks copy to me no later than 5 pm on Tuesday! Thanks Cohasset and have a wonderful week ahead.

You can help the Food Pantry

Do you have a garden? Fresh vegetables may be left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m.

Other needs include coffee, juice, clam chowder, corned beef hash, mayonnaise, jelly/jam, canned fruit , spaghetti sauce, applesauce, maple syrup, cereal, dish and laundry detergent, toothpaste/toothbrushes and bar soap.

Donations can be dropped off at the rear entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays, at Stop & Shop or at local churches on Sundays. Donations may also be left at the St. Anthony Parish Center, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3.m.

To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call.

La Leche League to meet

Looking for information about how to start breastfeeding? Have questions about how often or how long babies nurse? Have concerns about spoiling a baby, managing household tasks with a new baby or helping the baby's father feel comfortable in his role? Thinking about returning to work and wonder if it's still possible to nurse? Learn more about these issues and the breastfeeding family at the next La Leche League meeting at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Oct. 11, at Paul Pratt Library. The program will be "Baby Arrives: The Family & the Breastfed Baby." All mothers and mothers-to-be are welcome. Babies are welcome as well.

SPIRITUAL ENRICHMENT PROGRAM

Art through the ages

Abbey lecture series starts

By Kathleen McKenna
Special to the Mariner

Art is something that many people find hard to understand, and therefore hard to appreciate. But sometimes all that's needed is some light shone on the subject by some who is able to share expertise in a way that's entertaining and also makes sense.

One hundred or so people who took advantage of two free lectures — presented last week by the monks of Glastonbury Abbey at the Abbey Conference Center — were captivated by artwork, commentary, and perspective shared by a master, Dr. Ubaldo DiBenedetto, Ph.D., of Cohasset.

The lecture and discussion, titled "Understand Religious Paintings: The Staircase to Reality," focused on the way paintings changed as Renaissance-era artists learned more about the world around them. It was infused with energy by DiBenedetto, who has a gift for discussing great works of art in a way that even someone who's never spent a day in a museum can understand.

The award-winning scholar has taught Italian Renaissance Art at Harvard for 30 years. He explained how paintings created during the Renaissance, and most classic art since then, was influenced by innovations and new technologies of the era.

Aside from a career that includes writing numerous books and articles on Renaissance art, and creating a unique program on the subject for Harvard University, DiBenedetto has a unique story of his own. He was born and raised in Piscara, Italy, and came to America as an exchange student while he was in college. While here, he decided to enlist in the U.S. military and fought in the Korean War, where he was wounded and permanently disabled. He returned to the U.S. settled in Cohasset with his wife, earned a Ph.D. in art history, and built a career based on his love for Renaissance artwork.

His lecture at the Abbey included a slideshow of paintings of religious artwork from the Middle Ages, through the Renaissance, and beyond.

"This subject is very dear to my heart," said D'Benedetto, who's also written two science-fiction novels about the perils of global warming. "Renaissance art is all geometry, all harmony, yet also all beauty."

Aesthetics, he said with the lilting accent he retains from his homeland, has always been the foundation for any artist. But when people began studying and understanding mathematics, astronomy, and geometry during the Renaissance, artists used those principles to give their work perspective and harmony.

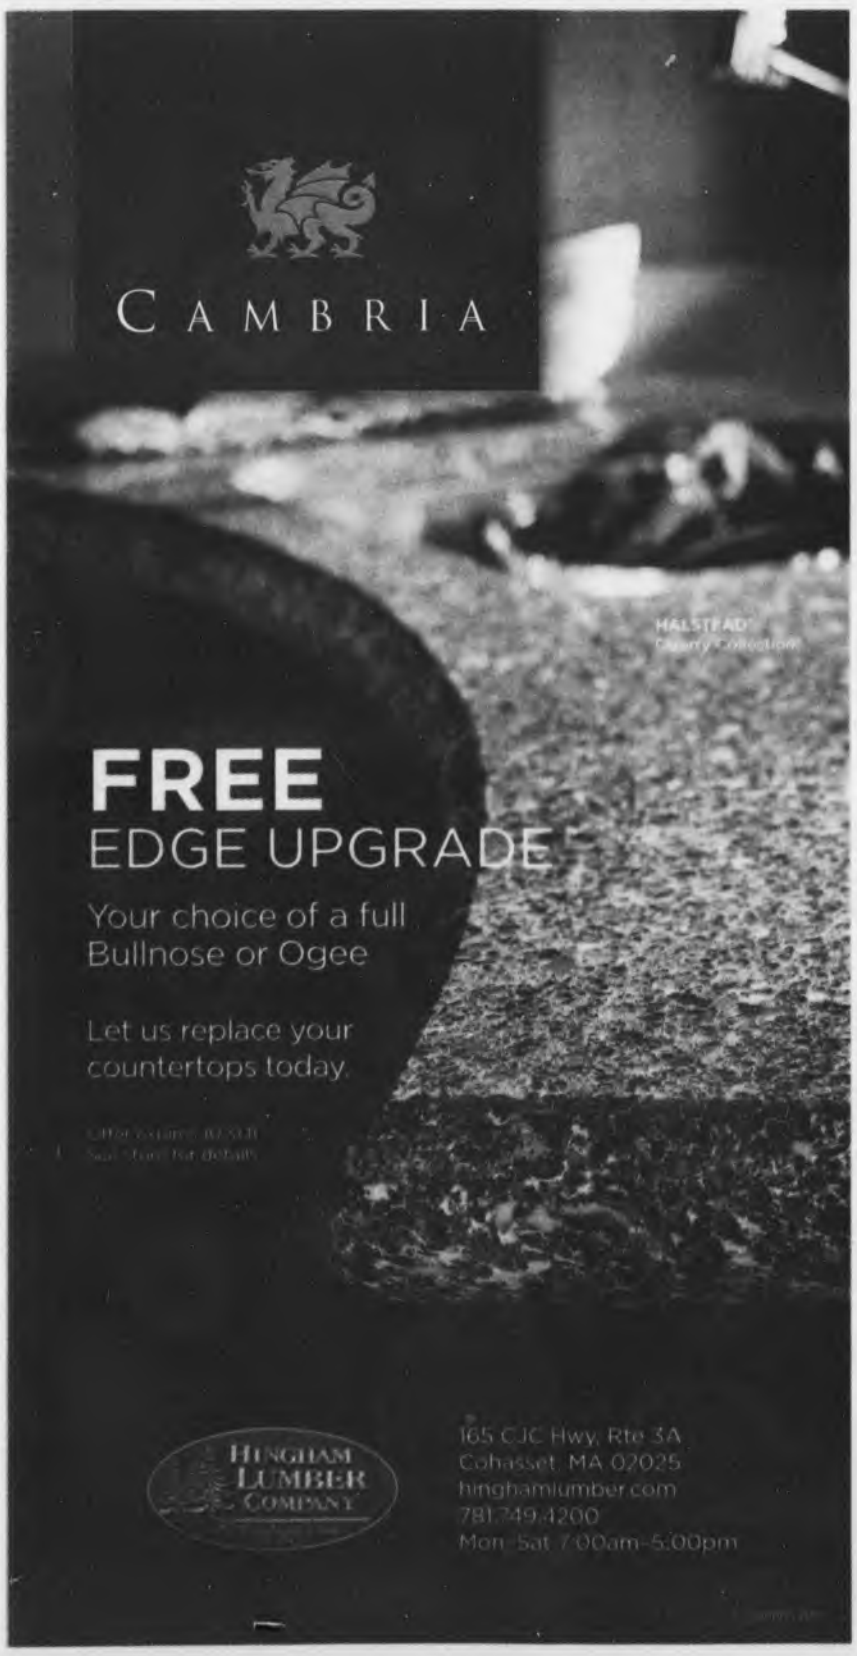
He shared the work of artists including Michelangelo, Botticelli, Caravaggio, and da Vinci, and said they all employed "rules of science" to paint images that were far more realistic than their predecessors.

Many of the slides he showed were familiar, such as da Vinci's Last Supper, and countless portraits of Mary and the baby Jesus.

"Here we see perspective in the hands of a genius," he said of one rendering of Mary. "She is so alive here, she is coming off the canvas. The Madonna painted in the Middle Ages looked as if she was stuck to a wall."

Dr. Ubaldo DiBenedetto, Ph.D., of Cohasset. COURTESY PHOTO

A lively question-and-answer period followed both hour-long lectures.



Brother Dan Walters, OSB, director of the Abbey Conference Center, said that it was a special treat to host Dr. DiBenedetto, and to hear him speak, because he is a regular at Abbey services and activities.

"He came as a favor to the Abbey, and we're very grateful," Walters said. "Often our speakers travel a great distance to speak here, and it was nice to have someone who's so knowledgable and entertaining, and who's also a part of our community."

The monks of Glastonbury Abbey are Catholic, but their spiritual enrichment program, which kicked off last month, is designed to celebrate all religions and all aspects of spirituality. When Will You Commit... to Change?

By Elizabeth Johnson

You will blink, and before you know it – it will be 2012. What do you want for yourself before January 1st arrives?

Take a look at the calendar. The 3 months between October 1st and January 1st are the same amount of time as January 1st to April 1st. For some reason, however, we use "school starting up again", "loose-fitting wintry clothes" and "the holidays" to avoid committing to a rock-solid health and fitness plan before January 1st.

Jumpstart your program now! Imagine how your routines, body composition, habits and thoughts around fitness and nutrition could be different. Take a minute to visualize yourself, the clothes you would wear, the way you would carry yourself, and what you would say when complimented!... if you could commit to change right now.

While individual personal training may cost as much as $60 to $80, or more an hour elsewhere, Get In Shape For Women offers small-group sessions that are affordable for as little as $19 a session. Women train under the supervision of a personal trainer who has an understanding of what women want and what they need. Tone, sculpt and transform your body today with top trainers at Get In Shape For Women.

Member Stacey Dodge remembers January 2010, "I sat disgusted with myself for allowing another year to go by without reaching my weight loss goal. I saw the Get In Shape For Women ads and decided to check out the studio in my town. After my first trial session I decided to join and started the following Monday. I arrived at my appointment time and hated what I saw in the wall of mirrors. The sight made me determined to change my life."

After a year and a half of being a member, Stacey has seen incredible results. "As of today, I have lost 30 pounds and have gone from a tight size 12 to a very comfortable size 8. I am in the best shape of my entire life. I have never been stronger. I will be continuing with my membership, as this is a feeling I never want to be without."

7TH ANNIVERSARY

Darilynn's celebrates milestone

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

This fall marks the 7th anniversary for Darilynn's Home Presence in the heart of Cohasset Village. The store's namesake, owner Darilynn Evans, would like to thank local residents for keeping it local, with a 7th anniversary celebration from October 13-16th.

Thursday will kickoff the festivities with a Simon Pearce Trunk Show — all weekend long — featuring the Vermont company's signature glassware and pottery. Simultaneously, a Customer Appreciation Sale will take place. The weekend will continue with a Candy Corn Guessing Contest and giveaways with purchases. Wine, treats and sweets all weekend long. Darilynn encourages everyone to stop in and share in the celebration. She wants to say "thank you" to all who have made her dream of owning her own store a reality.

"For anyone contemplating owning their own business, especially retail, there is a lot of hard work behind the scenes," says Evans. "The reward is that I have met some wonderful people and have a great group of repeat customers. Many come in to buy a gift and we often find ourselves sharing stories about our families and our lives."

Darilynn's success has not come without its share of challenges. In 2005 a car drove through the store's front windows. The shop re-opened almost immediately after the accident, as customers and staff navigated around the workers who were fixing the damage. The store remained at half capacity for three months and fully closed after that for a month of complete renovation. Darilynn's has also endured infrastructure improvements to the town, which included the sidewalk and street being torn up directly outside the store for many weeks. The most recent challenge, which is shared with all small businesses, is to continue to thrive during a sluggish economy.

Despite the adversity, Darilynn's customer base continues to grow as does the Bridal Registry aspect of her business. Darilynn credits her staff for making people feel welcome and comfortable while they shop.

"I'm so fortunate to have a business right here in my hometown."
Darilynn Evans

"I'm so fortunate to have a business right here in my hometown. I've gotten involved with many town-wide organizations, like the Chamber of Commerce, which promote business in the village," says Evans. "My biggest reward is when I hear someone come in and say 'I knew I could find just the right gift in your store.'"

Darilynn's 7th anniversary will kickoff on Thursday with wine and cheese all afternoon and more fun throughout the weekend. Visit Darilynn's on facebook.

JUNIOR GARDENERS

Tree planting at Deer Hill

By Joan Carlo
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Community Garden Club, Junior Gardeners, mission for several years has been the beautification of the Deer Hill School courtyard. The 25 coed students, grades three through five, meet once a month and are exposed to diverse topics from horticulture to flower arranging, ecology, recycling, conservation and going green. The September program for the past two years has involved Chris Kennedy, manager/co-owner and landscape designer of Kennedy's Country Gardens.

Mr. Kennedy's design is to have a tree of interest for each season. Last September, Kennedy's Country Gardens generously donated a Stellar Pink Rutgers Dogwood. Even though this superstar is disease and pest resistant we didn't know if it had the strength and "courage" to survive the brutal winter, the rainy springtime, the burning heat of the summer and the hurricane. Though the leaves are sparse on the branches and it looks fragile, the children were overjoyed to see it had survived.

Once again, on Sept. 19, the temperature 70 degrees, Kennedy's Country Gardens gifted another tree, the Arnold Promise Witch-Hazel (Hamamelis x intermedia). It will have fantastic fall attributes. Producing clusters of fragrant, yellow to yellowish orange blooms that have a reddish center from October to December. When the colder days arrive the petals will gracefully curl up to protect themselves from winter damage. The leaves will be bright green in the spring.

Each tree was placed by Mr. Kennedy who dug the hole, then each child got "down and dirty" scooped up a hand full of soil and threw the dirt in the hole. With pride, they then claimed ownership of "their" tree, the Arnold Promise Witch Hazel.

We truly have community involvement in this project, a local business, Kennedy's Country Gardens, the Cohasset DPW groundsmen, the Deer Hill School PSO who donated $200 for fertilizer. The volunteers of the CGCC have spread it in the flowers beds the Junior Gardeners created under the tutelage of the CGCC members. Our sincere thanks to all who participated so generously of their time, efforts, energy and support.

Joan Carlo is Junior Gardeners chairperson for Cohasset Community Garden Club.

KENNEDY'S COUNTRY GARDENS

Planting hope in backyards

By Kelly Anne Clinton
kclinton@wickedlocal.com

Chris Kennedy of Kennedy's Country Gardens in Scituate shovels top soil for Cohasset resident Jean O'Halloran. Kennedy's donated the plants, helped design the garden, and provided labor for the Hope in Bloom garden in 2009.

For about four years now through the non-profit, Hope in Bloom, Kennedy's Country Gardens in Scituate, has been planting gardens for women who are undergoing treatment for breast cancer.

Chris Kennedy, a Cohasset resident and owner of Kennedy's, said they do all the planning and labor to install the gardens, making sure the flowers and plants are visible and that everything is just right.

Some of the gardens are filled with colorful flowers while others are vegetable gardens, but either way he said the goal is to help the patient feel better. Kennedy, along with his staff, has planted six gardens for six different women and their families. The six are now breast cancer survivors.

"I don't know the statistics, and I know treatments are getting better and chances for survival are better now than before, but you'd like to think that in the back of your mind the gardens had something to do with it," said Kennedy.

Roberta Dehman Hershon started Hope in Bloom when she planted and tended to a garden for her friend, Beverley Eisenberg, who was diagnosed with breast cancer. Eisenberg lost her battle with breast cancer in 2005, but Hershon saw the value of a garden in the healing process. She decided to build the non-profit, planting and taking care of gardens for patients with breast cancer.

The whole idea was that tending a garden or having a garden to look at could be part of a healing process when under going treatment and afterward. On the Hope in Bloom website it describes the mission of the organization: "Healing gardens have been proven to be therapeutic sanctuaries offering both comfort and hope to meet the emotional and psychological needs of patients and their families."

Kennedy said he decided to join the mission because he felt his business philosophy aligned with the non-profit.

"There are so many charities out there, and this just seems to be one of the charities that lines up with what we do," said Kennedy. "I'm always open minded to helping someone in the community and when it has to go with gardening it piques my interest even more."

Kennedy said the garden serves as a kind of distraction from the constant worries and visits to the hospital.

"The garden gives (patients) something to look forward to in the morning before they go to treatment and when they come home," said Kennedy. "It's a positive place for them to go."

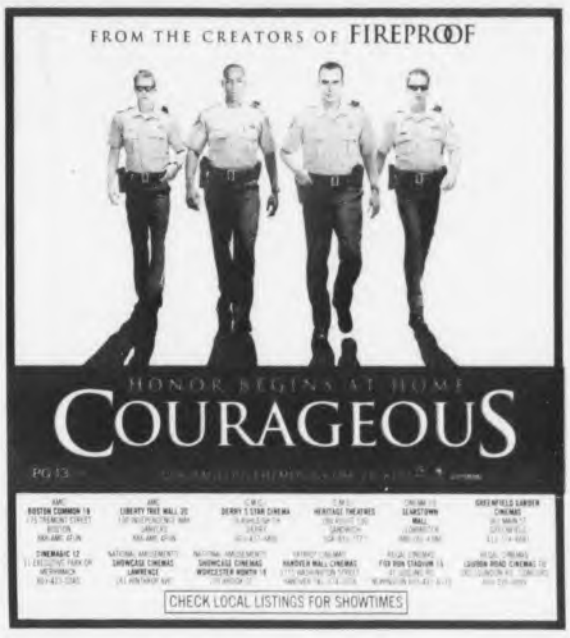
Hope in Bloom gardens are something tangible and can be a part of a patient's daily life.

"There are a lot of charities that raise funds to go towards research, but this one goes to the people who already have it. We can make someone's day or treatment process better by planting a garden," said Kennedy. "Finding a cure is important, but we also have to think about the people now who are going through treatment."

While Kennedy said he would like to be able to do more gardens, unfortunately the cost of supplies, labor and plants limits the amount of gardens that he can be part of.

"There's a lot of women and men who have breast cancer and unfortunately the demand for gardens is greater than the charity can keep up with," said Kennedy.

In an effort to both raise funds for the Hope in Bloom and also to invite the community to the garden center, Kennedy's will be hosting a fall festival on Columbus Day weekend. At the festival there will be a live jazz band, Dixie Land, demonstrations by local artists, artisans, and local vendors, as well as silent auction items. For children, there will be a scarecrow decorating contest, and pumpkin bowling games. The event will take place on Saturday, Oct. 8 through Monday Oct. 10 starting at 11 a.m. each day.



"It's going to be a pretty big deal," said Lisa Kelleher of Kennedy's Country Gardens. "We really want to raise some more money for Hope in Bloom and also we want to have a family fun festival for the community."

For more information on the event please visit kennedyscountrygardens.com.

OUR VIEW

Help 'Paint It All Pink'

Don't worry. Your eyes are not deceiving you. Today's edition of the Cohasset Mariner is indeed rosy, and our print and online readers will find splashes of pink continuing throughout the month in the newspaper and on wickedlocalcohasset.com. We're tying a familiar pink ribbon to all of our breast cancer coverage this month and proudly displaying it on the Mariner's nameplate. It's all part of our newspaper's effort to support breast cancer awareness.

The month of October has become associated with that pink, and as we have for the past three years, The Cohasset Mariner is kicking off Breast Cancer Awareness Month today with our annual "Paint It All Pink" campaign in conjunction with our parent company, GateHouse Media New England. GateHouse is "Painting It All Pink" across all of its newspapers and websites in Massachusetts this month.

The power of pink is a testament to the countless lives that have been touched by breast cancer, reaching well beyond the disease's victims — both women, and, in some rare cases men. One in eight women in this country will be diagnosed with breast cancer sometime in their lives, and their networks of family and friends make it almost impossible not to be touched in some way.

The color pink reminds people of what remains to be done in terms of research toward a cure for a disease that is expected to claim nearly 40,000 lives in this country. It reminds "warriors" that they are far from alone on this battlefield. And it reminds those in the world of science and politics that this is a force to be reckoned with.

Our "Pink" content today and throughout October, ranges from news stories on the latest treatments — offered both locally and regionally — and the encouraging statistics that show more and more people are beating breast cancer, to features on groups and individuals contributing to the cause through fund-raising efforts.

We have written profiles on people here in our own communities bravely battling the disease now, and those who have conquered cancer, but remain committed to spreading awareness and offering support to others undergoing treatment and recovery.

But by far our most compelling and inspiring content has come from those of you who have shared your personal stories with us. Breast cancer survivors and those of you touched by the disease through a family member or friend, reached out to let us know in your own words what you are going through, what you have been through, and how you have coped with cancer.

You've inspired and touched us with your stories of perseverance and encouragement to "never give up" and to find strength and comfort in faith, family and friends offering support. Those stories, those words of hope and healing, will remain with us and our readers long after we turn the calendar to November; helping to ensure breast cancer awareness is a year-round reality.

Like all diseases, it takes effort to keep up the fight for awareness, early detection, treatment — and, hopefully one day with the help of all these efforts, science will develop a cure. That research takes money. And many companies, including GateHouse Media New England, are proud to lend support to that effort.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Praise for Conservation Commission

It concerns me that the Cohasset Conservation Commission has been and still is subjected to unwarranted invective — if not falsely accused of inappropriate conduct.

Over months and months, the Commission has held multiple meetings on the Cat Dam issue — graciously granting a series of postponements to the anti Con-Com group, plus extensions of further study time for its hired lawyer. Yet, the Chairman and his Committee, with partially displaced members, have been subjected to contempt and discourtesy bordering on intimidation.

The Town of Cohasset is not only fortunate but should be grateful to the Commission for their several years of acquired environmental knowledge and conscientiousness in their desire to ensure compliance with the Wetlands-Protection Act of the Massachusetts Legislature in alignment with the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection — and the United States Environmental Protection Agency in its support of the National Clean Water Act.

The Commission persevered throughout the Hearings despite being thwarted by other entities whose members seem to have more personal interests.

Edward F. Woods, 231 Jerusalem Road

Breakdown of good governance

The process used to replace Conservation Commission (ConCom) incumbents, on July 12, was inexcusable. The decision of the Board of Selectmen (BOS) to ask for a State AG inquiry is a fait accompli, but will be a waste of time and money. The AG will be looking for violations of law, whereas, we are dealing with a breakdown of civility and good governance. The BOS should have discussed their concerns with the Chairman of the ConCom and given him time to redress any personnel or procedural deficiencies. It is not too late for the BOS to make a unanimous and unqualified apology to past and present ConCom members.

The Selectmen are "digging in their heels." As they stubbornly stonewall broad public sentiment, the cancerous perception of arrogance grows.

PUSHING THE EDGE

How do you like your coffee – with a head or a heart?

GLENN MANGURIAN

I like a good cup of coffee. I like a nice hot cup with milk in the morning and a cappuccino in the late afternoon. Luckily, we have many choices for our daily coffee "fix".

Yesterday, I stopped into Starbucks for my afternoon cappuccino. I like going to Starbucks. I appreciate its mission to "inspire and nurture the human spirit – one person, one cup, and one neighborhood at a time." As I entered Starbucks, I was calmed by the muted colors tones of the décor and the aroma of freshly brewed coffee. The space was tastefully appointed with plush furniture and coffee-sipping music played in the background. As I approached the counter, a young man addressed me very professionally.

"How can I help you this afternoon, sir?" I responded, "I'll have a small cappuccino."

"Certainly sir. One tall cappuccino."

"No", I said, "I want a small cappuccino."

"Yes, sir", he responded. "Our smalls are called talls. Sir, would you like that with skim, soy or whole milk?"

"Whole milk, please," I responded.

"Would you like that 'wet', sir?"

"Wet! What's 'wet'?" I asked.

"Wet is more steamed milk and less foam. You know the baristas measure the amount of foam to make it right consistently."

"Wow, that's precision", I said to myself.

The entire Starbucks experience is tuned to excellence. Little is left to chance. I like Starbucks because I know I will be treated professionally and will consistently purchase a great cup of java.

Well, this morning I left home early and was in dire need for some additional caffeine. I passed several Dunkin' Donuts looking for a Starbucks. Finally, I pulling into the local Dunkin' and got in line. The store was awash in bright pink and orange colors the "yelled" at me to wake up. The smell of yummy donuts permeated the space. When I reached the front of the line, I was greeted by lovely, middle aged woman with a nice Boston accent. She was right out of central casting. She was everyone's "Aunt Edna".

"Good morning dear. What can I getcha?"

"I'll have a just a regular small coffee."

"Two or three shugas?" she asked. "No, sugars please. Just a regular coffee" I replied.

"Honey, regular coffee has cream and shuga", she responded wondering if I was from a different planet.

"I'm sorry. Just the coffee with a little milk."

"How 'bout a nice jelly donut to go with that coffee, sweety?"

Dear, honey, sweety – I started wondering if I was related to this woman? "No, thank you. Just the coffee", I said.

"Ok, buttercup. You have a nice day now."

So, there you are. In Hingham we have a wonderful choice for our coffee. We can go to Starbucks and know that we will be treated professionally or we can go to Dunkin' and be treated like a member of the family. Coffee from the head or with a heart – it's your choice. Both are "wicked good".

By the way some days when I need a jolt of positive energy to pick up my spirits, I go to the Dunkin' drive-thru and order a small cup and tell them to hold the coffee.

A new safety organization to think about — Some thing we don't often think about is the organization, behind the scenes, that it takes to operate Fire and Police Departments. If we call 911 and the appropriate emergency force appears at the right location when needed, we are very happy and don't give the work required to make that happen a second thought. But, what really makes an emergency department operate? It is usually a staff of dedicated police officers or firefighters who are willing to put their lives "on the line." However, like any organization, there are management and organizational issues that must be handled. With the present Police and Fire organizations behind the scenes operations are hard to do and sometimes nearly impossible.

For example, during the preparations for hurricane Irene both the Police and Fire Chiefs were totally consumed with the plans and other preparations that were being made minute by minute with the emergency planning group. Yet, while the Fire Chief was immersed in these activities, there was no one to do the administrative work necessary to generate the payroll data so that the firefighters / EMTs could be paid. There just is no other member of the force who can take over the administration of the department in lieu of the chief. If the chief is out for any reason, no one can step in and perform his function. Also, remember that the firefighters work rotating shifts so that those who have assignments that interface with the public, such as fire safety inspections, have limited availability. When they are on a night shift they can't perform these fire safety inspections. The addition of an Assistant Chief would allow for flexibility and consistency. When the role of Assistant Chief is combined with other duties, it would reduce the need for overtime and improve services like fire inspection services.

For very similar reasons of safety and consistency, the Police Department is proposing establishing the position of Deputy Chief. The Deputy Chief would be able to act in the stead of the Chief when he is absent for any reason. This is essential in a structured organization like Police, (or Fire) so that in the absence of the Chief there is always someone who has both the knowledge and authority to assume command. Remember, for the safety of all of our residents, it is normally in emergency situations that the safety forces are really needed. When we call upon them to act, there must be someone to make the proper command decisions. Oh yes, Chief DeLuca estimates that this new position will reduce his overtime budget by over 20 percent.

When trucks are at end of their safe life — While we are talking about safety, we'll segue into the DPW. We have talked about the DPW a number of times as the unsung heroes of the Town. They are incredibly clever and have made do by patching their equipment together with bailing wire and chewing gum. That's not literally true, but you get the picture. They go a great distance keep their equipment running out of necessity. Let's look at a couple of examples. The DPW has a truck they affectionately call the "13" truck. The 13 is a 1996 diesel truck used by the Tree and Park portion of the DPW. It has a "chipper" body, which is a stake body type of truck with a light duty wooden box for holding branches, grass clippings, trash and so on. The inside of the bed floor is rusted through in multiple places and the stakes and their supports are rusted through as shown in the photos. And, the floor of the driver's compartment is covered with sheet metal patches. Oh yes, by the way, this truck is needed on a daily basis.

The 1982 bucket truck was used to maintain street lights, lights around the schools and other Town buildings, to trim trees and remove branches and do other elevated work. It was condemned several years ago during its annual safety inspection because the mounting floor for the bucket assembly rusted out and the fiberglass man-bucket had split open. Clearly, to even to attempt to use this truck would be a breach of every safety rule. Since the bucket truck's unavailability the DPW has been unable to do the things this truck was intended for and has to hire outside vendors to do that work. And, oh yes, a bucket truck has been on the DPW's capital list for several years to no avail.

Cohasset needs these DPW services so we should consider giving them the tools to provide those services safely. These trucks just need to be replaced.

FOR THE RECORD

Do you have something to say?

GREGORY MATHIS

Blog is a funny word, probably because it's a letter off from being blob, which I happen to type a lot because "g" is right above the "b" key on the keyboard and I'm not as careful as I should be when typing.

But a blog is very different than a blob, at least in many cases.

The word blog started to sneak into our vocabulary during the late 1990s and early 2000s, as we began to understand the power of the Internet and the tools at our disposal.

Blogs have evolved into a useful medium to share information and generate dialogue with an online community. An effective blog has many posts per week to help further discussion and keep the conversation moving. There is more interaction with the audience through a blog than a commentary or opinion piece in the newspaper. Comments on blogs are more immediate than writing a letter to the editor or a guest commentary and waiting several days for it to appear on the op-edit page of the newspaper.

One thing good bloggers have in common is they have something to say. Whether it's a hobby, a political agenda, sharing and discussing items of local interest or expertise to share, people blog for many reasons. Most of all, they blog because they have opinions to share with a greater audience.

If you're one of those people, we'd like you to consider blogging for us.

Over the next couple of months, we'll be making a concerted effort to launch more community blogs on our Wicked Local websites. We already have quite a few successful community blogs on some of our sites, but there will be a greater focus to expand this fleet of local community pundits throughout the area.

The reason why we're doing this is pretty simple. We want our Wicked Local websites to be the true hub of the online community conversation. In addition to the content we generate and post to the Wicked Local website, bloggers can provide a fresh voice and a different perspective to issues going on around town. The more voices contributing to the overall conversation, the better.

We want people who have strong local connections and can write about them on a regular basis. We're asking our community bloggers to post at least twice a week, although it has been shown that daily posts will keep an audience engaged and coming back more often to see what comments have been made on past posts and what new topic is generating discussion.

We don't want businesses shamelessly promoting themselves through a blog, but we welcome professionals who can share expertise about a particular field. We also don't want extremist political blogs, blogs intent on attacking or hurting those in the community or blogs promoting anything illegal. Those are the instances where a blog becomes a blob and does little to benefit the community.

Contact us by email if you currently have a blog and like the idea of partnering with us and perhaps giving your blog a wider audience. If you always wanted to start a blog, but didn't know where to start or how to get started, we might be able to help you. After you contact us, we'll send you a community blogger application form to fill out. Once that has been completed, you may be reaching thousands of readers in no time.

WILLCUTT CORNER

Volunteers fill a critical need

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

Tucked into a tiny corner of the Community Center, the Office of Elder Affairs, comprised of one full-time director and three part-timers, relies on the assistance of a small army of unpaid volunteers whose roles ensure the wellbeing of Cohasset's seniors.

On a daily basis, volunteer van drivers escort senior clients to medical appointments providing residents with an opportunity to attend critical doctor, dental and rehabilitation appointments. Drivers also take seniors on weekly grocery outings to Shaw's and Stop & Shop and to other area businesses such as the post office and the bank. Vans are arranged for regular programs sponsored by Elder Affairs, including weekly speakers, congregate lunches and special activities such as the recent "End of the summer" annual picnic.

Drivers are just one group of the dedicated townsfolk helping our seniors. On a rotating basis, 12 volunteer chefs plan, shop for, and cook lunches in the shared kitchen at 3 North Main St. These "home" cooked meals include delicious entrées such as shrimp scampi, pulled pork and pasta with pan-roasted vegetables. With limited capacity in its current location, lunch is provided for up to 35 enthusiastic elders at the Senior Center on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Volunteers serve and clean up after each day's meal.

Ongoing socialization is a key to senior health. To that end, folks from the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs coordinate volunteers for Cohasset Café, a Monday morning gathering conducted during the spring and fall. Held at the Lightkeepers House overlooking Government Island, the Café is open to all seniors. Attendees enjoy coffee, tea and home-cooked muffins, breads, egg dishes and casual conversation, while relishing the view of Cohasset Harbor.

For housebound citizens, other volunteers deliver food via the Meals on Wheels program. Nutritious microwavable offerings are supplied based on individual dietary restrictions. Supplementary meals are provided during holiday weeks or in the case of impending inclement weather.

Back at the Elder Affairs office, trained volunteers assist with phone coverage, data entry, and telephone reassurance. During these calls, volunteers check in on seniors. If a concern is identified, a representative from Elder Affairs will contact a family member, or the staff Outreach Coordinator will schedule a home visit. If a call goes unanswered, the center will contact the police department and request a wellness visit.

There is a lot of excitement about finding new ways to increase both the capacity of the services that Elder Affairs offers and providing a new and expanded space to offer those services. Volunteers will remain a vital need of Elder Affairs to ensure that Cohasset's seniors and their families can remain confident in knowing that essential services are available to keep them active, healthy, and connected to their community.

To become a volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs, please contact Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator at 781-383-9112.

Liza Carens Salerno is a freelance writer and a volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

Day at spa benefits Susan G. Komen fund

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In need of a spa day and want to give back? At the Adamo Day Spa and Retreat on Friday, Oct. 14, patrons can get pampered with feel-good treatments while contributing to the breast cancer cause.

The spa is designating the early afternoon, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., to providing complimentary express facials, eyebrow shaping, chair massages, spray tanning for the face, and card readings. The staff is only asking for donations for these services, which would normally have a $15 value. The contributions will go to the Susan G. Komen Foundation for the Cure.

Owner Joanne Ilacqua asks that patrons "give what you can afford." She noted that the staff will not be taking any gratuity for the services.

Ilacqua will also donate a portion of proceeds from each Boston Swan Boat Mint lip gloss sold, her own line of glosses. There will also be raffles for spa services and products.

Adamo invites all of its clientele to participate; walk-ins are welcome, but appointments are preferred. Ilacqua is specifically hoping to reach out to cancer patients and survivors, as her own sister is a survivor.

Ilacqua is certified in makeup application through the Look Good... Feel Better program, which teaches beauty techniques, from applying makeup to shaping eyebrows and creating turbans, to women living with cancer and going through chemotherapy.

Ilacqua said she got involved in the program after "seeing my sister going through chemo; she went through a hard time." The spa owner had to become a licensed cosmetologist in order to be certified in the program.

"I want to try to invite people who are going through [treatment] right now," said Ilacqua, adding that she wants to do "anything that can help them—a pick me up. I want to do something nice for them."

Ilacqua asks that patrons call ahead to book services for that day.

For more information, see www.adamodayspa.com or call 781-383-3011. The Adamo Day Spa & Retreat is located at 5 Stagecoach Way in Cohasset.

Town Manager commends emergency response team

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During the Tuesday, Oct. 4 board of selectmen meeting, town manager Mike Coughlin took time to recognize emergency response and public safety personnel who "displayed great courage" during two significant events in Cohasset.

Coughlin first presented letters of commendation, signed by Chief Robert Silvia, to fire department units under Captain James Runey, who were dispatched to a crash involving a bicycle and motor vehicle near Atlantic Avenue and Hobart Lane on June 25. The cyclist had severe trauma and was treated and prepared for transport to the South Shore Hospital by firefighter/EMT John Hernan, firefighter/EMT James Hall, and Lieutenant/EMT Eric Wenzlow.

The man who had been injured in the accident was in attendance Tuesday night, and on crutches. He posed for photographs with the town manager, selectmen, and the fire department honorees.

"I'm glad to be here," he said.

Letters were also presented to both the fire and police departments to recognize their work during a September 28 motor vehicle crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. A Ford Explorer was turned on its side with the operator trapped inside; the fire department used the jaws of life to get the victim out. The police units secured the scene and began treating the victim; firefighter/EMT-paramedic Daniel Cunningham assisted officer Patrick Kenney in administering first aid.

From the fire department, Cunningham Captain Francis Mahoney, Captain Mark Trask, and Lieutenant Robert Protulis were commended and given Chief Silvia's "heartfelt gratitude"; from the police, Chief Mark DeLuca thanked Sergeant John Conte and officers Kenney, James McLean and Dennis Cunniff, calling their actions "a true display of teamwork."

When someone thanked Protulis in passing during the photo-op, the lieutenant replied, "I'm just doing my job."

Deputy chiefs are on the table

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"No man is an island. It's helpful to have a second in command."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

Both the police and fire chiefs came before the board of selectmen on Tuesday, Oct. 4 to present their departmental restructuring proposals. Both chiefs are advocating to hire deputy chiefs to act for them in the event of their absence. Both discussed the possibility of promoting someone from lieutenant and captain positions.

"We're not adding a position for the department, in essence," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia. "We're taking a captain position and elevating it up to the next level, as assistant chief position."

The board expressed their concerns over possible budgetary changes. Town Manager Mike Coughlin backed up the chiefs, insisting that the money is already in the fire department's budget, and that the police department will wind up saving money on overtime.

Coughlin told the board that the plan to hire deputy chiefs come on the heels of Tropical Storm Irene, during which he "observed weaknesses" in the current departmental structure.

"No man is an island," Coughlin said. "It's helpful to have a second in command."

The deputy chiefs would both be non-union, salaried positions. Both chiefs stated that this would save their respective departments from having to pay overtime.

Coughlin said that he plans to present the proposals to the Advisory Committee next week.

Governance committee taking shape

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Carr said that he has reached out to the town of Hingham, which is also dealing with town governance issues.

The board of selectmen invited associate Conservation Commission associate member Michael Milanoski to Tuesday night's meeting to discuss forming a governance committee to review best practices for town boards and committees. Milanoski was one of the members of the town manager search committee, and selectman chair Ted Carr thought that committee was a good place to start.

Carr invited the nine members who served on that committee to join this governance committee; he and Milanoski also discussed that they would like to see four more members join.

Forming this committee is one of the initiatives that has been discussed pertaining to the citizens petition, signed by 120 residents, asking the board of selectmen to rescind their decision to unseat three conservation commissioners back in July and replace them with three new members. The petition called for the board to reinstate the ousted the commissioners and publicly apologize to them. The petitioners have appeared at several board meetings asking for an investigative committee, appointed by the Troika (the board of selectmen chair, the Advisory Committee chair, and a moderator) to review the board's actions pertaining to the ConCom and Cat Dam.

Another part of the petition asked for the board to appoint a governance committee. The board is in favor of a formal investigation by the attorney general in lieu of a citizen's investigative committee. Carr was all in favor of appointing a governance committee, however.

Carr said that he has reached out to the town of Hingham, which is also dealing with town governance issues; he will look into other surrounding towns, pull together any suggestions and draft a charge to present at the next board meeting.

Carr asked the Mariner to invite any citizens interested in joining the governance committee to submit a letter of interest to the town manager.

Volume 37 - Report No. 39 Sept. 26-30, 2011

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on five roll calls from the week of September 26-30. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

All Senate roll calls are on amendments to the Senate version of a bill that would allow three casinos and one slot parlor in the Bay State. The Senate began debate on the proposal last week but still has many amendments to consider. The House on September 14 approved its own version of the measure. A House-Senate conference committee will eventually hammer out a compromise version that will be sent to Gov. Deval Patrick.

BAN USE OF STATE FUNDS FOR SENIORS' TRIPS TO OUT-OF-STATE CASINOS (S 2015)

Senate 38-0, approved an amendment that would prohibit local Councils on Aging from using state funding to sponsor trips or provide transportation to out-of-state casinos after casinos are built and open in Massachusetts.

Amendment supporters said state funds should not be used to subsidize trips to casinos in Rhode Island and Connecticut when these seniors could be spending money in Massachusetts. They argued the amendment would not ban the trips themselves but rather the use of state funds for the trips.

There were no votes against the amendment. However, there is opposition to the ban. Opponents say the ban would take away an exciting day trip for many seniors living on a fixed income. They also ask why casinos are being singled out and if this might lead to a ban on all out-of-state trips to restaurants, museums and other entertaining places. A Boston Herald editorial called the amendment micromanagement and mocked, "Can't you just see it now - vans full of senior citizens en route to Foxwoods being stopped at the state line? No, neither can we."

(A "Yes" vote is for the ban.)

Y

CHECK IMMIGRATION STATUS OF CASINO EMPLOYEES (S 2015)

Senate 32-6, approved an amendment that would require casino owners to check and verify their employees' immigration status using a program operated by the United States Department of Homeland Security, the United States Department of Labor, the Social Security Administration or a private verification system.

Amendment supporters said this would simply ensure that these desperately needed new casino-related jobs will be filled by legal residents and not illegal aliens.

Amendment opponents argued there are already sufficient federal requirements that companies verify their employees' immigration status.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment that would require verification of employees' status. A "No vote is against the requirement.)

Y

BAN SIMULCASTING OF GREYHOUND RACING (S 2015)

Senate 10-27, rejected an amendment that would ban betting on simulcasting greyhound races from other states beginning in January 2016.

Amendment supporters said voters banned greyhound racing in 2008 because of the mistreatment of the dogs. They argued that continuing to allow Suffolk Downs to broadcast out-of-state greyhound races goes against the will and intent of the voters.

Amendment opponents said the casino bill requires the gaming commission to review all simulcasting and report to the Legislature. They argued an outright ban is premature and urged the Senate not to act on simulcast racing until the report is received in January 2013.

(A "Yes" vote is for the ban. A "No" vote is against the ban.)

Y

BAN LEGISLATORS FROM TAKING CASINO JOB UNTIL OUT OF OFFICE FOR ONE YEAR (S 2015)

Senate 36-1, approved an amendment that would prohibit state legislators from taking jobs in the Massachusetts casino industry for one year after they leave office. The amendment replaced an earlier proposal that would have imposed a five-year ban.

Supporters of the five-year ban said it would help avoid conflicts of interest and slow down the revolving door between the Legislature and the industries that it regulates. They argued it is the appearance of that conflict that feeds the incorrect perception that many legislators lack integrity.

Some opponents said the five-year ban will open the door to laws that prohibit legislators from working in the movie industry, health care and other fields the Legislature regulates. Others said they would likely support some kind of ban but took issue with the implication that some legislators are not open and honest and lack integrity.

Following contentious debate on the five-year ban, Senate President Therese Murray recessed the Senate and called a closed caucus of its 36 Democrats. When the session reconvened, senators approved, without debate, the redrafted amendment that imposes only a one-year ban.

Sen. Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport), the lone opponent of the one-year ban, told Beacon Hill Roll Call he feels it is important legislators not interfere with and not micromanage the Gaming Commission and allow it to do its job.

(A "Yes" vote is for the one-year ban. A "No" vote is against it.)

COUNT CASINO REVENUE AS REGULAR TAX REVENUE TO REDUCE TAXES FASTER (S 2015)

Senate 6-32, rejected an amendment that any tax revenue the state receives from casino gambling and slot machines be considered regular state tax revenue, regardless of the type of fund into which they are deposited.

Amendment supporters said the casino bill creates a "shadow budget" that allows gambling revenue to be deposited in various accounts in ways that it will not be counted as regular tax revenue. They said counting it as regular tax revenue will allow it to be used toward the formula that automatically cuts taxes each year the state has economic growth above 2.5 percent.

Amendment opponents said casino revenue is special and has been specifically earmarked for projects including increased local aid. They argued the state is on track to an automatic tax reduction even without including gaming money as regular tax revenue.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment counting casino money as regular tax revenue in order to trigger tax reductions faster. A "No" vote is against the amendment.)

HEALTH NOTES

Safe disposal of medications

STEVE BOBO

Do not discard out-dated and no longer used medications in the trash!

An increasing concern for towns and their citizens is the appropriate disposal of medications. In Cohasset, we have the necessary facilities to handle disposa¹ of medications that have become outdated or are no longer used. Medicine cabinets all over town contain such substances that represent a risk to personal health and an invitation to curious individuals as to the effects of trying them out. It's good practice to periodically clear out your medicine cabinet of unneeded drugs.

In Town Hall, we have a safe disposal center for hypodermic needles, and at the Police Station on Elm Street, they have disposal facilities for other drugs and substances of unknown makeup and potential harm. Do not discard outdated and no longer used medications in the trash!

Lisa Budge-Johnson, of the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department, often speaks to groups about the dangers of prescription drugs and inhalants in the home. For example, evidence does not show that cough medicines are any more effective than simple analgesics and antipyretics such as ibuprofen and acetaminophen to help alleviate symptoms. Thus cough medicine is not recommended for use in children owing to a lack of evidence supporting its effectiveness and the potential for harm.

Currently, no medications or herbal remedies exist which have been conclusively demonstrated to shorten the duration of infection in all people with cold symptoms. Doctors should be the ones to tell you about the value of a drug. They should also determine if a person is having trouble paying for a prescription; sometimes suggesting a less expensive alternative.

Some simple cures: Symptoms of a runny nose can be reduced by a first generation antihistamine which, however, can cause drowsiness and other side effects. Other decongestants such as pseudoephedrine are effective in adults but are not recommended for use in children. Nasal sprays such as ipratropium can reduce the symptoms of runny nose with few side effects.

Getting plenty of rest, drinking fluids to maintain hydration and gargling with warm salt water are reasonable conservative measures. No evidence exists for encouraging the active intake of fluids for acute respiratory infections nor is the use of heated humidified air particularly beneficial. Saline nasal drops may help alleviate nasal congestion.

Contrary to popular beliefs, vitamin C does not reduce risk of getting the common cold, nor reduce its severity. Authors sometimes suggest that vitamin C may be used as a preventive of the common cold in people exposed to brief periods of severe physical exercise or cold environments. Antibiotics and antivirals have no effect against the viruses that cause the common cold and may cause overall harm. Use no antiviral drugs for the common cold.

Infant botulism is a rare but serious illness caused by Clostridium Botulinum bacteria. The bacteria may enter the body through wounds, or they may live in improperly canned or preserved food.

The benefits versus risk of nasal irrigation are currently unclear and therefore not recommended. Medications recommending such a practice should be left at the police station. If you have any questions, call and they can come to your home.

We in Cohasset at the Board of Health hope that all citizens will benefit by greater interest in keeping our town and its management healthy through dissemination of useful health practices such as appropriate disposal of dual use medications.

The primary use is to make one feel better; the damaging second is by some individuals for inappropriate purposes like taking uppers to get high.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,800 in grants.

The Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to Council spokesperson Sarah Wood Torrey, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset — including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,800 in grants. Previously funded projects include the South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common, enrichment programs for students at the Deer Hill School, and the Cohasset Dramatic Club's musical theatre productions.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, contact Sarah Wood Torrey at (781) 383-3493 or CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at:

www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.asp.

Application forms are also available at the Cohasset Town Hall and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

SUNDAY AUTHOR TALK SERIES

Best-selling author draws a crowd

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Last Sunday marked the first in a series of eight visiting author discussions at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, as part of "Sunday Author Talks." Eighty-five people came to meet and listen to New York Times best-selling author, William Powers, author of Hamlet's Blackberry.

"Powers was engaging, and animated," says Special Projects Committee member Lynne DeGiacomo. "His insight into our digital society brought up questions and issues about technology that we should all be thinking about. Truly an inspiring afternoon."

Powers was the first in the series which is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cohasset. Special thanks to the Friends of the Cohasset Library for their support, and for the generosity of A Taste for Wine and Spirits for the donation of wine for all post event receptions.

Author Charles C. Mann will be next, on Sunday, Nov. 6 at 4 p.m. Mann is author of New York Times bestseller 1491: Rewriting History Before Columbus. He will be discussing his new release, 1493. All Author Talks are free, however, seating is limited, so call the library at 383-1348 to reserve a spot.

Visit cohassetlibrary.org for a complete list of events.

The author signed a stack of books that are now available at Cohasset's Buttonwood Books.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Tryouts

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters announce tryouts for the 2011-12 Travel Basketball season for boys' and girls' teams in grades 5-8. All tryouts will be in the Cohasset High gym and all players must attend both scheduled sessions. There is no pre-registration necessary and no fee required at this time. However, please arrive 15 minutes early to sign up, obtain a tryout number, etc., as tryouts will start promptly at the designated times.

Girls in grades 5 and 6: Monday, October 17 and Wednesday, October 19, from 5:30 to 6:45

Girls in grades 7 and 8: Monday, October 17 and Wednesday, October 19, from 7:00 to 8:30

Boys in grades 5 and 6: Tuesday, October 18, and Thursday, October 20, from 5:30 to 6:45

Boys in grades 7 and 8: Tuesday, October 18, and Thursday, October 20, from 7:00 to 8:30

The mission of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Travel program is to promote and support competitive basketball teams, enhance and improve players' skills, and foster a positive environment of sportsmanship and teamwork. The philosophy is simple: Teach the fundamentals of basketball, make it fun, and keep it fair.

Philosophy regarding roster size

After a review of player development policies, the Boosters have developed the following guidelines regarding team roster size:

In grades where there will be at least two travel teams, a 10 player roster for the A team promotes the optimal environment for player development. This represents a change to the previous policy where A teams generally carried 12 players on their roster. In those age groups where there may be only one travel team, the appropriate roster size will be determined based on the evaluations at the tryouts. The Boosters' stated policy is to promote the game as widely as possible at all levels of travel basketball. However, both players and parents should be aware that this is a competitive environment and not every player may qualify for selection to a team.

Time for the real season to start

South Shore League play opened last night

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team started the big challenge last night as they headed to East Bridgewater (4-0) to face a powerhouse team that has been blowing teams away in the early part of the season in the opening game of the South Shore League schedule.

Meanwhile, Cohasset was off to a 2-2 start, with wins against Quincy and Carver.

The Skippers' losses were to Hingham and Scituate, both

Skippers finish first half of season, open second

The Cohasset boys soccer team is close to where it hoped to be after the first half of the season ended with a 3-0 win over Bridgewater on Saturday

John Mills, Jonah Adkins and Nick Brown scored for the Skippers.

Freshman goalie Pat Federle notched a shutout.

Cohasset finished the first half 5-2-2 with a five-game win streak.

The Skippers then followed with a 3-3 tie against Abington to open the second part of the season.

With all the strong performances Cohasset teams have been having, it might be something to point out one team that is currently having the best season of everyone.

That would be your Cohasset golf team.

After 10 matches, the Skippers are still perfect with a 10-0 record, including a 36-18 win at Norwell on Wednesday in a match that had been rescheduled due to rain.

Connor O'Brien (No. 3) led Cohasset in the Norwell win, medaling with a five-over 40 at the Scituate Country Club (Norwell's home).

Rain delays season, but Cohasset rolling

By Kathryn Mastromarino
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset Field Hockey team is off to a great, albeit slow start this season with a record of 5-1. They started their season off late due to rain delays with a 5-1 win on September 13 against Carver High School. Freshman Caty Gilman had two goals while sophomore Maddie Curley, junior Kylie Coffman, and senior captain Amber Silvia scored the others.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week Four: Marshfield girls take over top spot, Hingham boys retain No. 1

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Week number four produced a whole new look in the top six for both sides. The two Weymouths took a fall after the Braintree boys and girls both beat the Wildcats, 1-0. Our biggest movers this week include the Plymouth North girls, up four to No. 2, and the Marshfield girls, who overtake Weymouth at No. 1. On the boys' chart, both Silver Lake and Norwell climb one spot each. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 2.

Boys

1. Hingham – There's nothing new here. The Harbormen continued to dominate. Last week, they easily handled Quincy, taking a 4-0 victory, and then stopped a dangerous Duxbury team, 1-0. Hingham comes into the week at 7-1 overall and unbeaten in the Patriot League.

2. Silver Lake – The quick climb up the rankings continued for the Lakers, who slid into second place in the Patriot League with a 0-0 draw with a tough Scituate squad followed up with a 3-0 win over crosstown rivals Pembroke. At 6-0-2 overall in the Patriot League, the Lakers are quickly chasing Hingham for the top spot in the Patriot League Keenan.

3. Weymouth – Despite going 1-1-1, it was a tough week for the Bay State Carey leaders. In the three games combined, they managed just two goals, and they suffered a stunning 1-0 loss to bottom-of-the-table Braintree. It was their first loss of the season. The Wildcats earned one point in a 1-1 draw with St. John's Prep and began last week with a 1-0 win over Brookline. Their record stands at 6-1-2 overall.

4. Duxbury – The Dragons got past Pembroke, 3-1, and then ran into a buzzsaw in Hingham. They lost a 1-0 game on the road, falling to 4-1-1 in the Keenan. Despite the setback, the Dragons are still one of the stronger teams in the region.

5. Norwell – The Norwell boys continue to get it done on the field and last week, they picked up a 1-1 tie against a strong Mashpee team. This came just two days after a 4-0 win over Hull. The Clippers still hold down first place in the South Shore League at 6-0-2 heading into the week.

6. Marshfield – It wasn't a case of misfortune for the Rams last week. They lost, 4-2, to Sandwich, but putting two goals past the No. 1 team in the state is no easy task. The Rams' slide was due in large part to the performance of the top five last week.

On the bubble: Scituate, Plymouth North, Cohasset

Week Three Rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Silver Lake, 4. Duxbury, 5. Marshfield, 6. Norwell

Girls

1. Marshfield – The Lady Rams benefited from Weymouth's loss to Braintree and two wins of their own to take over the No. 1 spot for the first time this season. A 2-0 victory at Sandwich followed by a 5-0 win over Nauset at home moved the girls' record to 4-1 in the Atlantic Coast League, tied with Plymouth North.

2. Plymouth North – Three wins in four days, including two victories in the Atlantic Coast League, improved North's record to 6-1 overall. The Lady Eagles came into the week tied for Marshfield in the ACL at 4-1.

3. Hingham – Up one spot from last week, the Hingham girls picked up a 9-1 win over a hapless Quincy team before securing a huge point against Duxbury. The Harborwomen scored the equalizer with seconds remaining in the 3-3 draw with Duxbury. That tie moved Hingham into a first-place tie with Duxbury in Patriot League Keenan.

4. Duxbury – What looked like a 3-2 win over Hingham turned into a 3-3 draw after conceding a late goal. But the Lady Dragons remain in the first place, locked at 4-0-1 with Hingham. Duxbury started the week with a 6-0 win over Pembroke.

5. Weymouth – The week started out with a 3-1 win for the Lady Wildcats, but it quickly turned into a struggle. They were held scoreless in back-to-back games, just the second and third times they haven't scored a goal this season. The most shocking loss came at the hands of Braintree, a 1-0 defeat. Weymouth then lost, 1-0, to Whitman-Hanson. Weymouth slipped to second in Bay State Carey (6-2 entering this week).

6. Braintree – It could go down as one of the biggest wins in the post-Amy Caldwell era. The Lady Wamps defeated Weymouth, 1-0, knocking the Lady Wildcats out of first place in Bay State Carey. It was also the second time in nine games that Weymouth was held scoreless this season. Braintree began the week with a tough, 2-0 loss to Needham. Braintree came into the week at 5-3 in the league, one game behind Weymouth.

On the bubble: Scituate, Norwell, Hanover

Week Three Rankings: 1. Weymouth, 2. Duxbury, 3. Marshfield, 4. Hingham, 5. Braintree, 6. Plymouth North

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

MIKE MILLER'S SOUTH SHORE CROSS-COUNTRY POLL

5 To Watch

Kevin Friedland, Marshfield: Suddenly, the Rams can look to this senior as a viable third runner behind the best twosome in the state, Joel Hubbard and Kevin Thomas. Friedland won their dual meet with Plymouth South on Tuesday, running 16:45, just ahead of Thomas and Hubbard, who were surely tempoing with him. Add to that, solid performances from Mike Tautiva, Craig Dicesare, and Luke Davin, the Rams look to be putting to rest the theory that they will only be bringing two horses to the racetrack in November.

Kelsey Tierney, Whitman-Hanson: Another week, another Panther freshman makes the top 5. Seems strange not to mention the dominance of the rest of the varsity squad, taking the top three places at the Bay State Invitational's Division I race, with Gianna Cacciatore, and Abby and Rachel Baker doing the honors. However, Tierney's win in the freshman race in 12:29 over the 3K course might be just as important. WH had a large gap from 4th to 5th at Wrentham, and could use solid performances from freshmen like Tierney and Caroline Mulrey to pull the group together. What it all means is a move to the top spot in the poll this week over a Weymouth team that has never been ranked anything but first.

Molly Barker, Weymouth: Barker's 37th place performance at Pennsylvania's Paul Short Invitational (19:42) was not only the team's best, but a personal best for Barker, who looks poised to lead the Wildcats, along with Bridget Jaklitsch, to another strong season. Barker has returned to health after battling back issues in 2010, and survived a blazing start from the field to stay in contention throughout.

Morgan Sullivan, Hingham: The sophomore has broken out to lead the Harborwomen in the absence of Julie McConville, and right to 4th in the poll they climb. Sullivan (22:05) was the first of three straight Hingham runners in the Division II race at Bay States, just ahead of teammates Kelly Bandera and Maggie McFarland, but also won the dual with North Quincy (18:47), giving Hingham a narrow 28-31 win over Geoff Hennesey's team. Livvy Kates' squad is young and hungry, and looks poised to climb towards the top of the heap in the Patriot League.

Chuck Martin, Norwell: Congratulations to Coach Martin for his Clippers' girls team winning its 100th league meet in a row this week, a 15-50 romp over Abington. Coach Martin, one of the sport's good guys (and a regular at the Boston Marathon, still running just north of 3:00) has presided over some of the area's best track and XC teams over his 2+ decades at the helm in Norwell, and deserves the praise of such an impressive accomplishment. The South Shore League trembles when Norwell comes into town.

Girls Top 5

Record; Last Week's Ranking):
1. WHITMAN-HANSON (5-0; 2nd)
2. WEYMOUTH (5-0; 1st)
3. NOTRE DAME ACADEMY (2-0; 3rd)
4. HINGHAM (4-0, NR)
5. PEMBROKE (4-0; 5th)

Boys Top 5

(Record; Last Week's Ranking):

2. WHITMAN-HANSON (5-0; 2nd)
3. MARSHFIELD (3-0; 3rd)
4. HINGHAM (4-0; 5th)
5. WEYMOUTH (4-1; 4th)

Meet to Watch

Pembroke at Hingham: A matchup of the No. 4 and No. 5 teams in the girls poll. Pembroke's girls' team has never beaten Livvy Kates's Harborwomen in a dual meet during the XC season, but this year could be different. With Chelsea Savage running so well at the top for the Titans, Hingham will need its young depth to stave off the Pembroke attack. That might be harder than they think, as Pembroke's Courtney Garvey, Lauren Harnety, and Erica Roy all ran top 10 marks in the freshman race at Bay States on Saturday. Look for a 27-28 meet, same as usual when these two teams meet up.

Poll is compiled by Mike Miller, coach of the reigning Div. 1 state champion Weymouth High School girls' cross-country varsity.

"It was a little bit of a setback," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said of the tie. "As far as the tournament goes, we'll take the point, but we feel we had a good chance to win that game. We were up 2-0 and 3-1. When you're trying to catch a team ahead of you, you need every point."

As they headed into the mid-point, Cohasset had been on a five game win streak.

"We had a great win over Harwich and a big win over Mashpee," Willis said. "Mashpee had been 5-0-2 when we beat them. They appeared to be one of the strongest teams."

Norwell leads Cohasset in the South Shore League standings, and handed Cohasset one of their two losses. The other was against Carver.

Cohasset played Carver yesterday and has Norwell on Tuesday.

Willis said playing each team better in the second half than they did the first time around.

Despite the tie, which still gave Cohasset a six-game unbeaten streak, there have been some outstanding efforts from the Skipers.

"Nick Tangherlini has come on strong," Willis said. "He has four goals and three assists in six games. He scored two against Abington."

There has also been some nice energy off the bench.

"John Mills has goals in three straight games," Willis said. "He's a great up and down player. He knows how to finish. He knows how to score."

Also coming off the bench to give a spark has been Conor Goetz.

"Conor Goetz brings big energy off the bench," Willis said. "He just started playing as a junior and he has a great style. He just goes, goes, and goes. His brother Anders was a captain for me last year, but Conor just picked up the game and he's provided a lot of intensity."

Goetz is also a member of the Cohasset State Champion baseball team.

With Carver (results were unavailable at press time) and Norwell, Willis was hoping to make up some ground.

"We've got the rematches," he said. Hopefully we'll have chances to redeem ourselves."

Headed up by veteran seniors Caitlin DeAngelis and Angela Cipolla, the forward line possesses fast and skilled ball handlers. The defense, anchored by senior Camryn Caron, has developed into a solid unit after graduating three starting seniors last season.

With one win under their belt, the Lady Skippers played their first home game against Norwell on September 20.

Goalie Whitney Jaffe picked up her first shutout of the season and the team picked up their second win, 5-0. After a 4-0 win against Mashpee, Cohasset fell in the last 1:40 to Harwich, picking up their first loss of the season.

"It was a tough loss," senior captain Sage Stebbins said of the game.

"It was a tough loss, but we'll bounce back and continue to attack the season one game at a time, but the team is back on track, always working to improve."

The team went on to win an 8-0 shutout victory against Hull High School, September 30.

"They continue to be powerful at midfield with senior Sage Stebbins adeptly directing the group from center mid and with senior captains Kayla Orner and Amber Silvia on the wings," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "The strength and skill of the midfield benefits the team in two critical ways.

"They keep the ball pushed up the field, giving the forwards very good scoring opportunities which in turn allows for fewer attacks on the defense and the goal."

The Lady Skippers emerged victorious once again when they played East Bridgewater this past Tuesday.

Senior captain Caitlin DeAngelis, senior Angela Cipolla, and freshman Caty Gilman all scored twice, with senior captain Sage Stebbins assisting.

"Connor played well," Cohasset co-coach Ann Thomae, who coaches the team's away matches. "He was the medalist for the day. He did a good job. The conditions were tough. It was very windy."

Cohasset captain Sam Asnault was second for Cohasset with a 42.

Thomae is pleased for her team.

"The key is that the team played a lot over the summer and came into the season ready," she said. "We're also blessed with a lot of good talent at the top, and good depth."

Cohasset won the South Shore League last year, and have beaten every South Shore League team this season.

"It feels great," Thomae said. "We've played everyone. I'm also excited because the Sectional Tournament is at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham. That could be a great opportunity for us. It's not a long drive and the kids are familiar with the course. We're looking forward to it."

Along with O'Brien and Asnault, the Skippers have been getting excellent play from their No. 1 golfer Warren Hill.

"Warren has been a four-year starter," Thomae said. "He's very solid. He wasn't a medalist today, but he's playing very well. He's a big part of our success. He plays all over the country."

Cohasset has also had a boost from outside.

"Austin Sloan just moved to town," Thomae said. "He's playing No. 4 and he's doing a great job."

Cohasset hosts Scituate in a non-league match Oct. 12.

"I'm curious to see how the kids match up with Scituate," Thomae said.

After Scituate, Cohasset is home on Thursday, Oct. 13 against Harwich and hosts East Bridgewater Oct. 18

The Skippers play their home matches at Cohasset Golf Club.

in close games against upper division teams.

They headed into the South Shore League with a big win under their belt in a 49-6 win over Carver last Friday at home.

Kyle Livingstone, our Cohasset Mariner Athlete of the Month had a huge night in the Carver win.

Livingstone, a senior running back scored the game's first four touchdowns while running for big yards.

Livingstone rushed 16 times for 159 yards and three scores. He had TD runs of 45 and 9 yards in the first quarter and 25 yards in the second. He finished off a spectacular first half with a 60-yard punt return that made it 28-0.

Quarterback Jaime Faber scored on runs of 1 and 16 yards for Cohasset, the first one staking the Skippers to a 35-0 halftime cushion.

"Jamie Faber had a wonderful game against Carver," Afanasiw said. "He ran for 60 yards on five carries out of the option. He's throwing just under 50 percent. He's finding a rhythm, settling in nicely and taking a role of a leader."

Rocco Laugelle added a 4-yard TD run in the fourth quarter. Shane Haggerty kicked all seven extra points for Cohasset.

"That was a big shot in the arm," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "There was a little level of frustration after two close losses. Against Hingham and Scituate we made too many mistakes, and when you make mistakes, it makes it easier to beat you. We had four or five touchdowns called back over four games. You can't do that and win."

In the Carver game, the mistakes were kept to a minimum.

"We had one penalty for five yards against Carver," Afanasiw said. "When you don't make mistakes it makes it harder to beat you."

Afanasiw said there were several potential reasons for the penalties, and that his team and staff have worked hard to eliminate them.

"We have nine new faces on the offensive side," he said. "They may heve been a little jittery or nervous. We've been working on knowing the counts. On the defensive side, we have eight returning faces. I think they may have been a little too ramped up. Then we had a few simple mistakes. On special teams we ran into a punter by mistake. It's an unfortunate confluence."

Afanasiw wasn't making excuses. He was stating the facts, and the fact that if his team is going to win, the mistakes have to be eliminated.

Another spot that has come around is the defense.

"Chris Murphy, Sean McKenna and Kyrel Jaundoo are having big years on defense," Afanasiw said. "Kyrel has three or four interceptions and two or three fumble recoveries. For three years in a row Kyrel has had a defensive touchdown against Quincy. He's already close to double digit touchdowns on the defensive side."

NURSERY SCHOOL, PRESCHOOL

Sweet Relief reaches for the stars

Builds early love of reading

By Courtney Palek

Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, an Early Education Learning Center in Cohasset marks the beginning of the new school year with its annual Reach For The Stars (RFTS) literacy initiative, sponsored by Usborne Books. The program coincides with Sweet Relief's 2011/2012 Reading Enrichment opportunity, now available to all students, age three to four and a half, on Monday afternoons from 12 to 3:30pm.

Sweet Relief in-house Reading Specialist, Amy Linnell, holds a Master's in Science in Special Education (Pre-K through 9th grade). Linnell is certified in both reading programs Orton-Gillingham and Project Read and is a Special Education Teacher and Reading Specialist. Linnell, fresh from her completion of the acclaimed "Handwriting without Tears" program, will be working with students each week, building a love of reading, writing and mastering the basic principals of early-childhood literacy.

Sweet Relief's Reading Enrichment opportunity is designed to supplement all children currently enrolled in local preschool and nursery school programs. This open-enrollment format allows students from all over the South Shore to supplement their programs with one afternoon per week at Sweet Relief, dedicated to reading, writing and overall literacy enrichment.

To further promote the commitment to literacy, Sweet Relief held its annual school-wide RFTS reading initiative, Sept. 12-23, with Usborne Books. Usborne Books are written by educators and designed to graphically draw the students in, to make them want to learn the material on the pages and to help them retain that knowledge.

All Sweet Relief students took the 2-week reading challenge: to read for 30 minutes every day with their parents, caregivers and families. Students also had the option to collect pledges in support of their efforts. Dollars raised will be divided between the "Team Sweet Relief" annual American Cancer Society Relay for Life team's fundraising efforts (June 2012) and a portion is given back, in the form of books, to the participating student-readers, to further encourage their dedication to reading at home.

Sweet Relief is a private, home-based preschool environment enrolling students, ages 20 months to four years old. In addition to the Reading Enrichment program (Mondays 12 to 3:30pm), Sweet Relief also offers a popular morning Toddler Program, designed for students age 20 months to 2.9 years old (Monday through Friday 8:30am to 12 pm), afternoon Nursery Program for students age 2.9 to 4 years old (T/W/Th 12 pm to 3:30pm) and Yoga Enrichment with local children's yoga specialist, Kim Spires, (Fridays 12 pm to 3:30pm). Applications for all programs are currently being accepted.

Sweet Relief is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care (EEC) and provides the foundation that supports all children in their development as lifelong learners and contributing members of the community.

For more information about Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, please visit the school's website at www.sweetreliefcohasset.com.

LIFE AT CHS

September ended with pure madness!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Last week was pure madness. From Spirit Week, to Homecoming games, to the "Neon Nite" Homecoming dance, to the SAT's early on Saturday morning, I felt like I barely had a second to breathe. This week was a little bit more relaxed. OK, it was a lot more relaxed. Nobody had to wear absurd outfits to school that took hours of planning the night before and class wasn't interrupted by a pep rally. The days went by quickly, probably because we only had to go to school from Monday to Thursday. Students are currently enjoying a nice, long, extended weekend, all thanks to Mr. Christopher Columbus (although teachers still had to go to school on Friday for a Professional Day, too bad for them!). A lot of seniors are visiting or interviewing at colleges, or spending their days off working on applications. It's crazy that early applications are due in less than a month — people are starting to really feel the pressure! Yikes.

I can't believe that it's October — September seemed to fly by! I'm excited for the ASP Pumpkin Patch (which is now open at Wheelwright Park, so stop by!) and I already can't wait for Halloween. Speaking of time going by super fast, it's already halfway through the first term and Progress Reports were due by Thursday. Crazy!

The Spinnaker is off and running, and students are beginning to write their first articles, take pictures at sporting events, and solicit stores to buy advertisements. If you'd like to purchase advertising space in the Spinnaker, contact Ellie Tedeschi, Eloise Lucas, or Chrissy Secatore! I'd also recommend following the Spinnaker on Twitter @CHSSpinnaker and checking out the photo blog (created by the most amazing photographer at CHS, Elizabeth Hagearty) at cohassetspinnaker.blogspot.com. The first issue comes out in late October.

Tuesday marked the open house of the Homework Help Center at the library, which is a tutoring service led by National Honors Society student volunteers. Students from all grade levels are welcome to stop by for homework help and refreshments every Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Laptops are an exciting new addition to the Help Center, so come next week to check them out.

On Wednesday, there was a meeting for the British Isles trip this April vacation. The 11-day vacation includes visits to England, Ireland, Wales and Scotland. All high school students are welcome to come on this adventure, which is guaranteed to be not only a learning experience, but also the trip of a lifetime. The unbeatably cheap price makes this a special opportunity, and the more people who sign up, the cheaper it is! Sign up today — I'm going! For more information, contact Mr. Willis at jwillis@cohassetk12.org or just stop by his room during or after school.

The Volunteer Club has been extremely active lately, with students volunteering at Cohasset Days and the Senior Center and making blankets for Project Linus. Keep up the good work!

Cohasset sports did incredibly well in last weekend's homecoming games. On Saturday, the girls' soccer team tied undefeated East Bridgewater in an exciting match, and the boys' won theirs as well. Additionally, field hockey defeated Hull on Friday and the football team destroyed Carver 49-6. Throughout this week, despite some rainy weather and postponements, there were many sporting events. Check out the sports section for more information! On a side note, every team is wearing their pink wristbands for Breast Cancer Awareness Month — donate $3 and get yours today!

Finally, I'd like to congratulate my friends Morgan McCarthy and Anna Seraikas, this year's Homecoming King and Queen! Way to go guys, you totally deserve it. Well, that's it for this week Cohasset, enjoy Columbus Day!

SHOPPERS BEWARE:

Pink ribbons are not created equal

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

As surely as the leaves change color every October, it's time again for yogurt cups, sneakers, toilet paper and a slew of other products to turn pink for Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Breast cancer advocates are warning again this year that buying merchandise emblazoned with a pink ribbon or cotton candy-colored packaging is no guarantee that much of a shopper's money will actually go to fighting the disease.

Some companies that use well-known symbols of breast cancer awareness on their products have legitimate agreements with reputable fundraising groups to donate a fixed share of the proceeds. But others only promise vaguely to donate to breast cancer causes without specifying how much or to whom.

"The point is the pink ribbon is entirely unregulated," said Karuna Jaggar, executive director of Breast Cancer Action, a San Francisco group that is critical of pink marketing and runs a "Think Before You Pink" campaign.

Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the nation's largest breast cancer fundraising group, has a specifically trademarked version of the pink ribbon that appears on the products of companies that have agreed to sponsor the nonprofit. This newspaper's Paint it all Pink campaign will benefit Komen's Massachusetts affiliate.

Shoppers should look carefully at other products marked with a generic pink ribbon, said Ronni Cohen-Boyar, executive director of Komen's Massachusetts affiliate.

"Don't buy something just because it has a pink ribbon," she said.

Breast Cancer Action has questioned if some pink products are bad for a buyer's health, including certain ingredients in a perfume, "Promise Me," whose sales will benefit Komen this year, and Komen's partnership with KFC restaurants last year.

Komen's national office did not respond to a requests for comment. Jaggar said Komen has agreed to double-check its perfume's safety. Komen in the past has pointed to how much its partnerships have raised to fight breast cancer, including more than $4 million from the KFC deal, and helped raise awareness of breast cancer detection and treatment.

Fundraising groups and critics can agree, however, on some tips for shoppers. The bottom line: Shop smart or consider donating to a breast cancer organization directly. Consumers should ask the following questions:

- Does the package say how much the product maker will donate to charity? Try to judge if it seems like a significant amount. For example, if the seller plans to make a donation per purchase, what percentage goes to charity? Is there a minimum or maximum donation the company will give? Can you find out more details from the seller if the package itself is not clear?
- Check how the donation works to see if your purchase alone will result in a contribution or if additional steps are needed for a charity to get the money. For example, Yoplait plans to donate 10 cents to Komen for every yogurt cut lid redeemed by customers, up to $2 million.
- What organization will the donation benefit? Cohen-Boyar recommends a "donor-centric" nonprofit that can readily explain what percentage of its money goes to its charity versus administration. Komen, for example, puts more than 80 percent of its money nationally toward research, education, treatment and screening. It has a four-star rating from Charity Navigator. Check up on charities at www.give.org or charitynavigator.org.
- What will the beneficiary do with the money? Will it go to public education and community programs? Helping low-income women get mammograms? Research? Consider what kind of program you want to support.

JORDAN HOSPITAL

Center keeps moving forward

Dr. Marvin Lopez joins breast care team

By Rich Harbert

Jordan Hospital enjoys a reputation for delivering big city service in a familiar community setting.

It is especially true in the field of breast cancer care, where the hospital's nationally recognized Breast Center offers the same cutting edge treatments and procedures found in the teaching hospitals of Boston.

From clinical trials to oncoplastic surgical techniques, the Breast Center offers comprehensive cancer care for women in Southeastern Massachusetts without the hassle of a trip into the city.

And with this year's addition of Dr. Marvin Lopez to the breast-care team, the big-city specialist now calls Jordan Hospital home.

Lopez, a surgical oncologist who specializes in breast surgery, joined the staff at Jordan in March after 18 years at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston, where he served as director of the Breast Center and chairman of the Department of Surgery.

Lopez, who is a professor of surgery at Tufts University School of Medicine, is now the executive director of the Jordan Hospital Club Cancer Center and a busy member of the Breast Center team.

Lopez works side by side with Dr. Lisa Tito, the Breast Center director, who took the reins of the department from its founder and first director, Dr. Dominic Zazzarino, two years ago.

Together with Cat Melendy, the Center's nurse navigator, and a staff of technologists, counselors, therapist and clinicians, Tito and Lopez are giving the Breast Center national acclaim.

Jordan's Breast Center is already one of five breast centers in Massachusetts (and the only one on the South Shore) to earn accreditation from the National Accreditation Program for Breast Centers. The center is currently working toward designation as a center of excellence.

The Breast Center offers care across medical, radiological and surgical disciplines, focusing on a team approach to provide patients optimum individualized care.

Located in a wing of the hospital, the Center offers the latest in clinical and support service, from screening to treatment, counseling and education.

The Center aims to provide a diagnosis after screening within five business days and then works with patients to develop the best treatment plan for their circumstances.

For patients facing the frightening news that they have breast cancer, there is increasingly good news.

More than 90 percent of breast cancer found in early stages can be successfully treated. And the screening techniques keep getting better and better.

Lopez was working at Barnes-Jewish Hospital in St. Louis in the 1970s when the American Cancer Society began conducting the first clinical trials at that hospital, and others in the country, that established the importance of early screening and detection. "It was the very study that motivated everyone to start getting mammograms," Lopez said.

Digital mammography today can detect abnormalities early enough to translate into extremely high survival rates and significantly improve breast preservation treatments.

One of the biggest changes in treatment, Tito said, is the way surgeons now combine plastic surgery with cancer surgery.

"We still take out the cancer, with a good cancer operation, but we make everything look good too," Tito said. "We reshape the breast at the time of surgery."

While in the past surgeons would remove the nipple as a precaution, research has shown nipples can now be spared. "The cosmetic outcome is spectacular, and it's safe," Tito said.

New techniques also allow surgeons to spare lymph nodes in some cases.

The nodes, which help fight disease, were routinely removed as a precaution against the spread of cancer. Surgeons can now identify the first lymph nodes that drain the tumor, and test it.

If cancer is not present in these so-called sentinel nodes, doctors do not need to take all of the nodes.

Tito said the procedures results in less swelling of the patient's arm and offers better protection against infection. "Essentially it leaves women with a normal arm," he said.

Improved radiation techniques now also allow doctors to target tumors more precisely, sparing organs from radiation damage.

A partial breast radiation technique in trial at the hospital can reduce treatment from by more than half.

New tests also can spare some patients from the need of chemotherapy.

In women whose sentinel nodes are not cancerous, doctors can test the 21 genes in the tumor and separate patients into low, medium and high risk group for recurrence.

For all the new treatment options, Tito and Lopez say the Breast Center is structured to optimize patient care.

Weekly meetings among doctors follow the progress of patients, from surgery to radiation and chemotherapy.

It doesn't start or stop there.

The Breast Center offers a full complement of the screenings to detect cancer.

Support services also include counseling for patients and their families.

Boot camp training sessions meet twice a week to help patients get back in shape. A nutrition program is in the works.

In the middle of it all is a registered nurse whose job is to help people figure it all out.

As nurse navigator for the Breast Center, Cat Melendy helps patients schedule appointments, review treatment options and cope with the stress of treatment – a security net of sorts for every patient.

"My position is to help the patient along the continuum of care here," Melendy said. "When they receive their diagnosis we're there for them emotionally and spiritually. As we make referrals to services they need we kind of become that point person for them as they have questions or issues. The surgeons like to say they take care of the surgery, and I take care of the rest."

A former oncology nurse, Melendy has been working as nurse navigator since January, after Lesley Cunningham's promotion to director of cancer service. Melendy brings plenty of empathy to the position. She lost her aunt to breast cancer and understands how the disease can impact patients and their families.

"We like to think of comprehensive cancer services are just one piece of the pie," Melendy said.

Lopez brings a seal of endorsement of sorts to the program simply by joining the team.

As a national surveyor of cancer programs, Lopez visits and evaluates institutions all over the United States every year. He said he was very impressed by the open-mindedness of the Center's leadership, which led him to leave the city in favor of the community.

"One of the great advantages here is that every patient with breast cancer is evaluated by a multi-disciplinary team," Lopez said. "The team connects in a way that is both seamless and very personalized."

Lopez also noted that Jordan's overall cancer expertise is expansive.

and better cooperation among doctors who research and treat breast cancer.

Gains like these have greatly improved a woman's chances of surviving the disease. The likelihood that U.S. women diagnosed with breast cancer will live another five years has climbed from 77 percent in 1982 to about 98 percent today if confined to the breast, according to advocacy group Susan G. Komen for the Cure.

"I think the vast majority of women will survive breast cancer, almost certainly in the short term, and most in the long term," said Dr. Ann Partridge, a medical oncologist and clinical director of the Breast Oncology Center at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

Yet the disease remains a long way from a cure as the U.S. marks its 27th annual National Breast Cancer Awareness Month this October.

Breast cancer remains widespread. The National Cancer Institute estimated about 207,000 women would be diagnosed with breast cancer in the U.S. last year, and nearly 40,000 were expected to die from the disease the same year.

In Massachusetts, about 5,640 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year, and 760 will die of the disease, according to American Cancer Society estimates. The disease was the most commonly diagnosed form of cancer among Bay State women from 2001 to 2005, Komen's Massachusetts affiliate said.

Massachusetts has among the highest rates of breast cancer diagnoses in the nation, but advocates said that is likely because more Bay State women get mammograms than the national average. Yet disparities exist in both breast cancer screening rates and deaths, particularly among the state's minority and low- to middle-income women.

Dr. Robert Quinlan is director of the Comprehensive Breast Center at UMass Memorial Medical Center in Worcester and a professor of surgery at UMass Medical School. UMass Medical School

"It's well known that access to health care is a problem," said Dr. Robert Quinlan, director of the Comprehensive Breast Center at UMass Memorial Medical Center in Worcester and a professor of surgery at UMass Medical School.

Breast cancer advocates are working to close the gaps. Komen's state affiliate has put a significant portion of its $950,000 grant program this year toward funding community organizations that help women in underserved areas.

That includes women who struggle to pay for treatment, transportation or child care, and those who face language and cultural barriers, said Ronni Cohen-Boyar, executive director of Komen's Massachusetts affiliate.

"Dollars are short," said Cohen-Boyar, a breast cancer survivor. "Everybody knows that. We need to maximize how we do it."

GateHouse Media New England and Wickedlocal.com will donate a portion of newsstand sales, subscriptions and advertising proceeds during its Paint it all Pink program in October to Komen's Massachusetts affiliate.

Advances

A better understanding of the different forms of breast cancer has greatly improved treatment since the 1990s, oncologists said.

"We're getting much better at tailoring our treatment to the type of breast cancer (patients) have," Partridge said.

Some breast cancer cells are fueled by hormones – estrogen and progesterone – found naturally in the body. Drugs such as tamoxifin are now widely used to shut off parts of cancer cells that pick up these hormones, while other medications can block the body's production by these hormones, Quinlan said.

Doctors also have seen gains in medications such as Herceptin that target a more aggressive kind of breast cancer cell with a gene known as HER2/neu, Partridge said.

Better treatments and a clearer understanding of which genetic strains of breast cancer are most aggressive have reduced the number of patients receiving harsh chemotherapy about 25 percent in the last decade, Quinlan said.

"The underlying tumor biology, the tumor aggressiveness, has become paramount in our thinking nowadays," he said.

Cooperation is also improving. Physicians from different institutions work together more often than in the past on their research, Quinlan said. Hospitals also focus more today on treating "the whole patient," including medical issues beyond cancer and psychological needs, and try to involve them in deciding the course of their treatment, Partridge said.

"Informed decision-making is what you aspire to," she said.

Research also is bustling. "At no time in the last 10 years have they tested so many types of trials," Partridge said.

Challenges

There are still types of breast cancer doctors struggle to fight. For example, in about 10 percent of patients, breast cancer does not respond to estrogen, progesterone or HER2 therapy, a "triple-negative" strain that is more difficult to treat, Quinlan said.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Cancer brings family closer

Editor's note: The following college entrance essay was written in 2008 by William Barrett, a graduate of Norwell High School. William is currently a senior at the University of Massachusetts/ Amherst.

By William Barrett

One minute I was in my bedroom watching the Sox game, and the next minute I am in shock learning that my mother has been diagnosed with breast cancer. Although this event happened three and a half years ago, I can remember it as if it happened yesterday. I heard my dad call my name, "Bill," in a strong but somber voice. "Please come out in the living room, I need to speak with you." Oh-no not another one of those endless and embarrassing father son talks. I knew I hadn't done anything wrong, so I wasn't worried about being in any kind of trouble. After all this could just be a friendly chat about the Red Sox. There was just one thing I was hoping would not happen, and that was him asking me to sit down. My wish did not come true. I saw a very strong, "fatherly" look in his eyes. He told me that my mother had cancer, and we all needed to help out and do whatever we could to help my mother through this difficult situation. I am sure my father didn't even realize it but he had set up the exact same scenario the year before when my mother was diagnosed the first time with breast cancer. The eerie part was I even think the Red Sox were playing. They say lightning doesn't strike twice, but I can tell you first hand that it does. After reality set in, I was immediately worried about my younger brother finding out, and of course I felt sorry for my Dad. I reminded my dad that my mom got through it last time and that I was sure she could do it again. My dad just softly smiled and said, "Thanks buddy, I needed to hear that."

I started to do my part. I started by talking with my brother about stepping up and doing more around the house. I also knew I needed to talk to her, my mom always likes to talk with me and loves to hear me laugh. As soon as my mom woke, I went in her room to see how she was doing. She told me that the doctor said she has a 99 percent survival rate, and that "this is the best prognosis anyone could get." The cancer was caught very early. My mom said early detection in cancer is what she thinks will be the cure. I just gave her a hug and she squeezed me really tight. This made me feel great inside. She said, "Make sure dad's OK." I said "Why, is something wrong with dad too?" and she said "No, but this is going to be very hard on him." Although, I started to feel more optimistic about the outcome I was still a little worried.

My mother went back to sleep, and I decided to watch the rest of the game with my dad and my brother. I think we all needed to be sitting together for a while, absorbing what had just happened, but not exactly talking about it. We all got through that first night together, and every day things look brighter and brighter. No one wants a family member to be sick, but I have to say I have learned to be a stronger person because of what my mom went through. A situation like this makes you grow-up in a way that not many people can experience and has made me become more independent. This made me enjoy every day that we have being healthy. My mom always says that if she's ever sad, that the best thing for her is to hear me laughing or singing around the house. I am extremely grateful for the close relationship I have with my mother. This experience has taught me to take time out of my day, regardless of how busy I am, to spend time talking with my mom. Even though I know this may lead to an interrogation. My mother continues to do well and has brought my family closer, and has made me appreciate all I have in life.

UMass is among a number of institutions carrying out genetic analysis on this type of cancer, hoping to find common aspects that doctors can target, he said.

"Everyone is chasing that in the United States," Quinlan said. "It would be so helpful if we had that."

While mammography has improved in the digital age, it remains "a good, but not great tool," Partridge said. She also hopes to see further improvements in determining the risk women face for breast cancer.

UMass is working with a $500,000 federal grant, matched through private donations, to build and test a new type of CT scanner for breast cancer next year, Quinlan said.

"We're getting much better at tailoring our treatment to the type of breast cancer (patients) have."
Dr. Ann Partridge

"We need a screening that's not painful," he said, stressing the importance of better detection. "When we detect (breast cancer) at an early stage, we're not worrying about death."

Work also is underway to unravel and address disparities in cancer rates. While more white women get breast cancer, for example, African-American women die from the disease at a higher rate.

From 2006-08, about 29 out of every 100,000 black women in Massachusetts died of breast cancer, compared to 22 of 100,000 white women, according to state Department of Public Health statistics.

For immigrants and women who do not speak English, language and cultural differences can present barriers to getting screened for breast cancer, Cohen-Boyar said.

"For some people, cancer equals death in their own culture," she said. "They don't know that it can be controlled or cured."

Women with access to care do not always take advantage of it. In a focus group, Bay State women of higher incomes and education levels admitted to skipping mammograms, Cohen-Boyar said, prompted by fear of the unknown and the discomfort of the exam.

Organizations like Komen and the American Cancer Society play an important role in funding work to address challenges like these. Raising awareness of the importance of screening also is a key part of Komen's mission, said Cohen-Boyar.

If awareness efforts convince one woman to get screened for breast cancer, "you can plaster the world with pink as far as I'm concerned," she said.

Mass. Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure presents 19th Annual Race for the Cure

The Massachusetts Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure will present the 19th Annual Komen MA Race for the Cure on Sunday, Oct. 30 at Joe Moakley Park, 600 William J. Day Blvd. in South Boston. The race will begin at 10 a.m.

Join the race and celebrate the Commonwealth's breast cancer survivors, support those currently fighting breast cancer, and remember those we have lost.

The fitness walk/run is truly a memorable day. The event is a nonprofit fundraising event dedicated to raising dollars to support local breast health programs that cover education, prevention, screening, and treatment while also funding the most promising research on the national level. Last year, more than 5,500 participants walked or ran.

The Susan G. Komen Race Series is the world's largest and most successful education and fundraising event for breast cancer.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 17, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're moving from a relatively stable situation to one that appears to be laced with perplexity. Be patient. You'll eventually get answers to help clear up the confusion around you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A vexing situation tempts you to rush to set it all straight. But it's best to let things sort themselves out so that you can get a better picture of the challenge you're facing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Financial matters could create some confusion, especially with a torrent of advice pouring in from several sources. Resist acting on emotion and wait for the facts to emerge.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That goal you've set is still in sight and is still in reach. Stay with the course that you're on. Making too many shifts in direction now could create another set of problems.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It might be time to confront a trouble-making associate and demand some answers. But be prepared for some surprises that could lead you to make a change in some long-standing plans.

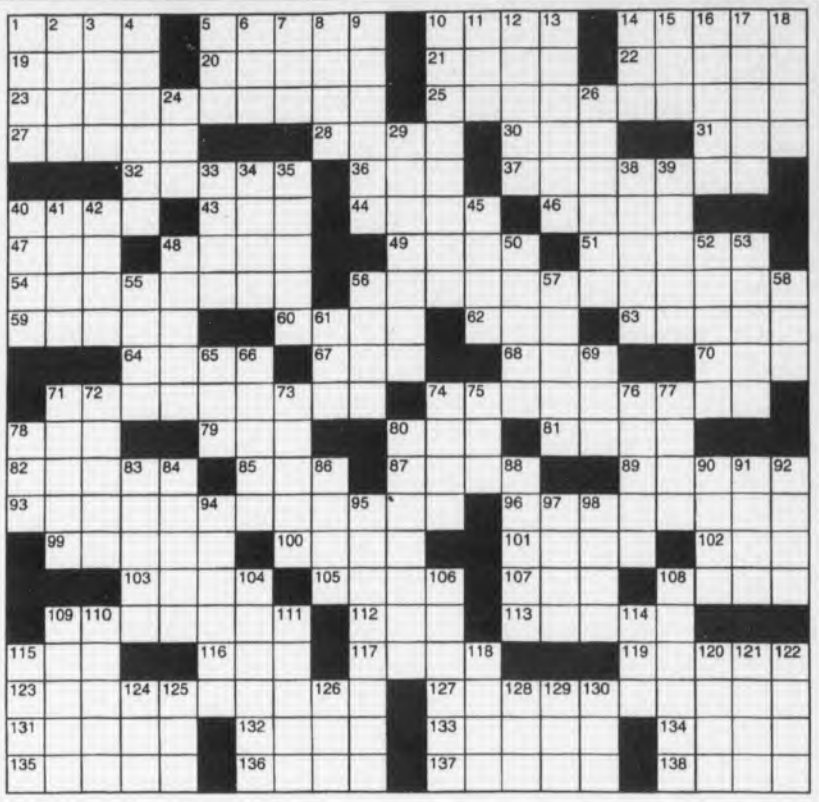
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. You're making great progress in sorting out all that confusion that kept you from making those important decisions. You're on your way now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A difficult experience begins to ease. That's the good news. The not-so-good news is a possible complication that could prolong the problem awhile longer.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your self-confidence gets a much-needed big boost as you start to unsnarl that knotty financial problem. Expect some help from a surprising source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Congratulations. Any lingering negative aftereffects from that not-so-pleasant workplace situation are all but gone. It's time now to focus on the positive.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your self-confidence grows stronger as you continue to take more control of your life. Arrange for some well-earned fun and relaxation with someone special.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) As usual, you've been concerned more about the needs of others than your own. You need to take time for yourself so that you can replenish all that spent energy.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stronger planetary influences indicate a growing presence of people eager to help you navigate through the rough seas that might mark your career course.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can balance emotion and logic, which gives you the ability to make choices that are more likely than not to prove successful.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

Lecture series continues at Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series "Listening to Other Voices: Without a Vision, the People Perish: Why a Religious Tradition?" will take place at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 13.

Sohaib Sultan will present "In the Footsteps of Mohammed: The Spiritual Path of Islam." People now live in an age of extremism – not only violent extremes, but also extremes of self-indulgence, materialism and entertainment. Sultan will explore how the Prophet Mohammed was an exemplar of a contrary approach – the purification of the heart and soul from the desires and wants of selfish ego – the spiritual path of Islam. With a spiritual discipline of compassion, the aim is to produce a loving personality that manifests itself in compassionate living. Sultan is the first full-time Muslim Life coordinator and chaplain at Princeton University. He has lectured here and abroad on Islam, Muslim cultures and Muslim-Western relations. Author of several articles and books, his first book, "The Koran for Dummies," (Wiley 2004) is part of the "Dummies" series.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Reservations will not be taken. Seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, visit the website at glastonburyabbey.org.

Library homework center gets high marks

Friends of the Library President Jill Littlejohn holds one of several papier-mâché pieces created by Cohasset High School students to help market the Open House event.

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Tuesday night Paul Pratt Memorial Library Homework Center hosted an Open House to kick of its 4th year of providing academic support to local students. More than 35 students showed up for extra help with their homework. Tutors are members of the Cohasset High School Honor Society. All attendees were treated to refreshments and pizza.

On hand to greet everyone were the Center's new Coordinator, Jill Kelley; Friends of the Library President, Jill Littlejohn; Friend of the Library and Homework Center advisor, Jessica Patterson; Jackie Rafferty, Director of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; and Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo. Sharon Moody, the Children's Librarian, is also an integral part of the Homework Center and has helped make it the success that it is.

The Homework Center was adorned with signs and art specifically made for the Open House by the following Cohasset High School artists: Hannah Rawson, Katie Brenna, Kate Sookiasian, Meaghan Kearney and Mrs. Lisa Sugrue, Director Fine Arts Department, Cohasset High School.

Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library, Paul Pratt Memorial Library Homework Center offers an academic enrichment resource that encourages local students to improve their study skills and receive free tutoring help. The Homework Center, founded in 2008, offers all students in Cohasset a welcoming and supportive place to sharpen their study skills every Tuesday night from 5:30-7 pm (except holidays and holiday weeks).

Visit cohassetlibrary.org for other library resources and events.

Hometown gal heads to 'Sweet Home Alabama'

Aspiring singer competes on CMT reality show

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A Cohasset girl is looking for love in Alabama.

Cassie Cardelle appears this month on CMT's "Sweet Home Alabama: Season 2," a reality show in the vein of "The Bachelor" in which 22 female contestants vie for the romantic affections of Tribble Reese, a former Clemson quarterback and current MBA student from Birmingham, Ala. Reese was a competing bachelor on the show last season.

In a country music channel twist, the show pits country girls against city girls. "City girl" Cardelle, who was born in Boston and raised in Cohasset, lives and attends college in L.A., where she is working to launch her music career. Locals may know Cardelle as the granddaughter of Rik Tinory, who owns a successful recording studio in town.

"Sweet Home Alabama's" first season was the highest rated show on the network in 2011. At 19, Cardelle was one of the youngest contestants on this season's show. The singer admits that she has yet to fall in love — at least, "not the way people describe love" — but that she hopes to do so.

"I'll know when I find it," Cardelle said in a phone interview from L.A.

Cardelle, who graduated from Cohasset High in 2010, landed the show after meeting with a casting agent and interviewing for it.

"I told them I was a singer/rapper working on an album, and they liked that," Cardelle said, adding that while she has not yet signed a record contract, she will soon be showcasing her music to major labels. The would-be pop star also studies sound/audio engineering and wants to produce her music

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE

Deer accidents up this time of year

What:
Deer-car accidents can occur any time of year but the numbers rise during the mating season, dubbed "rut," which occurs from October through December. There are 85,000 white-tailed deer in Massachusetts. They are crepuscular, meaning that they are most active at dawn and dusk. However, they may also be active at other times of the day.

Where
Most Cohasset deer-car accidents have been reported on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) between Stop & Shop and JJ's; and on North Main Street near Wheelwright Park. On Sunday, a 59-year-old, Lincoln, R.I. man, in a 2011 Hyundai, reported hitting a deer on Route 3A near Hingham Lumber. The deer was killed. The operator, who was headed north, was not injured and there was no serious damage to his car, police said.

Advice
Police say if you see a deer, slow down and always expect another one. Police suggest motorists lower their speed in areas where deer typically cross the road to allow more reaction time. They also suggest if you see a deer, brake firmly and try to stay in your lane. Often drivers swerve to avoid a deer and they could hit another car head on or drive into a pole or a tree. "It is better to hit a deer than another driver," Lt. William Quigley said.

If you hit a deer
Police said if you hit a deer, you should call 911. Police said people should not go near an injured deer because their hooves are sharp and could cause serious injury should the animal kick the concerned motorist.

Interesting fact
Three years ago Cohasset cruisers were outfitted with deer whistles that are inaudible to human ears. The whistles appear to have been successful in warning deer to stay away as there has not been a cruiser-deer accident in a long time, police said.

Police say lowering your speed in areas where deer typically cross the road will allow more reaction time. This sign is on North Main Street near Wheelwright Park.

The Mariner caught up with Betsey Detwiler of Buttonwood Books & Toys this week. Buttonwood is celebrating 22 years in business. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Betsey Detwiler

Name: Betsey Detwiler

Occupation: Owner, Buttonwood Books & Toys

Best day of your life: The most euphoric day was certainly the birth of the first of our five sons, but the best day would really have to be my wedding day. Bob and I just celebrated our 54th anniversary, and we've been good partners through all those years as we've celebrated joyous occasions and weathered challenging times.

Best vacation: We've had numerous great vacations, traveling with singing groups, going on a painting workshop in Spain, and visiting our four AFS exchange students and friends we've met through them. This August we spent an idyllic week in Finland, at the lakeside summer home of our Finnish student from 1983. He's now second in command to the head of the European Commission, where his wife is also a lawyer, so we had some interesting discussions along with the wonderful sights and food.

Favorite season: I think my favorite season is Spring, because it holds so much promise. The flowering shrubs in our yard unfold one after the other, and we look forward to relaxing weekends in our summer home in Chatham.

Favorite holiday: My favorite holiday is Thanksgiving. We actually celebrate a week early. Our four married sons all live within minutes of us, and this gives them the chance to visit the other families on the "real" Thanksgiving with a clear conscience. There are 23 of us in the immediate family, and we always have guests and other relatives that family members bring along. The house is full of happy people, jokes and laughter. I love it.

Favorite junk food: I don't have a favorite junk food. I guess it would have to be any wonderful baked good. Regrettably, I have a sweet tooth.

Favorite book: Asking the owner of a bookstore to choose a favorite book is impossible. I have lots of favorite books for various reasons. My favorite magazine is the Pastel Journal.

Favorite movie: We are not frequent moviegoers. In the past year we particularly enjoyed "The King's Speech."

Favorite TV show: I cannot hold my own in a discussion of TV shows. There is nothing we watch regularly. We occasionally enjoy the English comedies or documentaries on PBS. I'm usually working at the computer or reading at night.

Favorite music, group or artist: I guess the Boston Symphony Orchestra would have to be my answer, as far as a group of musicians goes. I am currently enjoying two CD's I bought in Finland, featuring Karita Mattila, the famous Finnish soprano.

Pet peeve: Since "peeve" indicates a minor annoyance, mine is the way the various media misuse grammar. Misplaced modifiers are my particular peeve. They are often funny, but they still annoy me.

Most embarrassing moment: Some embarrassing moments get more frequent with age. This summer we went to hear a former minister preach. After the service I introduced myself to a woman who looked vaguely familiar. I later realized the reason for her bemused expression. I had invited her and her husband to an impromptu lunch the previous summer, when a mutual friend was visiting. I won't forget her again.

Goal: I haven't had just one goal in this life. It perhaps sounds pretentious, but I've always hoped that the things I've said and done have made a positive difference in lives I've touched and in the life of a lot of people I've never met. I've often missed the mark, of course, but it's the way I try to live. I also hope to keep myself in good health so that I can see my youngest grandchildren grow up. My family means the world to me. I dearly love them all.

Person you would most like to meet: I wish I could go back in time and meet my great-aunt Huldah. She was a newspaper editor and publisher in Rockland and lectured widely on suffrage and labor. Garrison commented favorably on a speech she gave at Tremont Temple in Boston. She has always fascinated me as someone who was not afraid of controversy and who was ahead of her time.

Biggest worry: My biggest worry is that the current political situation takes us farther and farther away from treating our neighbor as our brother. The lack of civility and the rush to make statements that appeal to the worst in us and assure the most votes is distressing. One would like to think that we continually make progress in human rights and in taking care of the most vulnerable among us, but those goals are always fragile and subject to politics.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset's most beautiful asset is its stunning shoreline. The asset we most appreciate is the wonderful people we've met here in our 22 years of business.

POLICE BEAT

Road 'rager' follows man home

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 34-year-old Cohasset man went to the police station to report a road rage incident to police last week. He said a silver or gray 2010 Toyota Avalon with New York plates was aggressively tailgating him and followed him home. The Toyota would speed up and slow down. The car followed him into his driveway where the operator, an older man with balding head, made an obscene gesture at the Cohasset man before driving away. The incident occurred around 2 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 3).

Arrested

A 45-year-old Cohasset man is facing assault charges after he allegedly used his pickup truck to threaten and intimidate an ex-girlfriend and two of her friends. Police said at 3:25 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 9), the women came into headquarters to report that as they were leaving Government Island – one of the women came face to face with her ex-boyfriend who was in his Toyota pickup truck. The women continued on their way but the ex-boyfriend allegedly began to follow them, passed them, and then turned around and came right toward them avoiding a head-on crash at the last second. The three women, who police say were really shaken up, all made statements to police. The Cohasset man was arrested and charged with assault; assault with a dangerous weapon (vehicle); negligent operation and marked lanes violation. A judge also issued a restraining order against him, police said.

Hanging out

A 64-year-old Cohasset woman who lives on Beach Street reported last week that there were cars filled with teens hanging around the bottom of her driveway late at night and usually on the weekends. Police, who have put on extra patrols in the area, said the woman's driveway is about 1/4 of a mile long.

Larceny

While a Cohasset couple was packing for a recent trip they noticed some jewelry was missing but thought perhaps they had misplaced it. Upon their return the husband and wife, ages 61 and 65 years old respectively, investigated further and determined that a large amount of jewelry was missing with a total value of $15,000, police said. Items include rings, bracelets, diamond earrings and chains. Their house has been on the market since 2009 and has had multiple showings, police said. Cohasset detectives are investigating the apparent larceny.

MV crashes

• At 3:41 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 4), Cohasset police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by the MBTA parking lot. Police said a 2001 Porsche Boxster, operated by a 63-year-old Hingham man, pulled out of the parking lot to make a left onto Route 3A when the light was changing from green to yellow. The Hingham man hit the gas, went into a spin on the wet pavement and careened into a 1998 Toyota Camry, operated by a 50-year-old Hingham woman, that was sitting in the northbound lane of Route 3A at the red light. Neither car was towed and there were no apparent injuries. The operator of the Porsche was cited for failing to stop at a yellow light.

• At 3:45 p.m. on Thursday (Oct. 6), police responded to a two-car accident on King Street (Route 3A) near Dunkin Donuts. Police said a 1999 Dodge Ram pickup truck, operated by a 61-year-old Cohasset man, pulled out of Dunkin Donuts to make a left onto Route 3A but failed to yield to oncoming traffic. The pickup truck pulled in front of a 2009 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 65-year-old man from Naples, Fla., causing an accident. There were no apparent injuries; the Jeep had to be towed, police said. The operator of the pickup truck was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

• At 3:45 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 7), a 911 caller reported that a car had gone off the road into a tree on South Main Street. Police said an 80-year-old Cohasset man, operating a 2002 Toyota Camry south toward Scituate, lost control of the car, crossed over the centerline and hit a tree on the opposite side of the road. It is not known why the man lost control. Police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to conduct a medical evaluation on the operator. The Toyota was totaled; the operator was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

• At 11:14 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 9), a 59-year-old, Lincoln, R.I., man in a 2011 Hyundai, reported hitting a deer on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Hingham Lumber. The deer was killed. The operator, who was headed north, was not injured and there was no serious damage to his car, police said.

Lawn damage

At 3:06 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 7), police received a report of a neighbor dispute. A 50-year-old resident reported his neighbor, a 70-year-old woman, drove over his lawn. Officers responded to the area but were unable to determine whose yard was whose. The building department and assessors' office could be asked to assist with clarifying the property lines, police said.

Tomatoes

Police received a report at 12:08 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 9) that kids were throwing tomatoes at cars near the Beechwood Ball Park. Police responded but no kids or tomatoes were found.

UPDATE

Regional dispatch center progress report

Additional grant received

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

The actual date of the final switchover to the regional dispatch center at Hingham Town Hall is as yet unknown, but it's expected to happen in the near future.

The changeover will occur for Hingham throughout the month of October and for the other three towns — Cohasset, Hull and Norwell — in successive two-week intervals.

The project is a joint effort among the four towns.

The official name is South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center (SSRECC).

After a number of delays in getting the center up and running since the project was first considered in 2007, it's expected that the new facility will be fully operational in the next several weeks or so.

Cohasset town manager Mike Coughlin called the delays "a series of dominos," citing the Verizon strike and tropical storm Irene as major contributors.

"When you have an organization of this complexity and this magnitude and try to integrate four communities into one facility, you're going to have some growing pains," said Coughlin.

As each community moves its dispatchers into the building, it becomes a fully operational part of the center. Despite the complexities there will be no break in emergency service.

The benefits are expected to include improved services to the public, enhanced safety for fire and police personnel, more effective information-sharing among the four towns, and a potential cost savings.

The new dispatch center will be one of 15 regional emergency response facilities of its kind in the state, but this is the first time that communities have banded together to form one of their own.

The four towns are taking advantage of a state grant program designed to encourage these types of regionalization efforts. Eventually, more communities could join the Hingham dispatch center.

In the summer of 2010, the legislature gave final approval to a bill creating the new regional facility. Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, played a major role in the passage of the bill, as did the late Rep. Robert Nyman, D-Hanover, who cosponsored the legislation,in early 2010 and was instrumental in advocating for its passage.

State grants

The project is funded by $3.6 million in state grants to cover construction, operating, and capital costs. Several months ago the State 911 Department awarded a $2.2 million grant on top of the previous funding to go toward constructing, furnishing, and equipping the center.

Another grant was awarded recently in the amount of $837,699 to cover the cost of equipment to record incoming calls; a closed-circuit TV; radio system enhancements; and tying the four police and fire stations together into the new center electronically. There will be a back-up system should the radio system fail for some reason.

"We're very grateful to 911 for supporting us once again," Hingham Town Administrator Ted Alexiades said. "These are critical items to help ensure the success of the new center."

As is the case with Hingham, town officials in Hull, Cohasset, and Norwell have also played key roles in bringing the center to reality. It will be run as a separate intergovernmental agency among the four towns.

It's expected that other communities in the state will be keeping a close eye on the Hingham regional dispatch center to see how it works before deciding if they want to follow suit.

Staff reporter Erin Dale contributed to this story.

Supervisor position sought at new dispatch center

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Three of the four towns planning to move dispatchers to the regional center have two representatives from their respective towns working as supervisors in the center — all except Cohasset.

Hingham, Hull and Norwell all had representatives from their towns hired, with six supervisors total working at SSRECC (South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center.) Cohasset became the odd one out, despite town manager Mike Coughlin's belief that Cohasset's candidate was well qualified.

With all four towns moving to the center, Coughlin insists that Cohasset should also be represented, and he is working to make that happen.

As of press time, Coughlin will have attended a special meeting with the SSRECC's board of directors on Thursday, Oct. 13 to discuss having a Cohasset supervisor on board.

"If this concept is to work, it needs to have the mutual respect of all four towns... and acknowledge that Cohasset should have a supervisor," Coughlin said. "My job is to make sure Cohasset's voice is heard."

EVENT PREVIEW

Cohasset blood drive Oct. 21

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

Why

The Northeast Division of the American Red Cross Blood Services must distribute approximately 3,000 units of blood each day just to meet the basic needs of area patients. Everyone, whether it is realized or not, depends on blood. Every two seconds, someone needs blood. Each day, patients across the country receive approximately 38,000 units of this lifesaving resource. Annually, as many as five million patients require blood transfusions, as accident victims, people undergoing surgery, and patients receiving treatment for leukemia, cancer and other diseases.

When

The American Red Cross hopes the residents of Cohasset will take some time out of their busy lives to give the Gift of Life. A Red Cross Blood Drive will be held on Friday, Oct. 21st at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St. from 1:30 to 6:30 pm. Donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals as well as those throughout New England.

Who can help

Individuals who are at least 17 years of age (16 with parental permission), weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks.

More information

To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or if you have questions, please call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, send an email with the requested appointment time (between 1:30 and 6:30 pm) to oconnorkf@comcast.net, call the Red Cross Blood Services at 1-800-448-3543 or visit www.givelife.org. For more information on the blood donation process, current eligibility guidelines, or if you want to know if you are eligible to donate, you can call the American Red Cross nursing line at 1-800-462-9400 x2210 or please visit www.RedCrossBlood.org. Tell a friend or bring a friend and give the gift of life. If you cannot make it to this Cohasset Blood Drive on Oct. 21st, you can go on the web at the site address above for a sampling of other upcoming blood drives in the area.

Deputy chief posts aired before advisory committee

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Both deputy positions would be salaried, non-union, so the employees would be expected to work at least 40 hours a week and would not be paid overtime.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca took their proposal for adding deputies to their departments to the Advisory Committee on Tuesday, Oct. 11. The two chiefs presented the same plan to the board of selectmen last week.

Both chiefs are advocating hiring deputy chiefs to act for them in the event of their absence. Both discussed the possibility of promoting someone from lieutenant and captain positions.

Advisory committee chairman Peter Pescatore said that the board of selectmen referred Town Manager Mike Coughlin to advisory to review the proposal.

Coughlin told the committee that of the four towns he has worked in, this is the only town that does not have deputy positions in the public safety command structure. He added that the departments in the other towns were roughly the same size as Cohasset's.

Chief Silvia is the only non-union administrative employee, but he spent most of tropical storm Irene out on the road, helping with downed lines and other critical issues. In the meantime, no one was at the station doing administrative tasks.

"No one was at the central command post," Coughlin said.

Silvia told the board he needed to have a second in command if he is ever sick or on vacation. He explained how the position is already in the budget for fiscal year 2012 and would only lead to a small increase for fiscal year '13.

The fire department has a captain's position that has not been filled. This position would be elevated to a deputy chief's position, Silvia explained.

Chief DeLuca insisted that adding a deputy position would save his department money.

Both deputy positions would be salaried, non-union, so the employees would be expected to work at least 40 hours a week and would not be paid overtime.

Both chiefs said that they will most likely promote employees from lieutenant and captain positions within their respective departments.

The police department lieutenant who is chosen would lose his union status and take a pay cut.

"If someone wants to step outside the union to help the department — that's huge," said DeLuca.

Chief DeLuca invited Mitch Librett, assistant professor of criminal justice at Bridgewater State College, to the advisory committee meeting to voice his support of the proposal.

Librett, who spent 13 years as a police lieutenant in New Rochelle, NY, said he had been happy to look the proposal over for DeLuca and told the board that the proposal makes sense.

"I think we all agree with the concept," said Pescatore. "These gentlemen are hard-working and stretched thin.

"My concern," he added, "is adding permanent structure in a fiscal time stature."

"As the chief demonstrated, his proposal will save money," Coughlin said.

The committee asked the chiefs if the new deputies will also need new vehicles.

DeLuca responded that the lieutenants already have vehicles, so whoever is promoted will continue to drive what he has.

Silvia said that his assistant chief would be given an existing older vehicle, and will drive it "till it dies and needs to be replaced."

"We are supportive of this," said Pescatore. "It will make the town a better and safer place to be. You guys need the support."

Pescatore added that, "The caveat is if it creates a budget problem, it's Mike's to deal with."

The advisory committee voted in favor to give their recommendation of support.

Chief Silvia said they will next bring the proposal back to the board of selectmen. They hope to have the positions filled by Jan. 1, "ready for the next budget season."

"We want the positions in as soon as possible, in case there's a big winter storm," said Coughlin.

Health care hold-up

Town delays implementing new plan

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In order to implement the new plan by January 1, the town will have to meet a November 1 deadline to sign up.

It has come up at several recent Board of Selectmen meetings; board members have expressed concern that the town has delayed signing up for a new municipal health care plan. By postponing the health care implementation, the town has missed out on roughly $23,000 in savings monthly.

A few board members have brought up the fact that the schools have yet to come on board with the plan, suggesting that the rest of the town is ready to go.

Superintendent of School Barbara Cataldo wanted to make it clear that while the school board is still considering their options, she does not believe they are the sole reason for the hold-up.

"We were highlighted," she said. "We've got things on the table, but don't have any signed agreements. But does anyone else in town?"

She also mentioned the fact that the school board recently changed their legal counsel. It will take a little more time for the school to catch up.

Town manager Mike Coughlin said that the rest of the town departments have tentative agreements in place.

"We're almost ready to go with all units," he said.

Coughlin credited interim town manager Steve Lombard with making the transition fairly painless for the new town manager.

"Steve left with those agreements on my desk when I assumed the post on August 1," Coughlin said. Cataldo, he added, did not have the same documents in place when she began her new position this summer.

"It took Steve Lombard a number of months to negotiate" the new plan, said Coughlin. "It's understandable that it's going to take some time to negotiate with the school unions."

In order to implement the new plan by January 1, the town will have to meet a November 1 deadline to sign up.

"The board of selectmen are concerned because the potential savings have been estimated at $23,000 a month that are being missed out on," Coughlin said.

However, he added, "It's better to have the entire town and gown go together on this matter. I'm confident we will reach an agreement.

"But if we're going forward with a united front, we have to give the Superintendent and the school committee the time they need to move forward in good faith."

ImprovBoston brings anti-bullying workshop to school

PSO sponsors program for fourth-graders

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"It's never too late to go back and apologize. It's important to remember that you can always think before you speak."
Bryce Read, ImprovBoston

Schools statewide are cracking down on bullying, and the Deer Hill School is no exception. In light of anti-bullying legislation, the school invited the comedy troupe ImprovBoston to put on its anti-bullying workshop for the fourth graders.

Two actors from the Cambridge-based ImprovBoston, Bryce Read and Emily Holland, performed a series of sketches in the school's gym on Wednesday, Oct. 12. Three different sessions were held, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., so that all of the fourth grade classes could attend. The event was sponsored by the PSO.

Read told the kids that he and Holland normally perform comedic routines, "but today, we're here to talk about something that's not funny — bullying."

Students got to participate in the sketches as audience members and volunteers. The two actors asked the students for input throughout the workshop, allowing the children's suggestions to shape their sketches. All routines were, of course, made up on the spot, with the students' help.

At times, the kids were asked to clap when they heard either actor bullying the other. Upon hearing the claps, the actors would change the scene and say something nice instead. Sometimes the kids were slow to clap, as some of the quips spoken in a sarcastic or jovial tone were hard for the children to distinguish as bullying. Obvious insults had the kids clapping vigorously.

The fourth graders clearly had fun watching the comedians act out various scenarios, and it was also clear that the deeper message came across.

At first, however, students were reluctant to acknowledge their participation in bullying. When Read asked one group of kids to raise their hands if they'd ever been bullied, most did. When asked if they'd ever been the one doing the bullying, not a single child lifted a hand.

"There are two possibilities," said Read. "One, we're too afraid to admit being the bully. Or two, we've been the bully without realizing it."

Read and Holland focused on helping the kids learn how to deal with a bully — ask them to stop, walk away, get an adult — and how to be supportive of friends and classmates.

"We can always make better choices," Read told the students. "It's never too late to go back and apologize. It's important to remember that you can always think before you speak."

The actors also encouraged the kids to report bullying on their school website, where they can post anonymously.

ImprovBoston's anti-bullying workshop was started by Deana Tolliver, a comedian and instructor there who also works as the group's director of training and director of sales. Read told the kids that Tolliver started the program two years ago after her own son was bullied in school. Read and Holland have performed in schools all over the Boston metro area.

Students responded favorably to the workshop.

Shane, age 10, said he liked "the funny actors," and that he learned that "you should always tell someone" when being bullied.

Nayantara, 9, said that she liked the workshop "because it was funny. They were trying to teach us in a way that wasn't boring."

Katharyn, 9, and Annabelle, 10, both said that they had fun watching the actors. Annabelle also echoed the lesson she learned that day in three steps: "Go to a teacher, support your friend, or walk away."

ImprovBoston actor Bryce Read invites students Declan Mchugh (L) and Charlie Crumley (R), to participate in the action by judging acts of bullying.

4th grader Will Seavey listens as ImprovBoston actors enact examples different types of bullying.

Must I Motivate Myself?

By Elizabeth Johnson

To be motivated means to be moved to do something. Health and fitness professionals know that it can be very difficult to be motivated to MOVE. Intrinsic motivation comes from within: from the enjoyment, interest, or achievement that working out and eating a nutritious diet provide you. Alternately, extrinsic motivation comes from things or factors outside of you like recognition, weight loss, or improving appearance. Your overall motivation is often a combination of both kinds.

In terms of health and fitness, everyone experiences different degrees and different kinds of motivation. Not everyone will "love" running or lifting weights or doing squats and lunges. In fact, the act of moving your body may not seem interesting or enjoyable to you and the intrinsic motivation to strive for better health, longevity and energy may elude you.

We understand. You need not go it alone. Working in small groups of women with a common goal, you have a far better chance to feed off the motivation of the foursome. Some say two heads are better than one. Get In Shape For Women knows that whether it be 2 or 4 or 8 heads, the group drive, social energy and common goal of a workout group are the greatest resources to overcoming lack of motivation.

Get In Shape For Women has workout groups in studios all across the country. Our certified staff holds clients accountable with a scheduled workout system. Our comprehensive body transformation program is rounded out with cardiovascular training, strength training and supportive nutrition to help you meet your goal.

Member Denise Jacobs explains, "I joined Get In Shape For Women in early March after 20 years of creeping weight gain, fits and starts at exercise and guilty trips past the idle treadmill in the basement. I've never really been into working out and found it difficult to motivate myself. The flyers in the mail came at just the right time! Get In Shape For Women is the perfect program for me - small, intimate, friendly - and disciplined. In a little over 6 months I have lost nearly 35 pounds, I am so much stronger, and I have gone from a size 14W to an 8. And I have made new friends. Not only do I love my new shape - I love the way I feel!"

AROUND TOWN

Share your baby news, birthdays and more

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone doing this week? I have a question for everyone out there who is reading the Cohasset Mariner and the "Around Town" column, now don't look away, I know you are looking! I have a lot of wonderful events to share with you as well as information on some programs and learning opportunities for the next few weeks but one of the things that I have not been receiving lately are those awesome requests to announce celebration information like, "Happy Birthday to..." "Happy Anniversary to..." "Oh my gosh, we would like to welcome Baby _____ to the world" and, well, I think you get the picture. Those are some wonderful ideas and are so fun to share with the community along with the events, school announcements and guess what??? You can even send in photos as well. I love to share all the happy news as everyone knows but in order to do that, I need to be told who and what we can share! Have a super week Cohasset!

Library events

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has some really cool events coming up and would love to have you join them for any or all of them. The first one is a coffee and discussion of Ann Patchett's book, Bel Canto on Wed, Oct. 26 at 10 am. This is free to all and everyone is welcome.

The next opportunity is when Author Charles C. Mann visits on Sunday, Nov. 6 at 4 pm to talk about his new book "1493." A wine and cheese reception and book signing will follow. Keep in mind that the parking is limited so make sure to stop in and get your free ticket at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the Cohasset Historical Society, Buttonwood Books, or the South Shore Art Center. The Rotary Club of Cohasset sponsors this event.

Stephanie Schorow, author of "The Coconut Grove Fire," will give a presentation on Thursday, Nov. 10, 2011 at 7 pm. This event is also free to all and is sponsored by a grant from the Social Service League of Cohasset.

Call the library at 781-383-1348 for more information or with questions.

Fall clean-up

Here is a great bit of news that definitely is a way to give back to the community and it is, "Make a Difference Day!" You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and make a difference at the same time. This year the annual PSO-sponsored Make A Difference Days is the weekend of Nov. 5th & 6th. This event pairs volunteers with seniors to assist with general fall clean-up (i.e. raking and disposing of leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.). This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together while fostering community pride and spirit. Families, students and scout groups welcome! If you have any questions or are interested in VOLUNTEERING, please contact: Kelli Gildea 383-6529 or at ckgildea@verizon.net. If you would like assistance with general fall clean-up please contact: Carol Barrett at Cohasset Elder Affairs at 383-9112.

Girl Scout Halloween Party

Amazing to think that we are already at the time of year for this awesome event but here we go. Any and all Girl Scouts in Cohasset, get ready to join for the annual Girl Scout Halloween Party on Sunday, Oct. 30 from 4-6 p.m. at Deer Hill School! There will be a DJ, pizza & dessert, crafts and lots of fun! Permission slips and $10 admission due by Oct. 21st. Please contact your troop leader or Josephine Lee (josephine.lee@comcast.net) for more information and remember that this event is open to all registered Girl Scouts in Cohasset!

Local names

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its October Wednesday Night Lecture Series on Oct. 19th with guest speaker, David Wadsworth. David is the Historical Society's official Historian and his knowledge of Cohasset is a deep and broad as any ocean. He presents the facts of history with assurance and a sense of humor. A life-long resident of Cohasset, David will take us on a tour around town with a continuation of his program "What's In a Name". Attendees will learn the history behind areas in our town that have been given a designation. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. There is no charge and light refreshment will be offered. An invitation to attend this evening's event is extended to all interested in learning more about the town we live in.

Paragon Carousel

Following a few days later is the Cohasset Historical Society's Fall Dinner and Annual Meeting on Sunday, Oct. 23 at the Cohasset Harbor Resort, 124 Elm St. Guest speaker for the evening will be James Hardison who will talk about the Paragon Carrousel, its history and the efforts make to save it from destruction. The meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a cash bar and is open to members and guests at a cost of $31 per members and $36 per guests. The evening's menu will offer a choice of Roasted Baby Cod with buttery crumbs or Chicken with a Champagne Sauce. Reservations are needed by Friday, Oct. 14th and can be made by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 or by sending a check with your desired entrée choices to The Cohasset Historical Society, PO Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Movie night

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee invites you to October's movie night, "Gasland" on Oct. 21 at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This movie, described below, will surely provide even more be food for thought regarding need for developing clean energy. "The largest domestic natural gas drilling boom in history has swept across the United States. The Halliburton-developed drilling technology of 'fracking' or hydraulic fracturing has unlocked a 'Saudia Arabia of natural gas' just beneath us." But is fracking safe? When filmmaker Josh Fox is asked to lease his land for drilling, he embarks on a cross-country odyssey uncovering a trail of secrets, lies and contamination. A recently drilled nearby Pennsylvania town reports that residents are able to light their drinking water on fire. This is just one of the many absurd and astonishing revelations of a new country called Gasland. Part vérité travelogue, part expose, part mystery, part bluegrass banjo meltdown, part showdown." As always, refreshments are offered.

Gridironfest

The Gridiron is hosting "Gridironfest" at Atlantica on Saturday, Oct. 29th to raise money for the Cohasset High School football program. From 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. the Gridiron will host this first annual event with great raffle prizes, appetizers, music and a cash bar. Tickets are $25.00 for the function. For further information call Lillian Curley at 781-383-0695.

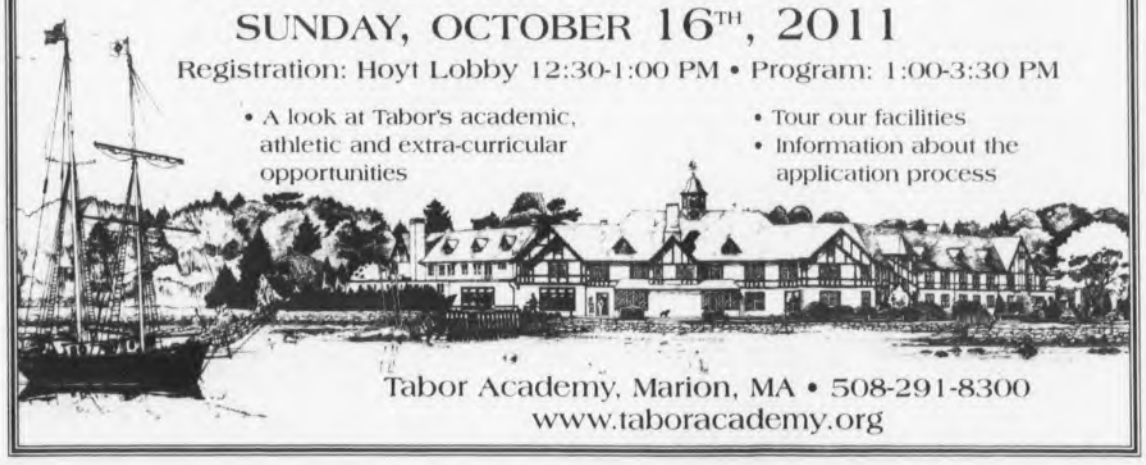
Pancake Breakfast

The 35th annual Pancake Breakfast will take place from 8 a.m. to noon, on Sunday, Oct. 16, at Deer Hill School. The breakfast is the single annual fundraiser for the Cohasset High School Soccer program. People are encouraged to come enjoy pancakes and bid on auction items.

Tickets are available at the door and include entry into the raffle for a month's worth of grocery shopping or gasoline.

Witches ball

Halloween is coming, Halloween is coming, skeletons will soon be after you... The South Shore Art Center will hold a Halloween celebration on Friday, Oct. 21 at 8 pm at the Red Lion Inn. Andrea Hillier, event chair, is seeking donations for the Witches' Auction to be held throughout the evening. She can be reached at hilliersinboston@yahoo.com. The event is titled "The Witches' Ball" and will include fabulous food, entertainment, fortune telling, and an auction of art, travel opportunities, jewelry, gifts, services and more! Donations to the auction are still being sought; call the Art Center if you are interested in contributing to the Witches' Auction. Guests are encouraged to dress creatively for the event — perhaps a favorite artist or painting, a witch or warlock, a politician or a construction worker — all are welcome! Tickets for The Witches' Ball, at Red Lion Inn are $75 for Art Center members and $85 for non-members. Tickets must be purchased in advance.



All proceeds support the exhibitions and education programs of South Shore Art Center. To purchase tickets, visit www.ssac.org or contact the Art Center at 781-383-2787.

Have a great weekend and send in all of your news no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm!

Martin – Sullivan

Corey Elizabeth Martin and Jari Roine Martin of Brighton were married Jan. 15, 2011 at the Arlington Street Church in Boston.

Corey is the daughter of Mary and Michael Sullivan Cohasset. Jari is the son of Donald Roine of Hull and Elizabeth Martin of Cohasset.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Michael Sullivan.

Attendants included maids of honor: Emilie and Olivia Sullivan, sisters of the bride; bridesmaids: Caitlin Walsh, Cara Foley, Chauntel Gerdes, Jordana Held, Kristen Linton. The bride's cousin, Isabel Sullivan served as the flower girl. Best men: Benjamin Roine and Liam Martin, brothers of the groom; groomsmen: Daniel Sullivan, brother of the bride; Charles Anderson, Kevin Chang, Jon Doran, Robin Murphy and Peter Maitland.

Readers were: Kate Meyer, Jennifer Reidy, and Timothy Straughn.

Corey and Jari attended Cohasset High School from 1998 to 2002. Corey graduated from New York University in 2006 with a degree in political science and history and a minor in Spanish and will graduate from Boston College Law School in May 2012.

Jari graduated from UMass Dartmouth in 2006 with a degree in political science and received a law degree from New England Law in 2011.

A reception was held at The Four Seasons in Boston.

ENGAGEMENT

Pease - Murphy

Sarah and Samuel Pease of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Sarah Hoyt, to Jeremiah (Jerry) Patrick Murphy III, son of Linda and Jeremiah Murphy Jr. of Dover.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Milton Academy and Yale University. She is currently working as volunteer program coordinator in university advancement at Tufts University.

Her fiancé is a graduate of the Roxbury Latin School and Harvard University. He is currently pursuing a master's degree at the Harvard School of Business.

The bride and groom met when living and working in Washington, DC. They became engaged in January.

The couple plans to wed on Nov. 19, 2011, in Boston.

October happenings

Fourth annual Discover the Woods Day - Holly Hill Farm was Sunday Oct. 2. There was a 5K-trail race, a 1-mile fun walk/run and fun activities in the afternoon including a very popular fairy house building workshop in the woods. The overall winner of the 5K was the Friends of Holly Hill Farm's Education Director Jon Belber. For the women, the winner was Laura Mastroianni. CHS teacher Jack Buckley was the emcee at the start and for the awards ceremony. Kudos to the four CHS students that woke up very early to help with the 5K race: Bianca Furtado, Francesca Astino, Chrissy Secatore, and Stephanie Breney. This year 15 members of the Cohasset Rec Department's running club ran the 1-mile race.

Growing Great Garlic - Join the Friends of Holly Hill Farm for a fun workshop to learn about growing healthy, organic garlic on Saturday, Oct. 22 from 1 to 3 p.m. This is the right time of year to plant the bulb for harvesting next summer and a perfect time for roasting. Come learn how to prepare the soil, plant the seeds, mulch appropriately and enjoy some roasted garlic with bread, straight from our wood-fired mud oven. Seed garlic for your own planting will be available for sale. Admission: $12 for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members and $16 for nonmembers.

Mushroom Foraging Workshop - Come to Holly Hill Farm on Sunday, Oct. 16 at 1 p.m. for a mushroom foraging workshop. Learn about the fascinating world of mushrooms from Dr. Lawrence Millman, a renowned expert in mushroom identification. Take a walk in the woods and learn how to safely identify delicious mushrooms. Millman's new book, "Fascinating Fungi of New England," will be available for sale. For directions and information, visit hollyhillfarm.org. Admission: $10 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $12 for nonmembers.

HAPPENINGS

Haunted Hayride

Brendan St. John's Classic Haunted Hay Ride and Barn will take place 5 to 8 p.m., on Oct. 21, 22, 28 and 29. Parking will be at the DPW on Cedar Street, Cohasset. Tickets are $12 per person per ride with profits being donated to Cohasset Food Pantry. Price includes hayride to and from the haunted barn.

Halloween parade

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School proudly announces that the Annual Halloween Fair will be held on Cohasset Town Common on Sunday, Oct. 23rd from 2-4 p.m. There will be a Costume Parade at 1:45p.m. Children should meet on the Common to parade around the pond with theirfavorite witch! Bring the family and enjoy games, slides, hayrides, and prizes. There will be raffles and a delicious Bake Sale!

This event is sponsored by the South Community Center Nursery School.

All proceeds benefit the Nardo Scholarship and the Nursery School Enrichment Fund.

Farmers Market is like a family

Vendor enjoys coming back year after year

By Sara Hollingshead
shollingshead@wickedlocal.com

"I love the sense of community that I get from being a part of the market."
Susan Cameron

When Susan Cameron joined the Cohasset Farmers Market as a vendor in 2004, she joined a family. Every Thursday, from the middle of June to the middle of October, vendors from across the South Shore gather in the Common with local goods and knowledge to share with customers, while creating a community.

After losing her sister, Sneaky, to Acute Myeloid Leukemia (AML) in 2004, Cameron was asked by her daughter, Maren, for help in fundraising for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Marathon in San Francisco, that she was running. Cameron saw it as the perfect opportunity to join the Farmers Market as a vendor. After reaching out to her friends, original members of the Farmers' Market, Cameron set up shop, selling her mustard and hot fudge, and Juice Plus+.

A unique combination of products, Cameron notes that both the mustard and hot fudge are secret recipes that she acquired over the years; the mustard was from her sister, Sneaky's husband's family that was never shared until Sneaky shared it with her, thus the name, 'Sneaky's Mustard': while the hot fudge recipe came from a restaurant in New Hampshire that is no longer in business. Cameron explains that she had a friend who worked at the restaurant, and for her wedding, Cameron was asked what she wanted, and replied "the hot fudge recipe."

Her third product, Juice Plus+ is a "whole food based nutritional product that provides nutrition from 17 different fruit, vegetable and grains in a convenient and inexpensive capsule or chewable form." Cameron explains that she is passionate about the Juice Plus+ product "because it's a great way to get healthy."

This past summer, Cameron's efforts at the Farmers' Market continued to benefit the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society as a portion of her profits will be donated to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society; in addition, Cameron joined her daughter, Maren in participating in Light Up the Night in Boston, a 2-mile walk in the Boston Common benefiting the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society on Oct. 13.

Every summer, Cameron looks forward to returning to the Market's family. "When you spend four hours a week with people, you naturally learn about their lives and friendships naturally occur. Every vendor is incredibly hard working and they have pride in what they do. They are also caring, open and sharing people."

"I love seeing the returning vendors and truly miss those who have moved on. There are customers who return for their fix of hot fudge and mustard every year. Since I am never in the same place (at the market) from year to year, it is fun when I see them looking for me and the relief on their faces when they see me."

In addition to selling her products, Cameron gets so much from the market; "Watching the people, seeing old friends and meeting new ones is a great part of the market for me. I love the sense of community that I get from being a part of the market."

Cameron, who grew up in Southern Illinois but moved to Cohasset after meeting her husband, hopes that the customers get more than just products from the market; "I hope the customers coming to the market have a great time and hopefully learn a little about what their neighbors are doing. The market is a great place to learn about health in different ways. If people take the time to talk to the different vendors, they can really learn a lot."

Cameron notes, that the local community makes the Farmers Market; "Without the community support, there would be no Farmers Market."

Seventh-grader sells popular homemade toy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

One popular stop at the farmer's market this summer and fall has been a 12-year-old girl's budding business.

Emma Humphrey, a seventh grader at Cohasset Middle School, has been selling her homemade "bounce-back balloon."

She demonstrated how her creation works: it's a balloon on a string that functions as both a bouncy ball and a yo-yo. The toy has been a hit with young kids who have been playing with them all over the common.

"I got the idea from somewhere else and changed it up and made it my own," said Emma of her toys.

Emma said the balls have been a big seller.

"I've done really well," she said.

The seventh grader has been raising money to attend Camp Bournedale in Plymouth, and to help pay for her family's sports activities, including lacrosse. Emma has two siblings, a brother and sister, who also participate in sports.

Emma said that she has showcased her wares at a couple of local fairs.

"This is the only regular market I do," she said of the Cohasset Farmers Market.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Piano Bash (with Strings Attached)

MARK GOODMAN

We pianists love company. That's why we invited the String Department of South Shore Conservatory to join us this year in our annual Piano Bash. A more appropriate title for this concert might be Friends with Benefits, because this is truly a situation where everyone makes out (not literally). The pairing of strings and piano lies at the heart of the chamber music repertoire. Together they can express the most intimate sentiments or evoke the scale of a full orchestra, and composers have poured some of their greatest inspirations into this combination. String Department Chairman Phil Rush and I are thrilled to have this opportunity to present a sampling of this wonderful music.

Phil and I met for the first time in 1998 at an idyllic summer music festival in Vermont called Yellow Barn. In those days neither of us was chair of anything, but we did share a mutual love of chamber music. It was here that we had the chance to develop and grow as chamber musicians – imagine spending four weeks in the country with nothing to do but play great music and put on concerts. Nowadays, in the midst of everyday realities, it is still an oasis to sit down together to play this music we love.

Our program features some of the best known and beloved pieces in the repertoire, as well as some unusual treats. Beethoven's chamber music may not be as well known as his symphonies or concertos, but it is equally great. From his middle period we hear the Kreutzer Sonata performed by MaeLynn Arnold, violin and HuiMin Wang, piano. The Kreutzer is known for its epic scale and virtuosic writing. Strangely, this piece was not originally dedicated to Kreutzer, a well known violinist of the day, but to violinist George Bridgewater, with whom Beethoven premiered it. Apparently, during post-premiere libations, Bridgewater insulted a woman Beethoven loved, and Beethoven removed the dedication. The funny thing is, Kreutzer didn't even like Beethoven's music. Beethoven's later period is represented by Sonata for cello and piano, a fiery introspective piece performed by Hingham's Adele Carter, and pianist John Kramer.

On the jazzier side of the program we have "Quatre Visages" by Milhaud played by I-Hang Lin and Phil, and the great Bill Evans tune, "Turn Off the Stars: with Eric Lane, piano, and Chris Rathbun on string bass.

I will be joined by new faculty member Jenna Potts on violin, and Adele Carter, Mendelssohn's Trio in D Minor. If you think of Mendelssohn as polite and refined, you will be surprised by this piece. It is full of fire and passion, and it's one of those pieces of which pianists say, "If I got paid by the note, I'd get a million bucks for this!"

We also have a rousing finale planned featuring pianist Eugene Kaminsky, but I don't want to give everything away. I hope you can join us to support your teachers. We can't wait to convey to you the love we feel for this music. Friends with benefits? Most certainly!

Piano Bash with Strings Attached on Sunday, Oct. 23, 4 p.m., One Conservatory Drive in Hingham, is a free concert, but donations are welcome.

Hingham resident Mark Goodman has taught at South Shore Conservatory for more than 30 years. He is currently Piano Department chairman.

CARDELLE

herself. Growing up around her grandfather's studio, Cardelle said that record producing is in her blood.

"I've always been interested in it," said Cardelle. "I write my own music and lyrics and everything."

Cassie's mother, Claire Cardelle, indicates that her daughter has been headed for stardom since childhood.

"She has somewhat grown up in the entertainment industry," said Claire. She shared that Cassie trained at the Boston Ballet School for 12 years and also studied piano at the South Shore Conservatory. Claire called Cassie a quiet child and said she spent a lot of time in her room; it turns out she was composing music.

"She wrote over 500 songs," Claire said.

Before moving to L.A., Cardelle took a year off school to write and record her "Suburban Diva" CD at a studio in Boston. Claire said that her daughter is now working on a second CD.

A self-described entertainer/entrepreneur, Cardelle is also working on a business venture with her father, local pharmacist David Cardelle, that she hopes will become a record label called CardRX Entertainment. For now, Cardelle is working to build her brand in Hollywood and hopes her "music career will take off."

"She's really spearheading that," said David of CardRX. "I'm involved in helping her do that, but it's her vision to start an entertainment company. It's a great experience for her to start from scratch and build a business from the ground up, and a way for her to distribute her own music."

In addition to helping his daughter start a company, David has helped Cassie get started on her life in L.A.

Cassie Cardelle, who graduated from Cohasset High in 2010, landed the show after meeting with a casting agent and interviewing for it. COURTESY PHOTO

At 19, Cardelle was one of the youngest contestants on this season's show.

"Her father set her up in an elaborate apartment and got her a sports car," said Claire, adding that, however, Cassie "is determined and headstrong in her own right.

"She's always been highly driven and very balanced," said Claire. "She's an only child and seems to have a good foundation."

With the tools of success at her fingertips, the career-minded Cardelle seems more focused on her music than on finding love and settling down. Her mother agreed.

"She's not looking for a relationship," she said. "She's doing it for the experience. It's opening doors for her now, of course, and launching her career."

"It's been a great experience for her," said David. "She met a lot of great girls, and she gets to have that insight on what reality TV is all about." David added that signing onto the show was "good timing" for Cassie's music career.

"The exposure and the opportunity has opened her eyes to country music," said David. "She went to a Keith Urban concert recently and fell in love with country music."

Falling in love on-air or no, the aspiring singer insists she's learned quite a bit from "Sweet Home Alabama."

"I've learned a lot about what people are willing to do for love," Cardelle said. "We're all there for a reason...everyone gets a different thrill out of love."

Cardelle said the show has allowed her to meet "lifelong friends."

"The girls on the show are awesome," she said. "Everyone has a different lifestyle."

Cardelle explained that it's been fun to see how those lifestyles clash with all 22 girls living under one roof during filming. Cardelle, who is an only child, summed the experience up in one word: "Crazy!"

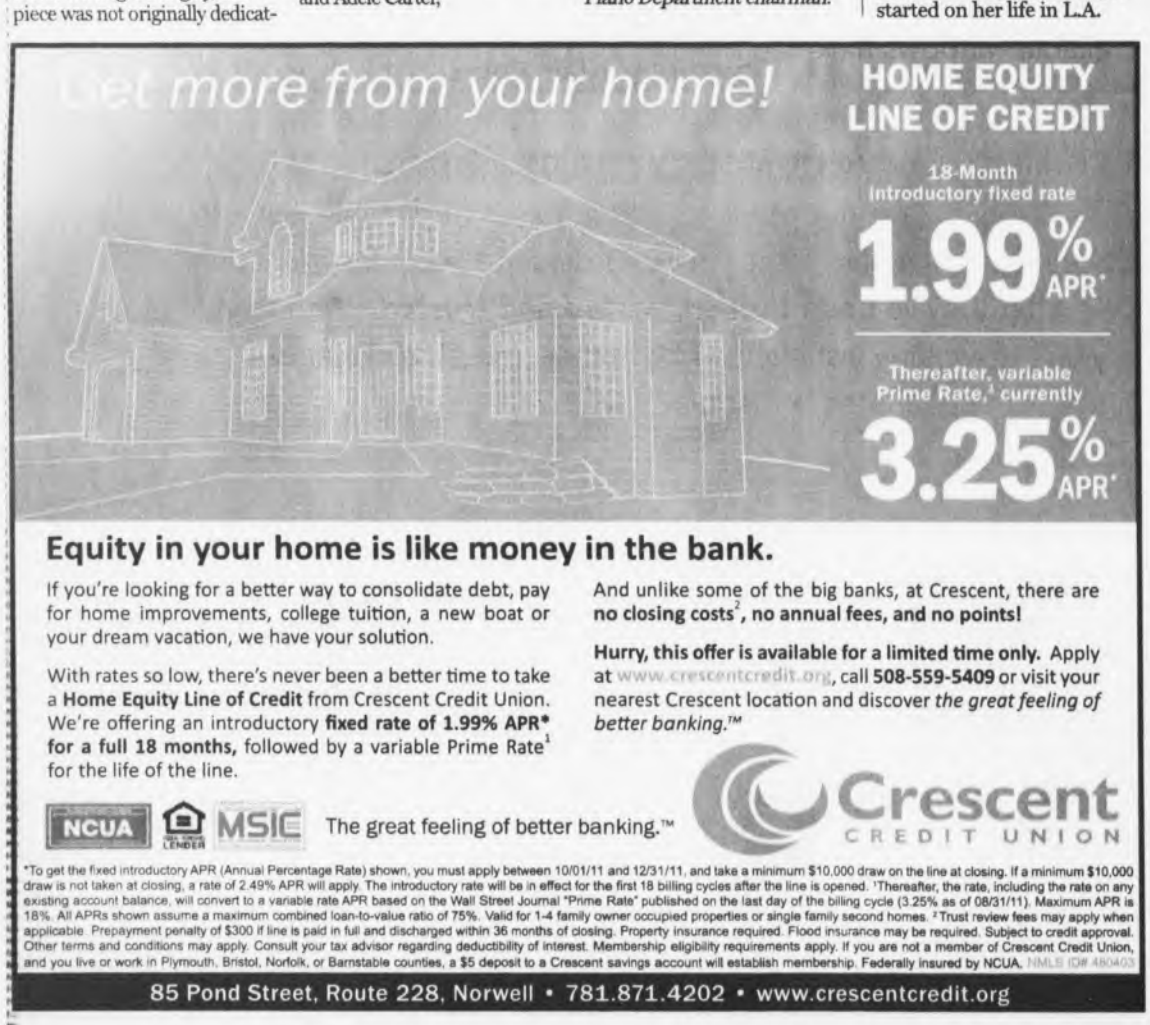
"I'll never be living in a house with 21 other girls again in my life — it's insane!" she said. "We're in this house together; stuff's bound to happen. We're all there for one guy... It's definitely going to be entertaining."

While Cardelle seeks to carve out a career in the entertainment industry, she said that Cohasset will always be "home sweet home" to her.

"I'm out here in the big city to do what I need to do," Cardelle said. "But I like visiting home. And when I go home to my family, I know I will always have a place there... Cohasset is a beautiful town.

"I do miss it, even though I'm out here [in L.A.]. There's nothing like growing up in a small town."

Her family makes it clear that they are proud of their daughter, no matter what.



"Cassie is a very independent, smart, bright girl," said David. "She knows how to handle herself.

"I'm very excited for her," her father added. "She's had a lot of opportunity in a short amount of time."

"This is all happening very fast," said Claire, "like I told her it would. I told her, 'when you leave here, your career is headed for a fast pace.

"I'm happy for her and I'm proud of her," Claire concluded. "I'm excited to see the launching of another South Shore star."

Sweet Home Alabama premieres Thursday, October 20 at 9 p.m. eastern on CMT.

OUR VIEW

Public opinion

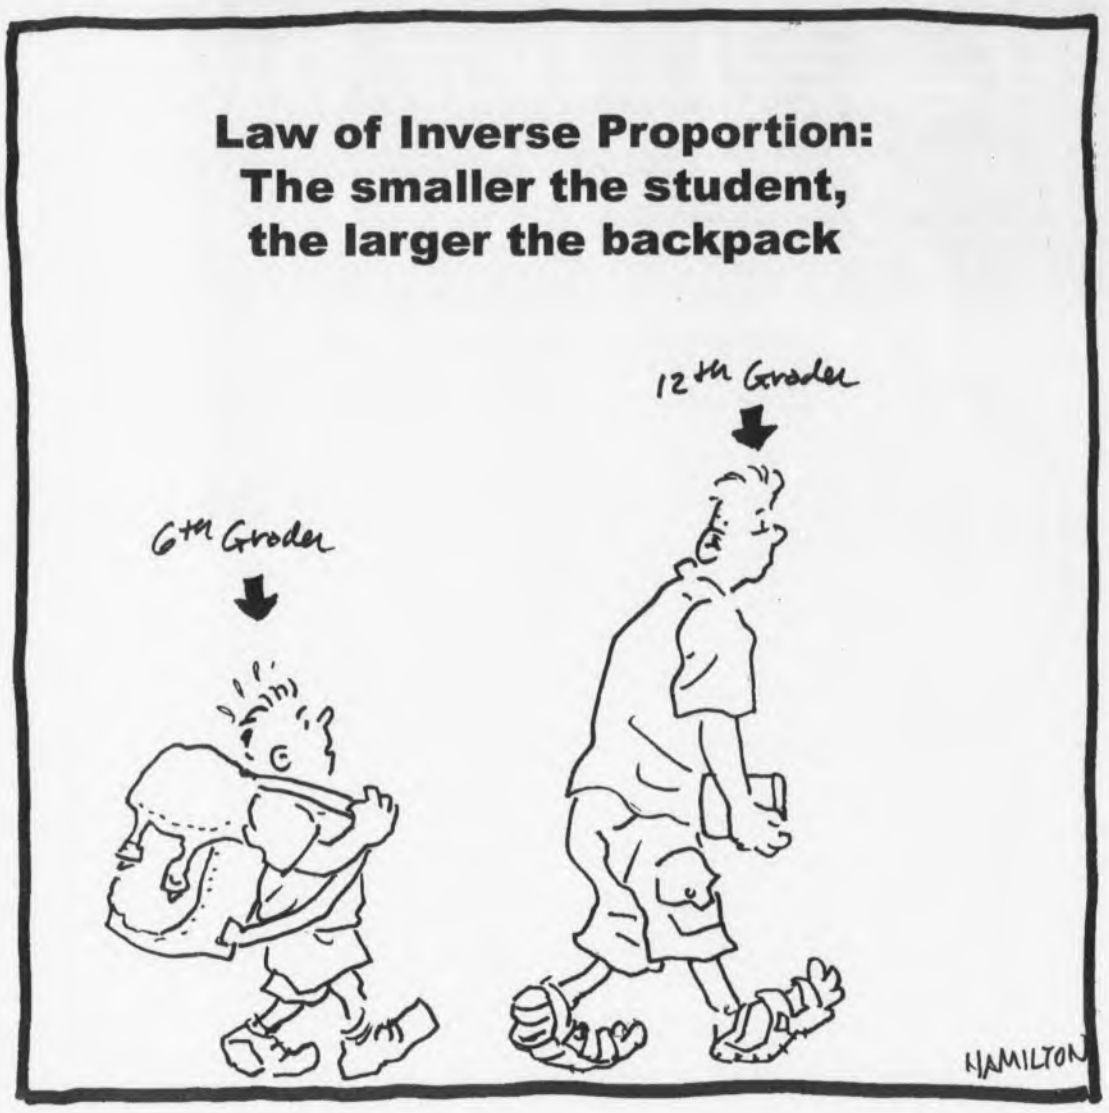
Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we are indeed fortunate to have a readership that is engaged and involved. Many of our readers open to the editorial and op-ed pages first each week to see what their fellow residents have to say about the issues of the day. They also turn to our editorial page to see Jim Hamilton's latest cartoon!

You will notice that some of the opinion is in the form of letters while others are in the form of commentaries. Columns – while they often reflect the opinion of the author – are regular submissions by a particular individual, organization or group. Examples of our regular columns include: Famous Birthdays, Making Tracks, Senior Scene, Willcutt Corner, Health Notes, Around Town and For the Record.

Whether a submission is a letter or commentary usually depends on length. Lengthy comments do not format well into the letter-to-the-editor format. Also, on occasion, if the letter is long enough and on a new subject that may not have been previously aired — the editor may choose to run that submission as a commentary. The editor strives to be fair in terms of placement — so both sides of an issue are presented in a way that gives both the same treatment. We do our best to be fair, however, space limitations ultimately dictate what we are able to do.

In terms of fact checking letters and commentaries – we do not. That may come as a shock to some readers but over the years we have not had a problem. Simply put, we do not have the staff or the time to fact check opinion submissions.

If something outrageous appears in a commentary or letter – or a personal attack – we will get back to the writer and ask them to change it. Please remember that letters and commentaries are opinions – the opinion of the person or persons who submit them. Not everyone agrees on what the facts may be.



Our open opinion policy that does not restrict submissions in terms of length or subject matter has served us well. We believe that our editorial and op-ed pages are indeed a reflection of Cohasset and a place where debate can flourish.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

GUEST COLUMN

Where newspapers thrive

JUDY MULLER

I wouldn't be so bold as to predict the future, not in a media landscape that is constantly shifting.

We've been hearing a lot of depressing news in recent years about the dire financial prospects for big daily newspapers.

But at the risk of sounding like I'm whistling past the graveyard, I'd like to point out that there are thousands of newspapers that are not just surviving but thriving. Some 8,000 weekly papers still hit the front porches and mailboxes in small towns across America every week and, for some reason, they've been left out of the conversation. So a couple of years ago, I decided to head back to my roots, both geographic and professional (my first job was at a weekly), to see how those community papers were faring. And what I found was both surprising and inspiring.

At a time when mainstream news media are hemorrhaging and doomsayers are predicting the death of journalism (at least as we've known it), take heart: The free press is alive and well in small towns across America, thanks to the editors of thousands of weeklies who, for very little money and a fair amount of aggravation, keep on telling it like it is. Sometimes they tell it gently, in code only the locals understand. After all, they have to live there, too. But they also tell it with courage, standing up to powerful bullies — from coal company thugs in Kentucky to corrupt politicians in the Texas Panhandle.

"If we discover a political official misusing taxpayer funds," an editor in Dove Creek, Colo., told me, "we wouldn't hesitate to nail him to a stump."

You might be thinking that attitude would be fundamental for anyone who claims to be a journalist. The Los Angeles Times certainly nailed those officials in Bell to the proverbial stump in its award-winning expose of municipal corruption. But just imagine how much more difficult that job would have been if those Times reporters lived next door to the officials they were writing about — or, as sometimes happens in a small town, if they had been related to one of them. Practicing journalism with gusto comes with a price tag in a small community — from being shunned in the checkout line at the grocery store to losing a major advertiser.

Of course, most of these newspapers are not uncovering major scandals on a regular basis. That's not what keeps them selling at such a good clip; it's the steady stream of news that readers can only get from that publication — the births, deaths, crimes, sports and local shenanigans that only matter to the 5,000 or so souls in their circulation area. It's more than a little ironic that small-town papers have been thriving by practicing what the mainstream media are now preaching. "Hyperlocalism," "citizen journalism," "advocacy journalism" — these are some of the latest buzzwords of the profession. But the concepts, without the fancy names, have been around for ages in small-town newspapers.

The "holy trinity" of weekly papers consists of high school sports (where even losing teams benefit from positive spin), obituaries (where there's no need to speak ill of the dead because everyone in town already knows if the deceased was a jerk) and the police blotter. The latter can be addictive, even to outsiders. These items, often lifted intact from the dispassionate log of the sheriff's dispatcher, are the haikus of Main Street: "Caller states that there is a 9-year-old boy out mowing the lawn next door and feels that is endangering the child in doing so when the mother is perfectly capable of doing it herself." Or: "Man calls to report wife went missing 3 months ago."

The business models of these small-town papers are just as intriguing as the local news. In 2010, the National Newspaper Assn. provided some heartening survey statistics: More than three-quarters of respondents said they read most or all of a local newspaper every week. And a full 94 percent said they paid for their papers.

And what of the Internet threat? Many of these small-town editors have learned a lesson from watching their big-city counterparts: Don't give it away. Many weeklies, from the Canadian Record in the Texas Panhandle to the Concrete Herald in Washington's Cascade Mountains, are charging for their Web content, and, because readers can't get that news anywhere else, they're willing to pay.

Meanwhile, some big-city journalists are finding a new life at smaller papers. After Denver's Rocky Mountain News folded, the paper's Washington correspondent, M.E. Sprengelmeyer, decided to buy a paper in the small town of Santa Rosa, N.M. He brought along a photographer and a political cartoonist as well. The result — a paper that is already winning awards and an editor who is exhausted but happy to be making a living in a beautiful place. "In Santa Rosa," he says, "the future of print is print."

I wouldn't be so bold as to predict the future, not in a media landscape that is constantly shifting. But when we engage in these discussions about how to "monetize" journalism, it's refreshing to remember a different kind of bottom line, one that lives in the hearts of weekly newspaper editors and reporters who keep churning out news for the corniest of reasons — because their readers depend on it.

MAKING TRACKS

Introduction to the Operations Department

TOM GRUBER

We have spoken in this paper about the new Operations Department. This week we'd like to give you a bit more info about what Operations Department is and its mission. The Operations Department provides the overall management and coordination for the departments that service the Town and its infrastructure. It includes the DPW and its four operating units of Highway, Tree and Parks, Transfer Station and Cemeteries. The Facilities Department whose charge it is to maintain all of the Town buildings including the schools is also included under the Operations umbrella. As Chief Procurement Officer for the Town, the Town Manager has the approval authority for all purchases, including both Water and Sewer Departments. Plus, Town Meeting has given the Town Manager joint operating responsibility for Water and Sewer Departments through its past actions. Consequently, these joint management support responsibilities have been included under the Operations umbrella by the Town Manager. So, as you can see, Operations is not a trivial responsibility.

The goals established by the Operations Department for this year are to "Manage the Operations of Cohasset and Personnel and Physical Assets in a Team oriented, Efficient and Professional Manner."

This is the first time that all of these diverse support operations have been combined under one umbrella with a common goal.

Mark Brennan, who started working for the Town in January of 2005 as a part of the Greenbush Team, has been tapped by the Town Manager to head up the Operations Department. (We must admit that the author of this article also works with Mark and probably knows him nearly as well as anyone at Town Hall.)

As you may remember, the Greenbush Team was initially set up to handle all of the interactions between the Town and the then new Greenbush Commuter Rail Project.

Shortly after the Greenbush Construction started, the Greenbush Team was asked by the Town Manager to see if they could get the stalled Revitalization Project moving again. When the Revitalization was completed, the Greenbush Guys were asked to do a variety of other projects, including the Forest Avenue restoration, Little Harbor Water, Sewer and Drainage Project paving, various sidewalk projects, and so on.

Mark earned three degrees from Northeastern University, including engineering and an MBA, and retired from a 35-year career with Verizon. He started with Verizon, as so many of their employees did, climbing poles. Early in his career, he joined the management ranks, moving up in responsibility and position. One of the most interesting positions he held was as the Managing Director of a large-scale project with a Verizon subsidiary in England where he was responsible for the installation of 3,000 miles of a new underground fiber communications network providing combined phone, TV and Internet services. But, this was in the 1990's when FIOS was only a gleam in Verizon's eye here in the US. We are very fortunate to have this quality of resident engineering and management talent to draw upon here in Cohasset.

Goodnight Irene —The Tropical Storm Irene is now a dim memory for most of us, but not for the emergency management forces at the local, state and national level. Due to the damage and extra costs borne by the cities and towns in the Commonwealth, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency with the help of the Federal Emergency Management Agency met with Glenn Pratt, the Town's Emergency Management Director to review our accounting for the extra costs that Cohasset experienced in our response to the storm. So far, Norfolk County is the only county in the Commonwealth that has not been qualified for Federal aid to cover a portion of the storm related costs. Hopefully, when the accounting is complete, Norfolk County will qualify.

The meeting was very informational and both FEMA and MEMA were very helpful in providing guidance to the Town to make sure that we had accounted for the real costs associated with the storm duty. For example, FEMA has guidelines for the use and cost of operating vehicles and power equipment during the storm. Thus, we can potentially receive funds to help with the costs of DPW trucks and front loader, fire trucks, police vehicles and emergency generators as well as for overtime costs. For what it's worth, Cohasset's storm related costs through the FEMA lens is about $130,000. This is about $30,000 greater than previously reported. That's a bunch of dough in anyone's book.

What's up with Meetinghouse Pond? You may have noticed that a snow fence has been erected around the Meeting House Pond recently. So, what's the story? First, let us say that this project is still under the control of the contractor and the design engineer. The pond project has not been turned over to the Town as of this date.

To summarize, the pond held a low level of water all winter, but when filled this spring it developed a number of small holes in the bottom at the interior edge of the footers that support the walls. These holes caused the water to seep into the substrate soils. The engineer and contractor then added a 10-foot wide membrane at the edge of the pond under the clay bottom to seal the area where the holes developed. However, when the bottom of the pond was reinstated, there was still an apparent leak. But, no specific area has been identified as the source of the leakage. The fence has been added for safety's sake while the engineer and contractor assess the situation and make recommendations for a solution. This is why Meetinghouse Pond has not been formally accepted by the Town as a completed project.

CALLING ALL VETERANS

Still proud to wear the uniform

RONALD WHEATLEY

Few who suffered the Nazi occupation of their homes would live to serve in the United States Army in another war and another continent a decade later. Of that number fewer would go on to get two masters degrees and a doctorate, publish three books on comparative art and literature in Spanish, author 11 articles for academic journals on comparative art, including an article in Italian on Boston art and architecture, receive a Harvard Chair for 30 years of teaching, and publish a successful science fiction novel.

"The Germans marched in soon after Italy signed 'the Pact of Steel' with Hitler in Sept. 22, 1939. They occupied my town. They occupied my home; and they set up the post office on the first floor. They stayed there until the end of the war when the British came to liberate the town," Ubaldo ("Ubi") Di Benedetto of Cohasset recalled.

The jackbooted invasion halted Di Benedetto's academic studies in his first year of high school.

"First we were traumatized because we did not know what happened to my father. My father was with the Royalist Army." The Royalist put up a fight with the Germans, but they were no match for the Wehrmacht and the survivors ended up in concentration camps. "I did not see my father until a year after the war."

Born in the town of L'Aquila, Italy, located at the bottom of the highest peak of the Apennine about a 110 miles northeast of Rome, Di Benedetto spent his early years there completing primary school and part of his middle school.

"After the war, I was lucky to get a visa as an exchange student and I came to America. I was interested in foreign relations." At the age of 21, Di Benedetto arrived in Boston, without much money and not having completed high school.

"First I went to Boston Latin High because I needed to finish high school and learn more English." Getting a student visa to continue his studies he enrolled at Northeastern University. "I studied English, American History, American Art, anything that had to do with America because I wanted to learn everything about America — what they ate."

While at Northeastern he worked as a bellhop at the Somerset Hotel in Back Bay. "I lived at the YMCA for four years from 1948 to 1952. It was good. The YMCA was on top of the School. I could hear the bells so I knew when to get up for class. I lived on tips from my work at the Somerset and the hotel gave me a good meal before I would start working, plus a small salary."

Di Benedetto graduated from Northeastern University with a degree in liberal arts. He married Delia Nesto, then a recent graduate from Emanuel College, and future long-time teacher at Cohasset Public Schools. "We had met at one of these parties that they held for foreign students, and she spoke Italian because she was studying it. We decided to marry. We married in August of 1952. I wanted to remain in America and the only way to do it was to volunteer for the Army." This was during the Korean War.

"In May 1953, I went to Fort Dix for Basic Training. After basic I was assigned to ballistic meteorology, the science that collects information on missiles and shells and studies the effects of weather on their trajectories. I wanted to be an interpreter, but when I went to classification and assignment they said 'no you are going to weather school.' But I said I don't know anything about weather. 'You will,' they said. 'Now we will have a weather man and a linguist at the same time.' I went to Ft. Bliss, Oklahoma to study for 10 months."

Di Benedetto was assigned to the 82nd anti-aircraft brigade and to a mobile station. "Just south of Seoul, we manned a big weather station on the airbase and observed weather in the aircraft that we flew. We conducted studies in case of attack from the Russians, Chinese or North Koreans; we were testing if the ordinance will fire properly in all kinds of weather. It was during a combat practice exercise there, that my fire team partner fired a bazooka prematurely. Due to the blast I lost the hearing in my left ear. Later I lost two toes to frost bite. I was convalescing for about a month in a field hospital and from there reassigned to a weather station on Stanton Island." He still takes pride in the fact that he was named best soldier of the month for March 1955. After two years of active duty he was discharged honorably.

His scholarship and writing in comparative art led him to a career in teaching beginning at Holbrook High School, followed by Hull High School. Using the GI Bill benefits he earned two masters degrees from Middlebury College, and a doctorate from the University of Madrid through Middlebury College. His first job as a professor was at Newton College of the Sacred Heart and from there to the Harvard Extension School with classes at the day school as well. At a special banquet at Harvard, Di Benedetto was awarded a chair for 29 years of teaching.

"A friend of mine suggested that I might be a good fiction writer. In 1980 we went to Centerville for a Writers conference. After a week there one of the instructors, Robert Taylor, who wrote book reviews for the Boston Globe, told me that if I were serious about writing books of fiction, that I would have a good opportunity to publish. So I started writing 'Polar Day 9.' I wanted to use my experience as a ballistic meteorologist in creating a work science fiction." When "Polar Day 9" was completed, his publisher surprised him with, "your name is too complicated – we will find you a new name." So Ubaldo ("Ubi") Di Benedetto became Kyle Donnor.

"In the army we used to go to seminars where we were exposed to ideas of warfare, and we studied how the weather could be changed. This has now become a theme for my science fiction," said Di Benedetto who is at work on his second novel and a book on the Renaissance Painter Giotto.

Ever appreciative that his military service was his path to US citizenship, Di Benedetto declared, "Nothing makes me more proud than to march with the veterans in the Memorial Day parade in Cohasset. I still wear the uniform that I wore in the army."

FOR THE RECORD

Taking a look at the big picture

GREGORY MATHIS

As the saying goes, a picture is worth 1,000 words.

I'll spare you and won't use that many words to describe our policy on purchasing pictures, but we do get many requests for photographs, and an explanation may answer some questions and clear up some confusion.

We take pride in the photographs produced in our newspapers as well as on our Wicked Local websites. Part of our philosophy has always been to provide as many photos from community events as possible, as well as high school sports, school events and even news photographs.

Going back a few years, in the day of film and darkrooms and before digital photography, many people were content to cut the photograph and the caption out of the newspaper. It may have ended up on the refrigerator for a few weeks and then find itself in a scrapbook or tossed in a box to be discovered years later.

As the industry's financial situation started to decline in the mid-1990s, publishers realized they might be able to make a few extra bucks by selling photographs. It was a lengthy and cumbersome process to get photos to customers, as it often involved photographers having to go back into the darkroom to make prints or bring the negatives to a photo shop. It sometimes took months for a reader to get a copy of the photo.

Purchasing photographs today is a lot quicker and much easier thanks to our website and digital photography. It also creates some challenges because those digital images can theoretically be easily shared.

Our photos are for sale, but the idea is those photos are for personal use. The intention is the picture ends up in a frame and placed on a desk at work or hung on the wall for family and friends to see.

The photographs for which we have the copyright are not intended to be purchased and used in advertisements or for commercial purposes, on political propaganda or on websites for other companies. And it is our general policy not to provide free copies of our photographs to be used for those and other purposes, just like we don't give away free copies of our paid newspapers. These are both valuable sources of revenue for our business.

With that said, it's easy to purchase photos. Each photo that's eligible for purchase online has the phrase "Purchase this photo" to the right under the photo. When you click on that, it will take you to an online order form. You'll see a number of options and price ranges for various size photographs, from four by six inches to 11 by 14 inches. Options also include having the photo put on a coffee mug, mouse pad or a T-shirt. We even have a photo puzzle with box (252 pieces) available for $45.

If you're intimidated by the online order form and would just like to speak to someone about a photograph you saw in the newspaper, you can call our photo reprint hotline at 866-746-8603 and a customer service representative can help you through the process.

While a picture might be worth 1,000 words, and maybe cost a few bucks, it can also be priceless when it captures that special moment for someone.

OUR VIEW

Public opinion

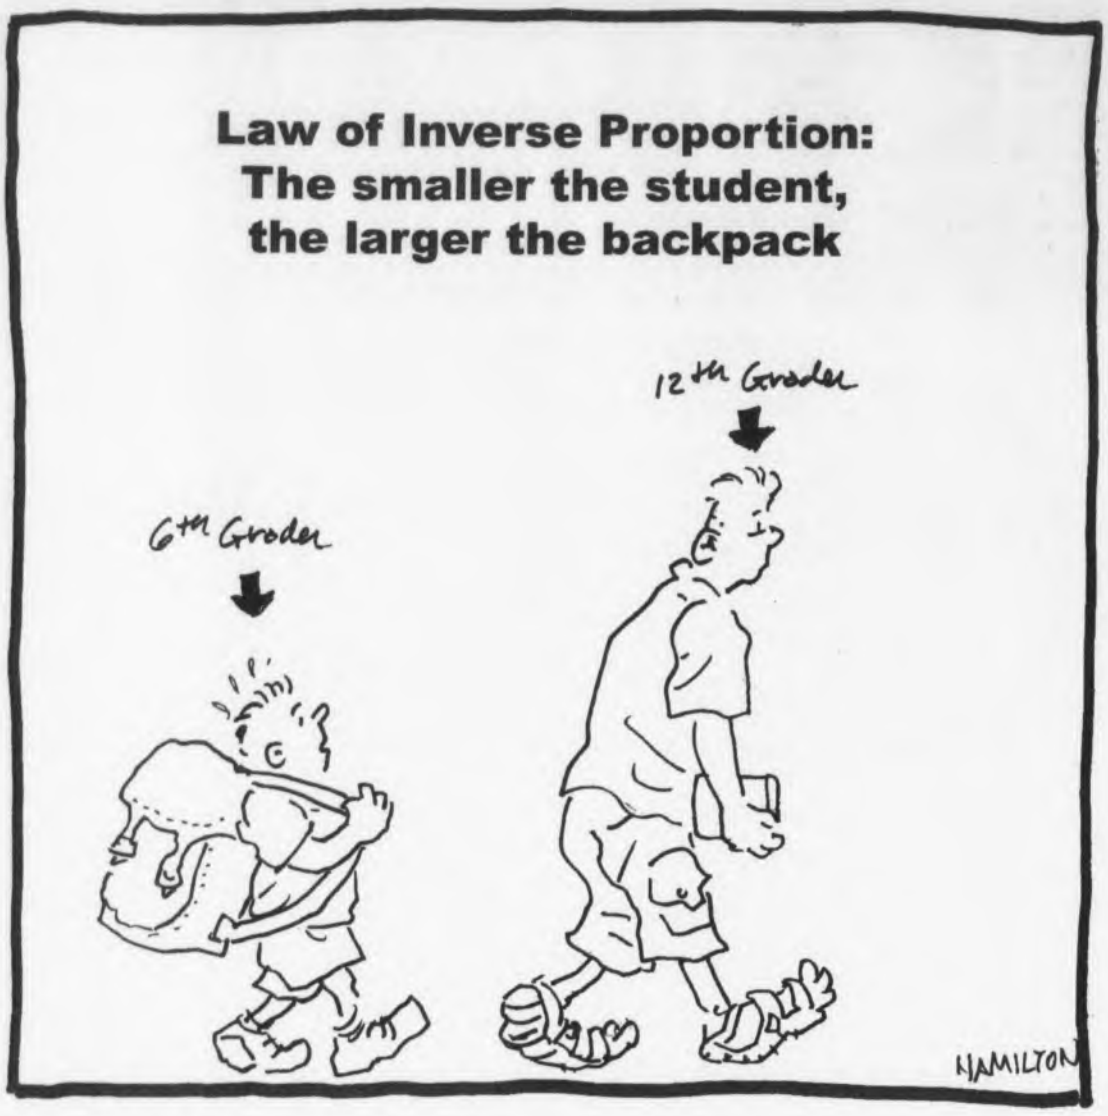
Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we are indeed fortunate to have a readership that is engaged and involved. Many of our readers open to the editorial and op-ed pages first each week to see what their fellow residents have to say about the issues of the day. They also turn to our editorial page to see Jim Hamilton's latest cartoon!

You will notice that some of the opinion is in the form of letters while others are in the form of commentaries. Columns – while they often reflect the opinion of the author – are regular submissions by a particular individual, organization or group. Examples of our regular columns include: Famous Birthdays, Making Tracks, Senior Scene, Willcutt Corner, Health Notes, Around Town and For the Record.

Whether a submission is a letter or commentary usually depends on length. Lengthy comments do not format well into the letter-to-the-editor format. Also, on occasion, if the letter is long enough and on a new subject that may not have been previously aired — the editor may choose to run that submission as a commentary. The editor strives to be fair in terms of placement — so both sides of an issue are presented in a way that gives both the same treatment. We do our best to be fair, however, space limitations ultimately dictate what we are able to do.

In terms of fact checking letters and commentaries – we do not. That may come as a shock to some readers but over the years we have not had a problem. Simply put, we do not have the staff or the time to fact check opinion submissions.

If something outrageous appears in a commentary or letter – or a personal attack – we will get back to the writer and ask them to change it. Please remember that letters and commentaries are opinions – the opinion of the person or persons who submit them. Not everyone agrees on what the facts may be.



Our open opinion policy that does not restrict submissions in terms of length or subject matter has served us well. We believe that our editorial and op-ed pages are indeed a reflection of Cohasset and a place where debate can flourish.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

GUEST COLUMN

Where newspapers thrive

JUDY MULLER

I wouldn't be so bold as to predict the future, not in a media landscape that is constantly shifting.

We've been hearing a lot of depressing news in recent years about the dire financial prospects for big daily newspapers.

But at the risk of sounding like I'm whistling past the graveyard, I'd like to point out that there are thousands of newspapers that are not just surviving but thriving. Some 8,000 weekly papers still hit the front porches and mailboxes in small towns across America every week and, for some reason, they've been left out of the conversation. So a couple of years ago, I decided to head back to my roots, both geographic and professional (my first job was at a weekly), to see how those community papers were faring. And what I found was both surprising and inspiring.

At a time when mainstream news media are hemorrhaging and doomsayers are predicting the death of journalism (at least as we've known it), take heart: The free press is alive and well in small towns across America, thanks to the editors of thousands of weeklies who, for very little money and a fair amount of aggravation, keep on telling it like it is. Sometimes they tell it gently, in code only the locals understand. After all, they have to live there, too. But they also tell it with courage, standing up to powerful bullies — from coal company thugs in Kentucky to corrupt politicians in the Texas Panhandle.

"If we discover a political official misusing taxpayer funds," an editor in Dove Creek, Colo., told me, "we wouldn't hesitate to nail him to a stump."

You might be thinking that attitude would be fundamental for anyone who claims to be a journalist. The Los Angeles Times certainly nailed those officials in Bell to the proverbial stump in its award-winning expose of municipal corruption. But just imagine how much more difficult that job would have been if those Times reporters lived next door to the officials they were writing about — or, as sometimes happens in a small town, if they had been related to one of them. Practicing journalism with gusto comes with a price tag in a small community — from being shunned in the checkout line at the grocery store to losing a major advertiser.

Of course, most of these newspapers are not uncovering major scandals on a regular basis. That's not what keeps them selling at such a good clip; it's the steady stream of news that readers can only get from that publication — the births, deaths, crimes, sports and local shenanigans that only matter to the 5,000 or so souls in their circulation area. It's more than a little ironic that small-town papers have been thriving by practicing what the mainstream media are now preaching. The latter can be addictive, even to outsiders. These items, often lifted intact from the dispassionate log of the sheriff's dispatcher, are the haikus of Main Street: "Caller states that there is a 9-year-old boy out mowing the lawn next door and feels that is endangering the child in doing so when the mother is perfectly capable of doing it herself." Or: "Man calls to report wife went missing 3 months ago."

The business models of these small-town papers are just as intriguing as the local news. In 2010, the National Newspaper Assn. provided some heartening survey statistics: More than three-quarters of respondents said they read most or all of a local newspaper every week. And a full 94 percent said they paid for their papers.

MAKING TRACKS

Introduction to the Operations Department

TOM GRUBER

We have spoken in this paper about the new Operations Department. This week we'd like to give you a bit more info about what Operations Department is and its mission. The Operations Department provides the overall management and coordination for the departments that service the Town and its infrastructure. It includes the DPW and its four operating units of Highway, Tree and Parks, Transfer Station and Cemeteries. The Facilities Department whose charge it is to maintain all of the Town buildings including the schools is also included under the Operations umbrella. As Chief Procurement Officer for the Town, the Town Manager has the approval authority for all purchases, including both Water and Sewer Departments. Plus, Town Meeting has given the Town Manager joint operating responsibility for Water and Sewer Departments through its past actions. Consequently, these joint management support responsibilities have been included under the Operations umbrella by the Town Manager. So, as you can see, Operations is not a trivial responsibility.

The goals established by the Operations Department for this year are to "Manage the Operations of Cohasset and its Personnel and Physical Assets in a Team oriented, Efficient and Professional Manner." This is the first time that all of these diverse support operations have been combined under one umbrella with a common goal.

Mark Brennan, who started working for the Town in January of 2005 as a part of the Greenbush Team, has been tapped by the Town Manager to head up the Operations Department. (We must admit that the author of this article also works with Mark and probably knows him nearly as well as anyone at Town Hall.)

As you may remember, the Greenbush Team was initially set up to handle all of the interactions between the Town and the then new Greenbush Commuter Rail Project.

Shortly after the Greenbush Construction started, the Greenbush Team was asked by the Town Manager to see if they could get the stalled Revitalization Project moving again. When the Revitalization was completed, the Greenbush Guys were asked to do a variety of other projects, including the Forest Avenue restoration, Little Harbor Water, Sewer and Drainage Project paving, various sidewalk projects, and so on.

Mark earned three degrees from Northeastern University, including engineering and an MBA, and retired from a 35-year career with Verizon. He started with Verizon, as so many of their employees did, climbing poles. Early in his career, he joined the management ranks, moving up in responsibility and position. One of the most interesting positions he held was as the Managing Director of a large-scale project with a Verizon subsidiary in England where he was responsible for the installation of 3,000 miles of a new underground fiber communications network providing combined phone, TV and Internet services. But, this was in the 1990's when FIOS was only a gleam in Verizon's eye here in the US. We are very fortunate to have this quality of resident engineering and management talent to draw upon here in Cohasset.

Goodnight Irene —The Tropical Storm Irene is now a dim memory for most of us, but not for the emergency management forces at the local, state and national level. Due to the damage and extra costs borne by the cities and towns in the Commonwealth, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency with the help of the Federal Emergency Management Agency met with Glenn Pratt, the Town's Emergency Management Director to review our accounting for the extra costs that Cohasset experienced in our response to the storm. So far, Norfolk County is the only county in the Commonwealth that has not been qualified for Federal aid to cover a portion of the storm related costs. Hopefully, when the accounting is complete, Norfolk County will qualify.

The meeting was very informational and both FEMA and MEMA were very helpful in providing guidance to the Town to make sure that we had accounted for the real costs associated with the storm duty. For example, FEMA has guidelines for the use and cost of operating vehicles and power equipment during the storm. Thus, we can potentially receive funds to help with the costs of DPW trucks and front loader, fire trucks, police vehicles and emergency generators as well as for overtime costs. For what it's worth, Cohasset's storm related costs through the FEMA lens is about $130,000. This is about $30,000 greater than previously reported. That's a bunch of dough in anyone's book.

What's up with Meetinghouse Pond? You may have noticed that a snow fence has been erected around the Meeting House Pond recently. So, what's the story? First, let us say that this project is still under the control of the contractor and the design engineer. The pond project has not been turned over to the Town as of this date.

To summarize, the pond held a low level of water all winter, but when filled this spring it developed a number of small holes in the bottom at the interior edge of the footers that support the walls. These holes caused the water to seep into the substrate soils. The engineer and contractor then added a 10-foot wide membrane at the edge of the pond under the clay bottom to seal the area where the holes developed. However, when the bottom of the pond was reinstated, there was still an apparent leak. But, no specific area has been identified as the source of the leakage. The fence has been added for safety's sake while the engineer and contractor assess the situation and make recommendations for a solution. This is why Meetinghouse Pond has not been formally accepted by the Town as a completed project.

CALLING ALL VETERANS

Still proud to wear the uniform

RONALD WHEATLEY

Few who suffered the Nazi occupation of their homes would live to serve in the United States Army in another war and another continent a decade later. Of that number fewer would go on to get two masters degrees and a doctorate, publish three books on comparative art and literature in Spanish, author 11 articles for academic journals on comparative art, including an article in Italian on Boston art and architecture, receive a Harvard Chair for 30 years of teaching, and publish a successful science fiction novel.

"The Germans marched in soon after Italy signed 'the Pact of Steel' with Hitler in Sept. 22, 1939. They occupied my town. They occupied my home; and they set up the post office on the first floor. They stayed there until the end of the war when the British came to liberate the town," Ubaldo ("Ubi") Di Benedetto of Cohasset recalled.

The jackbooted invasion halted Di Benedetto's academic studies in his first year of high school.

"First we were traumatized because we did not know what happened to my father. My father was with the Royalist Army." The Royalist put up a fight with the Germans, but they were no match for the Wehrmacht and the survivors ended up in concentration camps. "I did not see my father until a year after the war."

Born in the town of L'Aquila, Italy, located at the bottom of the highest peak of the Apennine about a 110 miles northeast of Rome, Di Benedetto spent his early years there completing primary school and part of his middle school.

"After the war, I was lucky to get a visa as an exchange student and I came to America. I was interested in foreign relations." At the age of 21, Di Benedetto arrived in Boston, without much money and not having completed high school.

"First I went to Boston Latin High because I needed to finish high school and learn more English." Getting a student visa to continue his studies he enrolled at Northeastern University. "I studied English, American History, American Art, anything that had to do with America because I wanted to learn everything about America — what they ate."

While at Northeastern he worked as a bellhop at the Somerset Hotel in Back Bay. "I lived at the YMCA for four years from 1948 to 1952. It was good. The YMCA was on top of the School. I could hear the bells so I knew when to get up for class. I lived on tips from my work at the Somerset and the hotel gave me a good meal before I would start working, plus a small salary."

Di Benedetto graduated from Northeastern University with a degree in liberal arts. He married Delia Nesto, then a recent graduate from Emanuel College, and future long-time teacher at Cohasset Public Schools. "We had met at one of these parties that they held for foreign students, and she spoke Italian because she was studying it. We decided to marry. We married in August of 1952. I wanted to remain in America and the only way to do it was to volunteer for the Army." This was during the Korean War.

"In May 1953, I went to Fort Dix for Basic Training. After basic I was assigned to ballistic meteorology, the science that collects information on missiles and shells and studies the effects of weather on their trajectories. I wanted to be an interpreter, but when I went to classification and assignment they said 'no you are going to weather school.' But I said I don't know anything about weather. 'You will,' they said. 'Now we will have a weather man and a linguist at the same time.' I went to Ft. Bliss, Oklahoma to study for 10 months."

Di Benedetto was assigned to the 82nd anti-aircraft brigade and to a mobile station. "Just south of Seoul, we manned a big weather station on the airbase and observed weather in the aircraft that we flew. We conducted studies in case of attack from the Russians, Chinese or North Koreans; we were testing if the ordinance will fire properly in all kinds of weather. It was during a combat practice exercise there, that my fire team partner fired a bazooka prematurely. Due to the blast I lost the hearing in my left ear. Later I lost two toes to frost bite. I was convalescing for about a month in a field hospital and from there reassigned to a weather station on Stanton Island." He still takes pride in the fact that he was named best soldier of the month for March 1955. After two years of active duty he was discharged honorably.

His scholarship and writing in comparative art led him to a career in teaching beginning at Holbrook High School, followed by Hull High School. Using the GI Bill benefits he earned two masters degrees from Middlebury College, and a doctorate from the University of Madrid through Middlebury College. His first job as a professor was at Newton College of the Sacred Heart and from there to the Harvard Extension School with classes at the day school as well. At a special banquet at Harvard, Di Benedetto was awarded a chair for 29 years of teaching.

"A friend of mine suggested that I might be a good fiction writer. In 1980 we went to Centerville for a Writers conference. After a week there one of the instructors, Robert Taylor, who wrote book reviews for the Boston Globe, told me that if I were serious about writing books of fiction, that I would have a good opportunity to publish. So I started writing 'Polar Day 9.' I wanted to use my experience as a ballistic meteorologist in creating a work science fiction." When "Polar Day 9" was completed, his publisher surprised him with, "your name is too complicated – we will find you a new name." So Ubaldo ("Ubi") Di Benedetto became Kyle Donnor.

"In the army we used to go to seminars where we were exposed to ideas of warfare, and we studied how the weather could be changed. This has now become a theme for my science fiction," said Di Benedetto who is at work on his second novel and a book on the Renaissance Painter Giotto.

Ever appreciative that his military service was his path to US citizenship, Di Benedetto declared, "Nothing makes me more proud than to march with the veterans in the Memorial Day parade in Cohasset. I still wear the uniform that I wore in the army."

FOR THE RECORD

Taking a look at the big picture

GREGORY MATHIS

As the saying goes, a picture is worth 1,000 words.

I'll spare you and won't use that many words to describe our policy on purchasing pictures, but we do get many requests for photographs, and an explanation may answer some questions and clear up some confusion.

We take pride in the photographs produced in our newspapers as well as on our Wicked Local websites. Part of our philosophy has always been to provide as many photos from community events as possible, as well as high school sports, school events and even news photographs.

Going back a few years, in the day of film and darkrooms and before digital photography, many people were content to cut the photograph and the caption out of the newspaper. It may have ended up on the refrigerator for a few weeks and then find itself in a scrapbook or tossed in a box to be discovered years later.

As the industry's financial situation started to decline in the mid-1990s, publishers realized they might be able to make a few extra bucks by selling photographs. It was a lengthy and cumbersome process to get photos to customers, as it often involved photographers having to go back into the darkroom to make prints or bring the negatives to a photo shop. It sometimes took months for a reader to get a copy of the photo.

Purchasing photographs today is a lot quicker and much easier thanks to our website and digital photography. It also creates some challenges because those digital images can theoretically be easily shared.

Our photos are for sale, but the idea is those photos are for personal use. The intention is the picture ends up in a frame and placed on a desk at work or hung on the wall for family and friends to see.

The photographs for which we have the copyright are not intended to be purchased and used in advertisements or for commercial purposes, on political propaganda or on websites for other companies. And it is our general policy not to provide free copies of our photographs to be used for those and other purposes, just like we don't give away free copies of our paid newspapers. These are both valuable sources of revenue for our business.

With that said, it's easy to purchase photos. Each photo that's eligible for purchase online has the phrase "Purchase this photo" to the right under the photo. When you click on that, it will take you to an online order form. You'll see a number of options and price ranges for various size photographs, from four by six inches to 11 by 14 inches. Options also include having the photo put on a coffee mug, mouse pad or a T-shirt. We even have a photo puzzle with box (252 pieces) available for $45.

If you're intimidated by the online order form and would just like to speak to someone about a photograph you saw in the newspaper, you can call our photo reprint hotline at 866-746-8603 and a customer service representative can help you through the process.

While a picture might be worth 1,000 words, and maybe cost a few bucks, it can also be priceless when it captures that special moment for someone.

Town accountant resigns

John Stanbrook to return to Mansfield

"He's a great professional, and he has contributed a lot to the town."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Team Cohasset is losing its financial quarterback.

Town accountant and finance director John Stanbrook resigned from his post in Cohasset on October 5 after nine months on the job. He will return to his previous position as town accountant in Mansfield on Oct. 31; his last day in Cohasset is Oct. 28.

Town manager Mike Coughlin announced Stanbrook's departure during the Wednesday, Oct. 5 capital budget meeting; he had received Stanbrook's resignation letter earlier that day. Since Coughlin started as Cohasset's new town manager on August 1, he has continually referred to Stanbrook as "Team Cohasset's quarterback," since so much responsibility was heaped onto the one position to reconcile Cohasset's financial issues.

"He's a great professional, and he has contributed a lot to the town," Coughlin said on Friday. "An indicator for a man is not only how he performs his job, but how he provides for his family."

Stanbrook, who lives in Halifax, said the reason he is returning to his former post is for family reasons: Mansfield is closer to home, and working in Cohasset was a "difficult time commitment," Stanbrook said.

"The person who holds this job needs to put the time in to do it properly," said Stanbrook. "I'm passing the baton off to someone who can put in the time needed to right the ship.

"It was a good opportunity for me," he added, "but my personal situation has changed."

Stanbrook began working Cohasset nine months ago, under interim manager Steve Lombard. "I had a great time here. I worked well with Steve Lombard, and I think I worked well with Mike Coughlin, former Advisory chair Sam Wakeman, and the current chair, Peter Pescatore."

To those who might surmise that the finance director is leaving because Cohasset's financial woes are too daunting to fix, Stanbrook said that he does not think that the job was too difficult, but rather the challenge is "one of the reasons" he was attracted to the position in the first place.

"It's not undoable here," Stanbrook said of Cohasset's financial situation. "It's just going to take hard, diligent work, and someone who can put the time in. It's not an unsolvable problem."

Stanbrook added that "bringing in outside people to get things rolling and current will go a long way to attracting the right person" for the job.

"It's a wide canvas for someone who wants to do it their way," he said. "It might be enticing to the right candidate."

For now, Coughlin has offered the position of interim finance director and town accountant to Eric Kinsherf of Sagamore Beach. Kinsherf owns his own private accounting firm and worked as interim finance director/town accountant before Stanbrook was hired in February. Coughlin said that the town is still planning to hire "an outside effort to come in and clean up the financial issues," something he was pushing to do before Stanbrook announced his leaving.

Coughlin said the town will "formally post, recruit and hire" two separate financial positions — finance director and treasurer/collector — "once the decks are cleared out."

Coughlin added that having the finance director leave during this juncture will likely create "some adverse effects," such as delaying the implementation of the town's new financial software.

Still, Coughlin seems confident that "our action plan will get us out of the end of the year. Hopefully we end the year on a clean slate."

In his acceptance letter to Coughlin, Kinsherf addressed the challenges he will be tackling once he begins work in Cohasset on Oct. 31, including:

- The fact that the position of finance director/town accountant has had a high turnover within the past year alone
- The water deficit, which must be addressed in order to set its tax rate
- The town's new software conversion
- Hiring a new treasurer/collector
- The Nov. 22 deadline to submit the balance sheet to DOR for the certification of free cash (which would be appropriated to the water deficit)
- The fact that Cohasset has a new town manager who has been charged, with the finance director's assistance, with putting together the budget for fiscal year 2013

Stanbrook, "under adverse conditions," Coughlin said, "has done a phenomenal job during this massive effort of reorganizing the finance department."

"It's true that John Stanbrook is our financial quarterback," said Coughlin. Continuing with his football analogy, Coughlin added that Patriots fans will recall the 2001 season, when the Patriots "started with a fine quarterback, Drew Bledsoe," who was injured and replaced with "then-unknown Tom Brady, who led the Pats to a winning season."

"My job, as coach of the town, is to slot other players into these positions and lead the team forward to victory," Coughlin said. "We're still in the game, and it's a game we plan to win."

FISCAL FOCUS

help to close the books on fiscal year 2011. (See related story).

"We'll miss him," said Coughlin, adding that he had been working with Stanbrook to reconfigure the finance department by creating a second accounting position and bringing in Kinsherf's firm to help with the treasurer function and "clear the books to go into the new year with stability.

"When John announced his resignation, we had to retool that provision," Coughlin said.

The finance department requested that $30,000 be transferred from the reserve fund to bring in Kinsherf and his firm. Kinsherf will act as interim town accountant/finance director, a role he also fulfilled last year after Michael Buckley left the position, before Stanbrook was hired in February. Kinsherf has been tasked with reconciling the books by the Nov. 22 balance sheet deadline in order to get free cash certified in time for special Town Meeting, scheduled for Dec. 6. The balance sheet must be submitted to the Department of Revenue in time; the free cash certification precedes setting the town's tax rate.

Kinsherf will work with Carol McMahon, another staff member from his firm who has experience in Cohasset. The two will divide duties, working in town two days each for a total of 30 hours.

The department also asked for a reserve fund transfer of $24,000 to hire Sullivan and Rogers to assist the treasurer/collector's office.

Dan Sullivan will temporarily perform the roles of the treasurer/collector over a 10-week period; Linda Litchfield will continue to work as assistant treasurer/collector. Like Kinsherf and McMahon, Sullivan and an assistant from his firm will each work onsite in Cohasset two days a week. They will work to reconcile cash between the treasurer's books and the bank's, cash between the treasurer's books and the general ledger and reconcile receivables.

Sullivan and Rogers, Coughlin said during Tuesday's meeting, have "a reputation as clean-up agents," having helped the town of Bridgewater "right their financial issues."

The town manager hopes Sullivan can help "remove the backlog, move forward and get this problem behind us."

Coughlin believes this financial restructuring will see the department through the end of the year, although "there is a contingency that we might have to continue with this relationship into the new year."

Unexpected turn of events

The committee approved the funds transfer, but not before asking about the town's implementation of new financial software, SoftRight, a project Stanbrook was knee-deep in, and the timetable for replacing Stanbrook's position. The board expressed concern that the software conversion would be pushed aside while the consulting firms concentrate on closing the books.

Coughlin told the board that the implementation would not be suspended, but he believes that meeting the Nov. 22 deadline for DOR (Dept. of Revenue) is more pressing.

If we don't get our free cash certified, we might as well not have Town Meeting, and if we can't have Town Meeting, we can't reconcile the water deficit and will have to borrow again," said Coughlin. For now, he wants the finance department to "work on the fundamentals; go full-tilt. Then we can look at the issues on SoftRight."

Coughlin also explained that converting to SoftRight would require training in the department, and he could not see the point in training temporary contract employees. The department's current employees, he said, are used to the old system.

Missing DOR's deadline, Coughlin said, "would be a real fumble."

"In stumbling ways over the years, we've closed the books and gotten cash certified," said Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore. "I don't know how perfect we have to be."

"We have to be perfect; we're being watched," Coughlin responded. DOR has "been excruciatingly clear on this. They're looking for the town to signal we've turned a corner."

Kinsherf explained that closing out the books first will "help transition over to the new system. Once we close the books, we'll have an idea of where the true deficits are.

"There's a water deficit again this year," Kinsherf added. "We're not going to set the rate unless we do something about it. Last year, we had to borrow $7.5 million to get the books closed." The Cohasset Mariner previously reported that the Board of Selectmen signed this loan in February to see the town through the remainder of the fiscal year, which ended on June 30, 2011.

"Eric is well aware of the challenges ahead," said Coughlin. "I believe right now, to cut the wood right in front of us, he can get the job done."

"We will use every resource to get the job done, and should be able to get it going right," Kinsherf said, adding that he hoped to have a synergy with Sullivan and Rogers.

Sullivan clarified was his duties will be, as he will temporarily assume the treasurer/collector role.

"I have been given the task of closing down FY 2011 and maintaining the core responsibilities for '12 so the office can maintain itself, so the person who can come in permanently can deal with current matters and not be cleaning up from last year," said Sullivan. "I'm making sure the office hits the deadline and maintains its course. I'm confident — I've done this before. If I have a proficient staff of one person with 16 hours of my time, we'll be able to hit these deadlines, file the balance sheet on time... and I can articulate to the replacement what they're coming into — and make sure they're coming into a place that's running well."

Kinsherf has already been helping with the cash reconciliations, and proposed to be done with his current tasks by Oct. 31.

"Then I'll be prepared to take John's job and get the balance sheet in for the town by November 22," Kinsherf said.

The permanent town account/finance director position will not be posted right away, Coughlin said. . He would like to wait until after the DOR deadline has been met.

"Probably mid-November," he told the committee. "We don't think until some of these issues are cleared up that we'll get the pool of individuals interested in coming into the town of Cohasset.

When we tried to recruit for the treasurer/collector shortly after my appointment, John did some handshaking and networking at the annual finance professionals seminar at UMass and did not find anyone interested in the town treasurer/collector's job, mainly because they knew that there were still issues that had to be resolved. We feel that after we have some credibility, namely that we can tell people that we've submitted the Schedule A and our free cash is certified, we will much better be able to recruit the professionals that we need."

"I personally would like to see us get a posting up and see if there's any interest," said Pescatore.

The chair said that he was not aware the finance community was such a tight-knit group that they know all about all the goings-on in Cohasset. "I don't know how that network works... how that information gets out," he said.

"Having been through the process, the first thing anybody's going to do is Google 'finance director town of Cohasset,'" said Coughlin, "and unfortunately the news that they're going to see is that the finance director's going back to Mansfield, and that could be either a good thing or a bad thing. For us, it's a bad thing, so they're going to see that there are certain issues that need to be resolved."

"Or they could look at it as an opportunity," said Pescatore.

Another committee member challenged, "Why not post the position tomorrow; what's the harm?"

"Right now, given the magnitude of problems, you're not going to attract the person who will be able to perform the job," Coughlin responded.

Pescatore said that the town managed to hire Stanbrook last year, and faced even more difficulties then than there are today.

"I believe [interim town manager] Steve Lombard was able to pull a rabbit out of a hat to get John here," Coughlin said.

When asked if the department will be in a much better position in 30 days, Coughlin said he thought it would.

"The key thing is what DOR is saying. We've lost our financial quarterback," he quipped. "Are we out for the season? I might be simplifying this issue, but right now if we can make those deadlines, get those certifications, and get the tax rate set, and the key thing is getting that certification in by the 22nd, our credibility will have increased.

"Finance professionals know that the only way you can get a balance sheet for free cash is if your reconciliations are done," Coughlin added. "Now, if we report negative free cash, then they know that we have not done the job, because everything that's not reconciled is a hit against free cash. But if our free cash number is robust, the way I believe it will be if we get this work done, then that sends a signal that we've turned a corner on these issues."

Kinsherf said he had a suggestion to help make the job more attractive to a candidate.

"I don't think we're a bad town," Pescatore said.

"You're not," Kinsherf agreed. He went on to say he believed adding a full-time assistant town accountant would make the finance director job more attractive.

Pescatore said that this could become part of the conversation to "sweeten the deal" when it comes time to recruit a new person, and could go before Town Meeting as a request.

The committee seemed to concede that waiting a few more weeks to post the position publicly would probably not make a big difference in the long run.

After approving the transfer of reserve funds to hire Kinsherf and Sullivan, Pescatore wished Stanbrook well as he returns to his last position as town accountant in Mansfield. The chair also pointed out what a loss Stanbrook's leaving is for Cohasset.

"If John hadn't left, we wouldn't have been in favor of bringing in the Sullivan group," Pescatore said, telling Coughlin that the matter would have had to have gone before Town Meeting. "It would have been nice to have," he said of the consulting firm, "but not necessary."

To the rest of the board, Pescatore said, "This was an unexpected turn of events."

PUSHING THE EDGE

Thank You, Steve Jobs

GLENN MANGURIAN

Move over Henry Ford, Thomas Edison and Alexander Graham Bell. Make room for Steve Jobs. He will be remembered as the man who produced products that people fell in love with – the iMac, iPod, iPhone and now the iPad. All iBeautiful, iFun products that we didn't know we needed until he invented them. No need for focus groups to uncover unmet market needs. Rather, if you can dream it, you can make it and they will love it.

Incredible Apple

Recently, Apple announced revenue of $28.6 billion for the most recent quarter – up nearly 82 percent from the same quarter a year ago. Profits were $7.3 billion – double earnings from the same period the previous year. All of this happening during the worst recession since the depression!

How did they do it? Well, they sold 20 million iPhones, 9.3 million iPads, 4 million computers and 7.5 million iPods. All of this has fueled the company's market capitalization to an astonishing $362 billion and that's for a company that has less than 10 percent of the computer market share. To put this into perspective, IBM's market cap was a mere $209 billion on revenue of about $105 billion for the past year. By the way if Apple priced its MAC similar to a Windows PC, it might have 100 percent market share.

Most of us know Apple for its incredible products. Founded 35 years ago, Apple has been nothing but a juggernaut in inventing products that we didn't know we needed. I can't think of another company that has sustained itself for so long with innovation created markets and stayed ahead of its competition. People ask can one person make a difference. You betcha, if your name was Steve Jobs.

An Unlikely Hero

Apple's manifesto is:

"Here's to the crazy ones. The misfits. The nerds. The troublemakers. The round pegs in the square holes. The ones who see things differently."

Jobs was a brilliant, crazy one. Remember, Steve Jobs was the guy who dropped out of Reed College after one semester and then started Apple Computer in a garage only to be fired eight years later. Undeterred, Jobs went on to form Pixar, which he later sold to Disney to become the largest individual shareholder at 7 percent.

Maybe if Jobs and Wozniak had not invented the Apple II PC someone else would have. But, would it have had the design simplicity of a MAC? I doubt it. Who would have thought you could ship a computer without an instruction book? There are no instruction books for Apple products. You just turn them on and they work.

The only mountain that Steve Jobs was not able to conquer was his health. If Jobs had been a doctor, maybe he would have found the cure for cancer. So, as we celebrate his life and accomplishments, we can all say "iThankYou".

Pushing the Edge of Your Thinking

- What would General Motors be like if Steve Jobs was its CEO?
- What would Steve Jobs do if he were President of the United States?
- How would our world be different had Apple not created the commercial personal computer?

HEALTH NOTES

Town-wide Flu Clinic is Oct. 22

STEVE BOBO

The best way to prevent influenza is with an annual flu shot. Combined with pneumonia, influenza is the nation's eighth leading cause of death.

The Board of Health has scheduled a town-wide flu clinic at the Town Hall on October 22 from 10 am. to 12 p.m. On average, 1 out of 5 Americans suffer from influenza every year. Cohasset has had about four already. In addition, influenza and its related complications result in approximately 226,000 hospitalizations in the US each year. Depending on virus severity during the influenza season, nationally, deaths can range from 3000 to a recorded high of about 49,000 people in the worst recent year. Albany, Fort Wayne, Charleston, Chattanooga, and Roanoke were the cities affected the most.

We all are at risk for contracting influenza. The results for some will be lost work or school days. But for those at highest risk, the results can be more serious — leading to hospitalization and more health issues. The best way to prevent influenza is with an annual flu shot. Combined with pneumonia, influenza is the nation's eighth leading cause of death. Influenza viruses spread in respiratory droplets caused by coughing and sneezing. They usually spread from person to person, though sometimes people become infected by touching something contaminated with the influenza virus and then touching their mouth, eyes, or nose. It's therefore imperative to get a shot.

The Epidemiology and Prevention Branch in the Influenza Division at CDC collects, compiles and analyzes information on influenza activity year round in the United States and produces FluView, a weekly influenza surveillance report, from October through mid-May. The U.S. influenza surveillance system is a collaborative effort between CDC and its many partners in state, local, and territorial health departments, public health and clinical laboratories, vital statistics offices, healthcare providers, clinics, and emergency departments. Information in five categories is collected from eight different data sources that allow CDC to:

- Find out when and where influenza activity is occurring
- Track influenza-related illness
- Determine what influenza viruses are circulating
- Detect changes in influenza viruses
- Measure the impact influenza is having on deaths in the United States

These statistics are published by the CDC and sent to most health offices.

We seem to have less time and opportunity for the small things like flu shots, but those who've had the disease make no secret about its consequences and the discomfort derived from the illness. Contracting flu is bound to affect our attitudes and thus our long-term health.

Skippers try to leave Thursday behind

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Over the past two seasons, when the Cohasset football team kicked off against East Bridgewater, it was big news.

Both times, the teams were in contention for the South Shore League title, and both times, Cohasset left the field victorious, shutting out the Vikings (24-0 last year).

This year, East Bridgewater was on even more of a tear, with a 5-0 record that included several routs.

On the other side, Cohasset has struggled a bit with close losses to upper division schools Scituate, and Hingham.

There was no shutout this time as the Vikings rolled to a 36-12 win at home.

"East Bridgewater played their tails off," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They beat us in every facet of the game."

With the loss on Thursday, Cohasset has extra time to let it simmer before their nest game at Rockland on Saturday afternoon.

"We had the kids lifting and watching films on Friday," Afanasiw said. "We're trying to move forward. We talked about the things we need to work on. Friday was productive. We took the weekend off and went back to practice on Monday. When you have a game like that you want to get right back out there. Playing Thursday and then pushing the Rockland game

For a high school coach, one of the most exciting moments of a career can be that one time when a son or daughter knocks in the winning run, throws or catches a game-winning touchdown, scores a winning goal with seconds left to play, or in one case close to home, sink a match-winning 35-foot putt that extended a season-opening winning streak to 10 matches.

That happened to Cohasset co-golf coach Ann Thomae on Tuesday when her son Jack knocked home a 35-foot putt to clinch a 37-35 win over Scituate in a non-league match at Widow's Walk.

CROSS COUNTRY

Cohasset/Hull race by Mashpee

Home course pays off in shutout

The Cohasset/Hull boys and girls cross country teams defeated Mashpee last Thursday by shutout scores on their home course at Wheelwright Park.

Leading the way for the Lady Skippers/Lady Pirates, who grabbed their second win of the season, was captain Christina Secatore, who once again blazed the trail for her teammates with a first place finish, traversing Wheelwright in 22:36.

Christina was followed by Olivia Franklin in second place in 23:39, captain Corin Postell in third in 23:40, Stephanie Brierly in fourth in 23:44, and Ellie Tedeschi in fifth in 25:52 to complete the CHS/HHS score sheet, which showed a final tabulation of 15-40 in favor of Cohasset/Hull.

Tremendous improvement

Solid squad not resting on accolades

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset field hockey team had one of the best regular seasons in school history last year.

This year, the Skippers have continued that success in the first half of the season, with an 8-1 record at the midway mark.

The latest in the stretch was a 6-0 road win on the grass at Norwell.

5. Weymouth (5-1; 5th)

School (record, last week's ranking)

5 To Watch

Kate Pearce (Weymouth)- A high jumper by trade, Pearce once ran XC to stay in shape for track. No longer is that the case. Pearce's 21:38 time over Norwood's sloppy 5000 meter Coakley Middle School course gave her a first- a varsity win. Weymouth won the meet as well, 19-42, thanks to some outstanding pack running from Paige Myers, Eileen Mackintire, May Perriello, and Angelina Choy.

Vanessa Lyle (Norwell)- In the Clippers' 22-37 triumph over East Bridgewater, Lyle handed the individual win over the EB's Alicia Cutter, but she led a talented pack to the next four slots. Her time of 20:18 on the 3 mile course is a huge personal best over that distance, but perhaps the best sign for Norwell was the tiny spread from 1st to 4th. Look for these girls to make a trip to All States.

Jen Asci (Rockland)- The senior has quietly been one of the most consistent runners on the South Shore, posting sub-20:00 5K times since her sophomore year. In a tooth-and-nail 26-30 win over Abington, Asci got the win in 20:04, an all-by-herself effort worthy of some much deserved ink on these pages. Expect Jen to contend for a DVI title in November.

Peter Graceffa (Pembroke)- Who is Peter Graceffa, you might ask? Well, all he did this week was save the Titans' hides after their top seven runners rested the North Quincy dual meet. Graceffa saved the day with a 18:11 victory over his 3.05 mile home course. The 23-32 win for Pembroke sets them up for a matchup with Whitman-Hanson coming up that will decide Patriot League supremacy. Graceffa will be there to help out, but expect a few more Titans ahead of him this time around.

Nick Nielson and Chris Nevins (Hingham)- Everyone around here knows Duxbury's Jason Angell is a pretty darn good runner, so for anyone to beat him in the Patriot League, the Poll takes notice. When it's coming from Hingham, you would expect Mike McConville to do the honors, but with Big Mac out with an injury these two stallions took over that task. Nielson (16:18) grabbed the win, with Nevins (16:29) just a shade behind in the 18-45 triumph for undefeated Hingham.

Meet to Watch

Brown Invitational, Goddard Park, Warwick, RI (Saturday, October 15)- If it feels like almost all of the top teams and athletes from the South Shore are heading down to RI this weekend to show off their fitness, that's probably because they are. The Championship boys race will feature a Pembroke team thirsting for a repeat, the Championship girls race almost featured the local marquee matchup, but Weymouth has entered and Whitman-Hanson has elected to stay in the varsity division. Others racing include Marshfield's dynamic duo of Hubbard and Thomas, Pembroke's star Chelsea Savage, Weymouth's Nolan Parsley and company, and the Whitman-Hanson boys.

The poll and Top 5's are compiled by reigning Div. 1 state champion Weymouth High School girls' coach Mike Miller.

The mission of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Travel program is to promote and support competitive basketball teams, enhance and improve players' skills, and foster a positive environment of sportsmanship and teamwork. The philosophy is simple: Teach the fundamentals of basketball, make it fun, and keep it fair.

Philosophy regarding roster size

After a review of player development policies, the Boosters have developed the following guidelines regarding team roster size:

In grades where there will be at least two travel teams, a 10 player roster for the A team promotes the optimal environment for player development. This represents a change to the previous policy where A teams generally carried 12 players on their roster. In those age groups where there may be only one travel team, the appropriate roster size will be determined based on the evaluations at the tryouts. The Boosters' stated policy is to promote the game as widely as possible at all levels of travel basketball. However, both players and parents should be aware that this is a competitive environment and not every player may qualify for selection to a team.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week Five: Two new No. 1 teams top list

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The fifth week of Inside the 6 produced two new number ones, including the Plymouth North girls, easily the hottest team going right now. This team shot up the chart last week and deservedly earned the No. 1 ranking. On the boys' side, the same can be said for Silver Lake. The Lakers are picking off one team after the next. The boys' top six saw several changes, while the girls' six had a handful of changes as well, including the return of Norwell. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 9.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – The Lakers dethroned a Hingham team that sat comfortably at the top, that was until the Lakers snapped Hingham's five-game winning streak with a 1-1 tie to end the week. The Lakers began last week with a 2-1 win at Quincy and came into this week with a perfect 7-0-3 record and in first place in the Patriot League (Keenan).

2. Hingham – The Harbormen didn't exactly have the best of weeks. After narrowly escaping a well-below .500 Middleboro team with a 2-1 win, they saw their five-game winning streak come to an end with a 1-1 tie to Silver Lake. That draw may prove vital in the race to the Keenan title.

3. Norwell – It was a light week for the Clippers, having only one game on their schedule. And they took care of business, as expected, handing Rockland a 3-1 loss to remain perfect in the South Shore League (7-0-2) and pull within two points of qualifying for the postseason tournament.

4. Weymouth – The Wildcats continue to try to break out of a funk that saw the team go 1-2-1 in the their last four games heading into this week. They started the week with a commanding, 4-0 win over a Norwood team with only one win, and they ended with a 1-0 loss to Framingham, a team they drew with the first time around.

5. Marshfield – The Rams always seem to come up big against big teams. They ended the week with a 1-1 tie against perennial Division 1 powerhouse B.C. High. Although the Rams couldn't figure out Plymouth South, drawing for the second time this season, they beat an always-tough Falmouth side and take a deceptive 3-1-5 record into this week.

6. Duxbury – The Dragons are glad to put last week behind them. A 2-0 win over a 1-8-1 Whitman-Hanson team slightly alleviated a stinging 5-2 loss to a surging Hanover team, a team that hasn't lost in five straight.

On the bubble: Hanover, Cohasset, Braintree

Week Four Rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Silver Lake, 3. Weymouth, 4. Duxbury, 5. Norwell, 6. Marshfield

Girls

1. Plymouth North – At this point, it appears as if no one can stop the Lady Eagles, who took sole possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast League with a win and a tie in the conference last week. Before a 1-1 draw against Falmouth, North beat Nauset, 4-0, and remain one point ahead of Marshfield in the ACL standings.

2. Marshfield – The Lady Rams suffered a tough, 2-1 loss to Falmouth, a team that is quietly climbing the Atlantic Coast League standings. But they got right back on track by beating Plymouth South, 2-0, and Norwell, 2-1, on the road to improve to 9-2 overall and clinch a tournament berth.

3. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons got themselves back on track, first tying a Whitman-Hanson side that is finally back to full strength. The draw with the Lady Panthers came two days after Duxbury beat Hanover, 4-2, to improve to 6-1-2 and remain unbeaten in the Patriot League (Keenan) and one point ahead of Hingham.

4. Hingham – The Harborwomen did as expected, take two victories from two winnable games. They started the week with a 7-0 thrashing of Middleboro and followed that up with a 3-0 win over Silver Lake. Hingham is still chasing Duxbury, sitting just a draw away from tying the Lady Dragons in the Keenan.

5. Weymouth – No shock results here as the Lady Wildcats beat two struggling teams, taking a 6-0 win over Norwood and a 3-1 victory over Framingham. They remain atop the Bay State Carey with an 8-2 league record.

6. Norwell – A 2-1 loss to Marshfield might seem like a bump in the road for the Lady Clippers, but considering that Norwell is without all-league midfielder Darci Vierra, and half of its other starters aren't at 100 percent, this was a good result.

On the bubble: Braintree, Scituate, Cohasset

Week Four Rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Plymouth North, 3. Hingham, 4. Duxbury, 5. Weymouth, 6. Braintree

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

(originally scheduled for Friday and moved due to EEE concerns) makes it like a bye week."

Afanasiw has liked what he's seen this week.

"The kids are working hard at practice," he said. "Hopefully they'll play the way they are capable. This was a tough loss. It's the type that haunts you."

Rockland brings a tough, strong team that likes to run the ball right at people.

"They run the same offense and defense they always use," Afanasiw said. "They just have different personnel. They're hard nosed, tough kids who will play to the whistle. Coach Owen has been there 30 years. It's a quality program. They're blue collar and they don't make mistakes."

Rockland can also kick field goals.

Last year, Rockland edged Cohasset with a field goal that gave the Bulldogs the eventual winning points.

Rockland also beat Scituate with a field goal.

Afanasiw said his team has work to do.

"The entire team needs to step up," he said. "It's not just one person or one area of the game. It's every aspect. We've made too many mistakes and were outplayed in every aspect. We can't have that."

Afanasiw said his seniors should be steppinh up.

"This is their last hurrah," he said. "If they want a shot at the title, they have to elevate their own game. Hopefully they'll do that and they won't make mistakes."

In the East Bridgewater game, Vikings star Casey DeAndrade rushed for 132 yards on 14 attempts, caught two passes for 29 yards and threw a TD pass. Quarterback Tim O'Brien was 4 of 6 for 64 yards.

Cohasset broke onto the scoreboard with 4:41 remaining in the game when senior quarterback Jamie Faber, who had nine carries for 31 yards, scampered for a 6-yard touchdown.

Faber was also 4 of 13 passing for 99 yards. He tossed a 26-yard touchdown to senior Robbie Mahoney with just less than two minutes remaining in the game.

YOUTH WINTER LACROSSE

Liv2Lax registration

Cohasset Club Lacrosse is once again hosting a series of Liv2Lax winter skills programs at the Cohasset SportsPlex for youth boys and girls of all grade and skill levels.

These 1-hour weekly sessions will be held right after-school as a way to burn off some extra energy, to polish your skills for next spring, or just to work on a game that we just can't get enough of especially after the snow starts to fly.

The 16-week Liv2Lax program will be run by experienced high school, club, and college coaches and players providing progressive, age appropriate skill development for the beginner thru to the advanced player with groups divided by skill, gender, and grades with equal parts development, game play, and fun. Sessions run weekly from early November thru to late Feb. (excl holidays/vacation weeks).

For more info, schedules, and on-line registration please visit our website at www.cohassetclublax.com or call 781/383-6074. These programs were a sell out last year and space will be limited to insure the quality of instruction so if you are looking for some great off-season lax at a convenient time and location, sign up today for our after-school Liv2LAX .

BOYS SOCCER

Skippers Clipped on the road

Cohasset falls 3-2 at Norwell

Gatehouse News Service

Ruminating on his team's 3-2 win over second-place Cohasset Tuesday, Norwell boys soccer coach Jack Browne expressed no complacency over the undefeated Clippers' slot atop the South Shore League.

Zach Wooten broke a 2-2 tie with 7:30 left to play. Freshman goalkeeper Patrick Federle skied Wooten's shot from just within the Cohasset penalty box, but Wooten followed the bouncing rebound and scored to give Norwell (8-1-2, 7-0-2 SSL) a 3-2 lead they would not relinquish.

"Zach's creative with the ball and makes timely runs through the box," Browne said. "He has nice individual ball skills and played consistently for us tonight."

Browne was satisfied with his team's play in the first 15 minutes, which featured fluid passing and a goal by Bill Sewell, who beat his defender and created enough space at the Cohasset penalty box to fire a shot past Federle for a 1-0 lead.

The Clippers' backfield struggled to contain Cohasset captain Jamie Timothy, however, and his cross from the left of the Norwell box was redirected into the net off the foot of Nick Brown to tie the game at one with 9:53 remaining in the first half.

The Skippers stayed on the attack in the second half behind crosses from Timothy that created scoring opportunities for Brown and fellow captain Jonah Adkins.

"They played outstanding tonight," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said of Timothy and Adkins. "They both push our offense, we score a lot off of them."

Brown gave the Skippers a 2-1 lead on an unassisted goal he buried high into the right corner of the net past Norwell goalkeeper John Fisher, but the Clippers responded five minutes later with an equalizer from Brendan Davis, who headed a 35-yard free kick from Conor Horan past Federle to tie the game at two.

"At the end we didn't play intelligently offensively," Willis said. "I was happy with the middle 70 minutes, but we didn't play well in the beginning or the end."

Despite the win, Browne, whose 2010 Clippers took the conference title but lost against Norton in the first round of the tournament, echoed the same sentiments.

"We have to get better," he said. "We control our own destiny and we need everybody on the same page.

Great offense against great defense results in a tie

South Coastal Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

Something had to give in the South Coastal Hockey League Classics Div. matchup between the Bruins and Black Hawks.

The Bruins have had one of the more prolific offenses in the Classic Div., as they average five goals a game and they faced an undefeated Black Hawks team that was allowing less than a goal per game.

Bruce Humfrey's second goal of the game with 2:12 left in regulation gave the Black Hawks a 3-3 tie with the Bruins. Both teams did not score in the shootout.

Pembroke's Hank Mosca scored the other goal for the Black Hawks.

John Zimmer of Marshfield had a goal and an assist, while Mike Martin and Steve Anzuoni added a goal each for the Bruins.

Jim Smith of Pembroke scored two goals and Mike Bartlett also of Pembroke scored a goal as the Maple Leafs increase their undefeated streak over the Canadiens with a 3-2 win in a Classics Div. game.

Tim McCrystal of Marshfield and Pembroke's Mike Fahie scored the goals for the Canadiens.

Joe Craig of Marshfield scored two goals, while Jim O'Toole of Rockland, Steve Quinn and Tom Smith both of Marshfield had a goal and two assists as the Rangers rolled to a Classics Div. 7-2 win over the Red Wings. Jay Parker of Hanover and Jeff Uva added a goal each for the Rangers, who had scored eight goals in their first four games.

Pat Burke and Ken Wingate of Pembroke scored the goals for the Red Wings.

Dave Christensen of Pembroke scored three goals and assisted on another in the Stingers, 4-1 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders. Christensen's linemates, Pembroke's Scott Kelly (two assists) and Steve Lemish (goal and an assist) both had multiple points while Ed Burke of Marshfield scored for the Crusaders.

James McNeill scored a goal and assisted on two others as the Saints remain the lone undefeated team in the Legends Div. as they held on for a 5-3 win over the Toros.

Charles Ryan had a goal and two assists, while Mike Ryan both had a goal and an assist for the Saints. Tom Shaughnessy of Hanover and Bill Spillane also scored a goal and Ed Norton had two assists for the Saints.

Mark McGreenery of Norwell, Duxbury's Brian Murphy and Paul Brinkman scored a goal each for the Toros.

Fred Bickford of Norwell scored three goals and Art Riccio added a goal and two assists as the Sharks rolled to a 6-2 win over the Whalers in a Legends Div. game. Richard Petrosino of Marshfield had a goal and an assist, Jay Faherty scored a goal, Hanover's Mike Murphy had three assists and Dana Dolabany of Norwell had two assists for the Sharks.

Hanover's Jim Toner and Steve Concannon of Scituate scored the goals for the Whalers.

YOUTH FIELD HOCKEY

Sixth Graders win

In Sunday's Cohasset middle school field hockey club games, Cohasset's sixth grade and Admiral teams notched wins against Scituate.

The sixth grade won 4-0 with goals contributed by Halle Pratt, Brooke Driscoll, Aidan Chamberlain, and Margaret Norton.

The Admirals won 5-0.

No. 7 position in what was an extremely even match.

"It came down to the No. 7 and 8 on the ninth hole, so everyone was watching," Ann said. "It was exciting. When he made it, there was a great whoop (sound). The whole team erupted. I'm sure I was the loudest. It was just jubilation. We were ecstatic. It was a once in a lifetime experience as a mom and coach."

Good sportsmanship made the moment even sweeter.

"Coach (Gerry) Chisholm's wife said she felt lucky standing next to me," Thomae said. "It was great."

For the record, Chisholm and his Sailors pride themselves on their sportsmanship, making them an ideal opponent for non-league matches. It also doesn't hurt that they have a good, competitive team.

In Tuesday's match, the second against Scituate in two days, co-captains Connor O'Brien and Sam Asnault both shot 42 to lead Cohasset.

Mary Mulcahy led Scituate with a 37 and Tucker Ciessau shot a 41.

Cohasset improved to 10-0 with the victories and still lead the South Shore League standings.

Thomae had said Scituate would be a good test for Cohasset and where they stand against bigger programs.

The Skippers were scheduled to play Harwich yesterday and are at Mashpee on Monday and East Bridgewater on Tuesday.

enth place effort in 28:26.

The Cohasset/Hull boys claimed their first win of the season by a similar 15-40 score.

Captain Harry Hellboch sped to victory in 20:31. He was followed by teammates Matt Menice in 23:19, Tom Saide in 25:54, Chris Daniels in 26:14, and Kristophe Suprenant in 33:47.

Jack Quigley was the sixth Skipper/Pirate across the line in 34:00.

"These were nice wins for our teams," said CHS/HHS head coach Ted Coyle. "They've been working hard to improve their times and it was good to see their efforts pay off."

Although the boys and girls came out on the short end of their meet with Norwell on Tuesday, there were some notable performances by the Cohasset/Hull runners.

Secatore led the way for the girls with a sixth place finish in a fine time of 21:18 and Postell posted an excellent clocking of 22:56 for ninth place.

On the boys' side, Nick Cimetti was the first CHS/HHS runner across the line in sixth place in 18:49. Hellboch took ninth spot in a personal record (PR) time of 19:49.

"Harry had set a goal of running faster than 20:00 at Wheelwright this season, so it was a nice accomplishment for him to do so in our last home meet," noted Coyle.

Both the boys and girls teams travel to Abington this Tuesday.

"The team continues to look good and improve," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "We had to fill a few holes and people stepped up. We've improved tremendously, especially on defense. We had lost some players, and shame on me, we didn't develop defensive players. That will never happen again."

Giuliano is involved in the youth program in town.

The Wednesday game at Norwell had been scheduled for Thursday, but weather forecasts, which turned out to be correct, got the teams together a day early.

In terms of getting the game in, it was big because Norwell plays on grass.

"We were lucky we got it in," Giuliano said.

One thing Giuliano loves about this year's team is the balance it has.

There isn't one player teams can gang up on to shut down a team.

Ten different players have scored a goal this season and ten have assists.

Three players, Angela Cipolla, Caty Gilman and Caitlin DeAngelis all have more than 10 points.

Cipolla leads the point race with 16 (7 goals, 9 assists), while Gilman (12 goals, 3 assists) is second overall, first in goals.

Giuliano said a key for her group is the middle.

"My midfielders, Sage Stebbins, Kayla Orner, Amber Silvia, they're the glue that holds the team together," Giuliano said. "Caty Gilman is a freshman and she is strong. She has turned our scoring around. We're doing pretty well putting balls in the net."

Some other defensive players who have been playing well are Camryn Caron, Molly Fitzgerald and Katherine Dunn.

Senior goalie Whitney Jaffe has also been outstanding.

"Whitney had a tremendous season last year," Giuliano said. "She's been up to it this year."

Cohasset's only loss was in the last two minutes against Harwich.

Cohasset has a rematch scheduled for Monday on the road.

"They haven't lost yet," Giuliano said of Harwich. "If we want to be able to share a league title with them we have to win that game. Anything can happen. Harwich is a good team. They're well coached. It will be a game with two teams that really want to win."

COLLEGE MATTERS

Making your Personal Statement personal

By Allison W. Matlack Correspondent

Writing the Personal Statement can be a torturous exercise for many seniors. Fears of sounding like a braggart or worse, having nothing worthwhile to say, leave even strong writers paralyzed. While the temptation might be to adopt a distant, academic tone, by making your Personal Statement personal you help the admissions office gain a richer understanding of your unique character and qualities.

Make your Personal Statement about yourself. Don't write someone else's biography. Even if your essay is about a person who has had a significant influence on you, your writing should focus on the nature of that influence and how that person helped to shape the person you are today.

Write something only you could write. While you may have had a powerful experience doing community service with your youth group or celebrated an amazing victory with teammates, by writing about your perspective and insights on those moments makes your essay one-of-a-kind. Even though others shared this moment, focus on what that experience meant to you, not on the experience itself.

Related to that, your Personal Statement should not merely tell a story. The event you share should represent some type of catalyst of change for you – a moment that helped you come to a deeper understanding about something that has lead to a meaningful change in your perceptions of the world and of yourself.

Sometimes the events themselves are so momentous that they can eclipse the rest of your essay. For example, if you have worked with someone who is profoundly handicapped, or helped starving children, or had dinner with the Dalai Lama, the moment itself is so significant that you might feel like your introspections are lost in the shadow cast by the event. Ironically, sometimes the small, everyday moments lead to the most profound personal insights. It really, truly doesn't matter what event you write about. What matters is what you write says about you.

Write about what is personally meaningful to you. Don't be swayed by what other people tell you to write about. In the end, you won't be able to write with the same conviction and passion, and the reader will know it. Write about what is deeply, powerfully meaningful to you.

Finally, write in your own voice. Don't adopt a faux-intellectual style because you think that will impress your reader — it won't. While it's important not to adopt a style that is too casual, the reader should learn something about you just by the way you write. Are you an optimistic person? Do you have a dry wit? Drop the formal academic tone and let your personality shine through.

The Personal Statement should convey who you are, how you think, what is important to you while showcasing your strong writing skills. In the end, however, the statement needs to be personal in tone, content and meaning. While a lot will be left unsaid, a statement that is personal brings a depth and dimension to the application and gives the admissions office a fuller sense of who you are.

A college funding study guide for parents

As many parents know, college students are no strangers to procrastination. Visit any campus coffee shop late at night and you're guaranteed to spot some students engaged in last-minute cramming for exams.

Of course, some things, like college funding, can't be prepared for overnight. Funding your child's education takes planning and time. Read up on these college funding options from Thrivent Financial now to prepare for the future, and say goodbye to last-minute panic down the road.

529 plan

529 plans are a tax-deferred way for anyone to invest in a child's education. These accounts are controlled by your state or by a manager your state has appointed. Anyone can establish a 529 savings plan naming anyone as a beneficiary. Check with a financial professional in your area to find out how a 529 plan in your state could be helpful to your college-funding strategy.

Custodial account

This type of savings account allows you to build savings for any child, meaning grandparents, relatives and friends could also set this up. While the child's name is on the account, the adult custodian is responsible for overseeing it until the child turns the age of majority. Custodial accounts can be used for any reason, meaning that if your savings exceeds the amount needed for tuition, your child could use it for living expenses or save it for something else.

Coverdell account

The savings accrued in a Coverdell account can be used for approved expenses before your child goes to college, on K-12 expenses for students in private or public schools, as well as eligible post-secondary education expenses. A child can receive up to $2,000 annually in a Coverdell account until age 18.

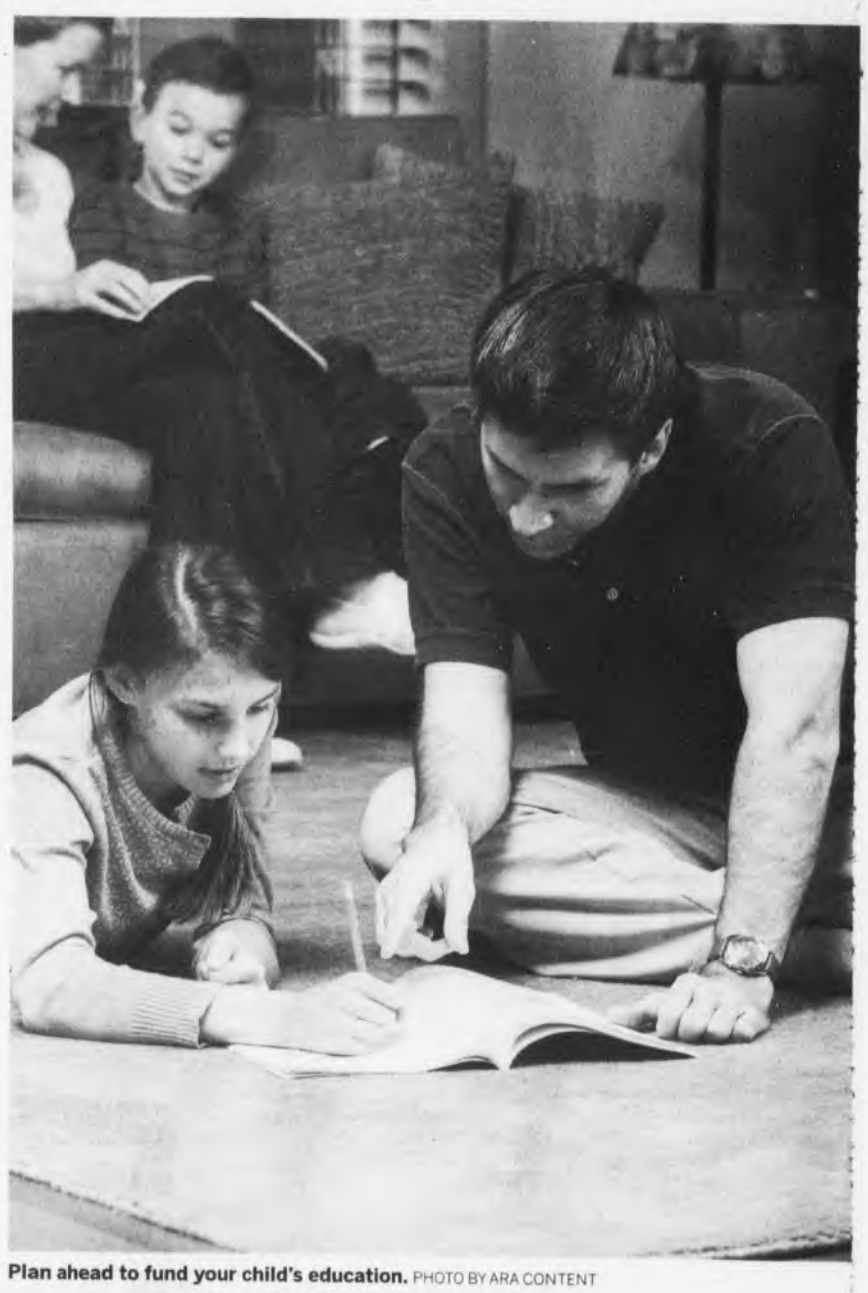
Other types of accounts

Trusts

Contact an attorney to see if a trust could be right for you. Trusts can be used for education and other purposes. Once the trust belongs to your child (usually at age 18), that money is no longer included in your taxable estate. Contributions to a trust have no minimum or maximum, and anyone can contribute.

IRAs

While traditionally used for retirement savings, traditional and Roth IRAs allow you to withdraw funds penalty-free if used for educational purposes. Your contributions may be tax deductible and grow tax-deferred until withdrawal. Contact a financial representative about using IRAs for college funding, as this could affect your retirement strategy and financial aid eligibility.



Permanent life insurance

If something should happen to you, a permanent life insurance contract can help ensure that goals like education can be met, even if the unthinkable happens. In addition, permanent life insurance contracts accumulate cash value that can be used during your lifetime. Visit Thrivent.com for more information on types of life insurance to help you pay for college.

With so many options for college funding to choose from, selecting the best set of tools for you or your child can be difficult. A financial representative can help you decide which options are best for you to meet your family's needs. Visit Thrivent.com to contact a financial representative, learn more about college funding options and even estimate your needs with a College Savings Calculator.

Financial ease, like a good report card, doesn't come without preparation. Now that you have started studying, put your knowledge to the test and start forming your college funding strategy.

OPINION

Weighing AP courses vs. College Boards

By Marlene Sokol
St. Petersburg Times

Pop quiz. Your high-schooler got an A in an advanced-placement course but a 2 (not passing) on the College Board exam.

Do you:

a. Wear a hat and sunglasses to the supermarket;

b. Lodge a complaint against that good-for-nothing teacher; or

c. Write another check to music camp like nothing happened?

The correct answer is "none of the above," although my husband and I will wind up doing "c."

Like a lot of parents, we are befuddled by this generation's rush to AP and a tad worried about the consequences.

Under Superintendent MaryEllen Elia, Florida's Hillsborough County opened up AP dramatically to students of varied skill levels. The idea was to shake up things by raising expectations of all students, instead of allowing AP to remain the bastion of the academic elite.

Some teachers, setting their sights on their students instead of the test, wound up with pass rates as low as 10 percent, causing the St. Petersburg Times to question if the test fees — which the district pays — are money well spent.

Some insist it is. "I will continue to push students into advanced placement because the experience will make them better prepared for the future," Plant High School Principal Rob Nelson wrote to the Times in November.

As I shuttle to and from Idlewild Baptist Church (our school's test site, who knew?), I can't help but wonder if some of these students, parents and principals, have lost their minds.

By the time kids get to their junior year, it's not unheard of to be taking five AP classes at once. By the time they graduate, they might have taken a lot more, especially if they loaded up on the online AP classes to pad that all-important grade point average.

Pretty soon you can't see your house under the Princeton Review books — unless your child blows off the tests, which happens in some cases.

And those who do show up could be scoring 1's and 2's, which do nothing for them in college.

Except ...

Nancy Hutek, a guidance counselor at Armwood High School in Seffner, said it never bothered her that her daughter, now a college sophomore, made A's and B's in her AP classes, but passed only one of seven exams.

"To me, the rigor and what she had to do in those classes helped her at the college level," Hutek said. "It's that high level of thinking."

That said, Hutek advises students to aim for balance. Don't take so many AP classes that you can't play a sport, she said. And be careful which courses you select. "Take AP courses in your strongest areas, where you are likely to succeed and get the most bang for your buck."

Time will tell if this was a worthy experiment. And I think the sad reality is that economics will be a much stronger factor in whether this generation actually makes it to college.

To those who can, I say stay the whole four years. You'll have the rest of your lives for the real world, real jobs and real responsibilities.

And you don't get extra GPA points for any of it.

ADVERTORIAL

Why choose a career in the foodservice industry?

By Jeff Levine
The Culinary Institute of America

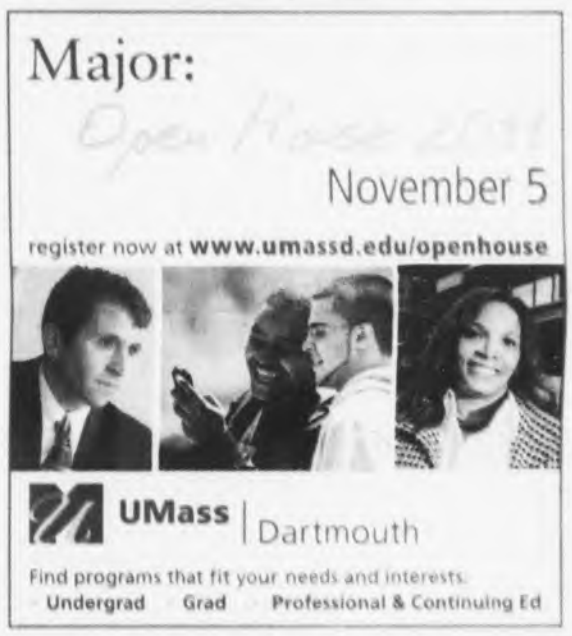
Restaurant sales in the United States are expected to surpass $600 billion this year, according to the National Restaurant Association. The foodservice industry employs more than 12.6 million people — that's nearly 9 percent of the U.S. workforce. Half of every food dollar spend in this country is in the restaurant industry. Foodservice industry job growth is expected to outpace overall national economic job growth this year. Looking for a job? This is the place to be.

Interest in culinary careers is rising among both career changers and traditional college students. Both the number and variety of job options for college graduates in the field are endless: chef, executive chef, pastry chef, and baker, as well as business owner, hotel executive, caterer, research and development chef, educator, food stylist, food journalist, and myriad other food-related fields.

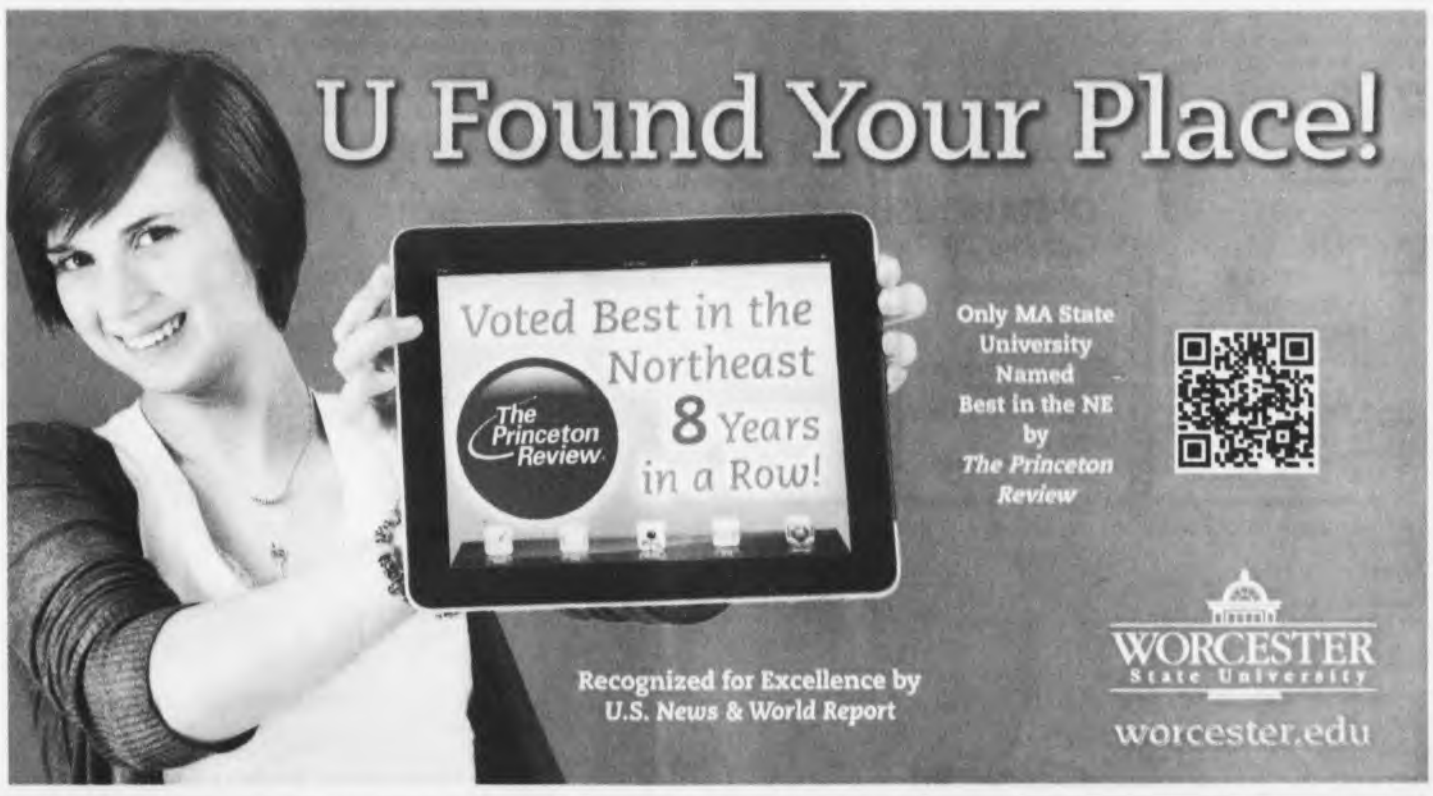
In fact, "Food Jobs" (Beaufort Books, 2008), a 2009 World Cookbook Award-winning book by Irena Chalmers, describes 150 career options in various segments of the foodservice industry. For Chalmers, an instructor at The Culinary Institute of America (CIA) in Hyde Park, N.Y., 150 is really just the starting point. "The food world is constantly changing and expanding," she says. "The diversity of jobs really is a question of looking into one's own heart and saying, 'What would I really love to do?'"

And, for anyone looking to make food your life's work, it's important to get a degree from an accredited not-for-profit college that can give you both the management and hands-on skills to actually become a leader in the industry. An associate degree from such a college will provide the fundamental skills, techniques, and hands-on practice in world cuisines to prepare students for success in the industry. Bachelor's degrees build on those foundations with the added operational and management knowledge to fast track graduates into leadership positions earlier in their careers.

Graduates holding a bachelor's degree have a better chance at starting in higher-paying management jobs both inside and outside of the kitchen, which will lead to higher salaries throughout their careers. The CIA's Career Services Office reports that bachelor's degree graduates in the foodservice industry often see their salaries double in the first 10 years of their career.



As at any college or university, fellow alumni of culinary colleges are an accomplished, supportive network throughout the industry to mentor new graduates and help each other in pursuit of career goals.



The CIA, the world's premier culinary college, boasts an impressive list of successful alumni such as Cat Cora, Anthony Bourdain, Grant Achatz, and Duff Goldman, as well as Boston's own Ken Oringer, Chris Schlesinger, Jasper White, Todd English, and Jamie Mammano.

LIFE AT CHS

Big fan of four-day weekends

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Hello again! Another week at CHS has passed, and, once again, everybody was crazy busy. Although Monday's day off was supposed to be in "celebration" of Christopher Columbus' alleged discovery of America, most students spent all day doing homework or returning home from family trips that were taken over the long weekend. For some reason, I am a big fan of four-day weekends. They are twice as long as regular weekends, but not too long that you become disoriented when you return back to school. This four-day break was an opportune time for relaxation, college visits, apple picking, and seeing friends who were home from college for the weekend. The next long weekend is in four weeks and I already can't wait!

The second session of the Homework Help Center at the library was a huge success on Tuesday! Over 40 kids showed up, and the five NHS tutors definitely had their hands full. Hopefully even more students will show up next week for homework help and pizza.

Wednesday was picture day at school. The stereotypical view of picture day is that the photographers aim to make each student look as absolutely heinous by taking a picture that will leave an eternal stigma of shame on the student once printed in the yearbook. However, aside from some awkward posing, picture day is really not that bad. Regardless, the seniors didn't have to worry about getting all dressed up because most of us have already had our senior portraits done. In addition to regular school pictures, sports teams' pictures took place on Wednesday after school as well.

Peer leaders kicked off this week with an after school meeting on Tuesday. Leaders went into the middle school during school on Friday to meet with their classes and introduce themselves and the program.

Now for an update on club: The Gay Straight Alliance meets a couple times a month in the library. The Yearbook Club has had a couple of meetings, but is still looking for more members! Listen to the announcements for the date and time of the next meeting — students from all grades are welcome to join. Articles for the Spinnaker are due by Oct. 17, so remember to submit them ASAP! The first edition of the newspaper comes out on Oct. 28 so don't forget to bring your dollar to school.

There were a lot of sporting events this week as well. It's hard to believe the fall season is almost halfway over! Check out the sports section for more information.

That's it for this week Cohasset, enjoy the weekend!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High. Her column appears weekly during the school year.

SCHOOL NEWS

CHS commended students named

Principal, Dr. Michael Gill of Cohasset Middle-High School has announced that Isabel Robinson, Madeline O'Grady, Gus Helbock, Elizabeth Hagearty, and Emily Dormitzer have been named Commended Students in the 2012 National Merit Scholarship Program. A certificate of Commendation from National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), which conducts the program, will be presented to these scholastically talented seniors at class night on May 31, 2012.

About 34,000 commended students throughout the nation are being recognized for their exceptional academic promise. Although they have not continued in the 2012 competition for National Merit Scholarships, Commended Students placed among the top 5 percent of more than 1.5 million students who entered the 2011 competition by taking the 2010 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT®).

"Recognition of high achieving students is essential to advancing educational excellence in our nation," commented a spokesperson for NMSC. "As demonstrated by their outstanding performance in our highly competitive program, the young men and women named Commended Students represent some of the most academically talented students in our country. We sincerely hope this recognition will enhance their educational opportunities and encourage them in their pursuit of academic success."

"It is an honor to recognize and congratulate the efforts of these students," states Dr. Gill, "and it is a wonderful opportunity for the community to share in our tradition for academic excellence and success."

Senior's journey into assisted living

JAMES BARBER

About three months ago, a senior by the name of Robert "Grumpy" Dennett, 79, came to Sunrise assisted living in Cohasset. He had feelings of fear, frustration and loneliness. He didn't know what to expect and was apprehensive to say the least. When he first moved into the community, he was anxious and wanted to go back to his house in Marshfield. Never in a million years did he think that he would soon be calling Sunrise of Cohasset his home.

Mr. Dennett, who prefers to be called Grumpy, is one of our most recent success stories.

"He is one of the most congenial, caring individuals that I have ever met," says Gerri Henry, a lead care manager at Sunrise. Grumpy says that he got his nickname from his late wife Peggy because he used to get agitated and grouchy. The two would stay married for over 50 years until his wife passed over 14 months ago. Grumpy has nothing but adoration and loving words when speaking about his late wife and his kind ways carry over to the entire community.

Prior to Grumpy moving to Sunrise, he was living alone at his home in Marshfield. He has six children who are all very attentive to his needs. The kids wanted to see their dad happy and started to explore the options of senior living. Grumpy was having none of it. He liked his neighborhood where he'd live for nearly a half of century. The trouble was he was alone and needed a bit of assistance after some medical issues that arose. After an exhaustive search, his children selected Sunrise of Cohasset for their father's new home.

Moving from your lifelong home is never easy. It is scary and bewildering all at the same time. When Grumpy first got to Sunrise, it wasn't an easy adjustment period. A new apartment, strange faces and an uncertainty about a new environment would be unsettling to him at first, says Chris Mele, executive director at Sunrise of Cohasset. Then, day-by-day, the pieces of the puzzle began to fall in place, says Mele. Since arriving at Sunrise of Cohasset, Grumpy's hesitation started to melt away. He has gained almost 10 pounds and developed many friendships that have improved his overall quality of life. Grumpy says "I truly believe that my improved health is due to the social connections that I have made with other seniors and the entire staff at Sunrise. The people here make a difference in my life everyday and I am forever grateful to my children for finding this beautiful home for me to live in."

Enriching the lives of seniors is what we do at Sunrise of Cohasset, says Susan Gregorio, director of community relations. Through a strong activities program designed specifically for our current residents, we focus on programming that stimulates the mind such as bringing live entertainment into the building, taking the residents out on day trips and having many "themed" parties at the community, says Gregorio. Grumpy is one of our active seniors and when asked what his favorite activity is, he said "I love it when the singers come to our home and croon all the classic music from the 40s and 50s. It truly brings back a lot of wonderful memories and I can't help but think of all the good times I shared with my family."

Through this journey of transition, Grumpy has opened himself up to endless possibilities and experiences that still give him joy. "What gives us great pleasure is when we hear him refer to our community as home. He's come a long way and it is so comforting in knowing that his zest for life is still coming to surface," says Mele.

Preserving dignity, encouraging independence and observing seniors transitioning to change are the most rewarding aspect of the job.

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

Look good and feel better

Workshops help those touched by cancer

The adversity caused by a breast cancer diagnosis can result in finding compassion and kindness in unexpected ways, often with strangers.

The South Shore is no exception to this phenomenon as personified by Kathleen Foley of Marshfield. A licensed cosmetologist, Foley shares her kindheartedness and expertise with women in the midst of a breast cancer battle each time she volunteers at a Look Good...Feel Better workshop, a program offered by the American Cancer Society.

"It really is true that when you look good you do feel better," said Foley. "Even if physically and emotionally you are experiencing stress or discomfort, knowing your appearance is good helps to cross one worry off the list."

Originally from Rockland, Foley is an instructor at the South Shore Vocational Technical School in Hanover, where she teaches students in the cosmetology program.

A friend's bout with alopecia (a condition that causes hair loss) first heightened Foley's sensitivity to the traumas involved with hair loss – and how the problem can affect appearance, personal maintenance, confidence and self esteem. She then had a relative diagnosed with cancer who faced some of the same issues.

"We all know someone who has or has had cancer," she said. "Even though there are so many other concerns when a person is dealing with that, it is hard to ignore the effects caused by changes in appearance and how it makes you feel."

The American Cancer Society's Look Good...Feel Better Program provided an ideal opportunity for Foley to use her professional skills, help others and find the fulfillment of knowing her contributions had made a difference to someone else's life.

"It really ends up being a winning situation for those of us who give our time," she said. "There is no greater reward than making that new friend, seeing a smile appear on the face of someone who has been devastated by a cancer diagnosis and sharing a laugh or a pleasant moment."

Foley is one of an army of volunteer beauty professionals put together by the American Cancer Society to address topics affecting physical appearance during cancer treatment. Skin care, nail care, adjusting to hair loss, scarf and accessory use and make up techniques are reviewed in a personal and caring atmosphere.

"What we really specialize in is the art of illusion," said Foley referring to such practical applications as outlining eyebrows, concealing complexion blotches or managing dryness of the skin.

"One of the biggest concerns of people dealing with cancer is that they don't want to look sick. They don't want others to look at them and wonder about their condition. Teaching them a few simple techniques helps to eliminate that burden."

Another challenge appearing at the sessions is that of people who are unfamiliar with make up techniques and skin care due to the growing number of very young cancer patients.

"Unfortunately we see women who are diagnosed at a very young age," she said. "There are some who just do not wear makeup or only apply it for special occasions. That is a whole different category of client because we teach them the basics that they may be unfamiliar with."

Look Good...Feel Better volunteers attend training sessions offered by the society, as well as refresher courses twice a year. Three to five hour commitments per month are requested by the organization of its volunteers, which include operation of workshops and follow up sessions that can be privately in salons for consultation or more personal guidance.

The American Cancer Society distributes a calendar listing locations and dates of upcoming workshops. Volunteers, like Foley, then commit to individual activities they are available to attend, allowing for flexibility and choice within the region. "I love living in Marshfield; who wouldn't?" said Foley. "It gives me a chance to help at workshops at various places throughout the South Shore."

A workshop requires additional preparation and attention to detail. Professionals are assisted by other volunteers either affiliated with the host site or people in the area trained by the American Cancer Society to manage duties such as scheduling, reminder calls, room preparation and collection of supplies. These volunteers also attend sessions to provide assistance to presenters and guests.

"We require warm, friendly compassionate people," said Jessica Rabbitt, American Cancer Society Area Director of Communications. "They help us keep things running smoothly."

A Look Good... Feel Better program was held recently for South Shore residents at the Cancer Support Community in Norwell. In addition to Foley, who conducted the program, others volunteers were involved in making the program a success including one volunteer who was a cancer survivor herself.

Sarah Nash of the Support Community Norwell facility said, "We have something for people at any point in their cancer journey, including those who have been through it and find it rewarding to help others."

"Everyone is different in their response to cancer," said Foley. "Some people who attend the workshops are very supportive and anxious to help others even while going through it themselves. Others can get very emotional. There is no way to define a common reaction or what is normal. There is no such thing. We all just have to work together to help each other in the best way we know how. That is what I find so gratifying. I leave a workshop feeling better, feeling good."

Foley stressed that information and opportunities are available to learn either in a supportive workshop setting or at a private consultation to make people feel at ease with what may be happening during treatment, as well as what to expect.

"There is nothing as rewarding as knowing you have shared some simple tips about hair care, tying scarves, or creating a comfortable look," she said. "When people are dealing with something as devastating and emotional as cancer, it means so much for them to be able to feel they can go out and have a regular day. Making someone feel better is such a gift. When they leave a workshop I have presented they know where to go to follow up if they have a question, where to get a scalp massage, where to bring a friend or relative who also may need some support. I make many new friends doing this. The most important thing for people to know who are dealing with cancer is that there is help available and people really do care."

FIRE DEPARTMENT

Preventing house fires

This year's Fire Prevention Week campaign focuses on preventing the leading causes of home fires — cooking, heating and electrical equipment, as well as candles and smoking materials. Additionally, it urges people to protect their homes and families with life-saving technology and planning.

"In 2009, 2,565 people died in home fires. Nearly all of these deaths could have been prevented by taking a few simple precautions like having working smoke alarms and a home fire escape plan, keeping things that can burn away from the stove and always turning off space heaters before going to bed," says Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

The Cohasset Fire Department offers the following tips for protecting your home and family from fire:

- Stay in the kitchen while you are frying, grilling, or broiling food. If you leave the kitchen for even a short period of time, turn off the stove.
- Keep anything that can burn at least three feet away from heating equipment, like the furnace, fireplace, wood stove, or portable space heater.
- Have a three-foot "kid-free zone" around open fires and space heaters.
- Replace or repair damaged or loose electrical cords.
- If you smoke, smoke outside.
- Use deep, wide ashtrays on a sturdy table.
- Blow out all candles when you leave the room or go to bed. Avoid the use of candles in the bedroom and other areas where people may fall asleep.

"While preventing home fires Cohasset is always our number one priority, it is not always possible," Silvia continued. "Cohasset's residents need to provide the best protection to keep their homes and families safe in the event of a fire. This can be achieved by developing an escape plan which you practice regularly and equipping homes with life-saving technologies like smoke alarms and home fire sprinklers."

The following tips will help keep your family safe if there is a fire in your home:

- Install smoke alarms inside each bedroom, outside each sleeping area, and on every level of the home (including the basement).
- Interconnect all smoke alarms in the home so when one sounds, they all sound.
- Test smoke alarms at least monthly and replace all smoke alarms when they are 10 years old or sooner if they do not respond when tested.
- Make sure everyone in your home knows how to respond if the smoke alarm sounds.
- Pull together everyone in your household and make a plan. Walk through your home and inspect all possible ways out. Households with children should consider drawing a floor plan of your home, marking two ways out of each room, including windows and doors.
- If you are building or remodeling your home, consider installing home fire sprinklers.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 24, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mars, your ruling planet, begins a journey that will open up a growing number of possibilities. Put that surging Arian energy to good use and explore it to your heart's content.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is the time to prepare for a career move coming up next month. Update your resume. Get those proposals in shape. And don't forget to buff up that Bovine self-confidence.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your Gemini instincts will guide you to the right people who might be able to help you get over that career impasse that has been holding you back. Expect to make changes.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're getting closer, but you still have a ways to go before reaching your goals. Continue to stay focused, no matter how difficult it can be for the easily distracted Moon Child.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine pride might be keeping you from getting to the source of a disturbing situation. Don't be shy about asking questions. Remember: Information is power.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to shake up your tidy little world by doing something spontaneous, like taking an unplanned trip or going on a mad shopping spree.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good week to get advice on your plans. But don't act on them until you feel sure that you've been told everything you need to know to support your move.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful. You might be probing just a little too deeply into a situation that you find singularly suspicious. The facts you seek will begin to emerge at a later time.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to make new friends and to look for new career challenges. But first, get all those unfinished tasks wrapped up and out of the way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Relationships need a fresh infusion of tender, loving care. Avoid potential problems down the line. Stay close to loved ones as the month draws to a close.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Aspects favor relationships, whether platonic, professional or personal. On another note: Be a mite more thrifty. You might need some extra money very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) This is the absolute right time to let those often-hidden talents shine their brightest. You'll impress some very important people with what you can do.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Denise M. Williams

Denise M. Williams

PHOENIX, AZ – Denise Marie (O'Connell) Williams went to be with her Savior on Sept 28, 2011 after a ten month battle with leukemia.

Denise was born to the late William and Lillian O'Connell in Boston, MA Dec. 24, 1950. She grew up in Cohasset, MA and graduated from Cohasset High School in 1968. She received her Associate of Science from Westbrook College of Portland, ME in 1970. She began her career researching the effects of cigarettes on the lungs.

Denise married Paul in March of 1974. They lived in Holbrook, MA for many years where they started their family. Denise and her "boys" moved to Phoenix in 1990. For the past 13 years, she had been employed by Life Sciences of Arizona as a Medical Technologist at Banner Thunderbird Hospital.

Denise is survived by her husband of 37 years, Paul; and by her sons, Patrick and Stephen; daughter-in-law, Janae, and granddaughter, Quinn Avery. She was preceded to eternal life by her son, Michael. Denise is also survived by her sisters, Kathleen Nini and Eileen Meehan, and her brothers, William, Kevin, Daniel, Brian, Timothy, and David, and many nieces, nephews, dear friends, and other relatives.

Denise loved to cook (comes from a long line of exceptional cooks) and had the gift of hospitality. She also enjoyed gardening, hiking, and bird watching. And, oh yes, she loved the ocean.

In 2000, Denise and Paul began volunteering at the House of Refuge Sunnyslope in Phoenix. She was often there preparing wonderful meals for the residents, but her greatest contribution was as a concerned listener who offered Scriptural advice to both residents and Staff. Her gentle spirit was soothing to many troubled hearts. Denise's favorite Scripture was Psalm 51:10, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a steadfast spirit within me."

Denise's life will be remembered and celebrated at The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, Saturday, Oct. 29 at 10 a.m.

In lieu of flowers, please remember Denise through a contribution to the House of Refuge, 9835 N. 7th St. Phoenix, AZ 85020.

Karen E. Ford

Karen E. Ford

COHASSET – Karen E. Ford, Age 69 of Cohasset passed away in her own home on October 5 , 2011 with her family at her side: Chris, her husband of 44 years, Erica Rice of Westwood, Paul and Jon Ford of Honolulu, and her mother, Doris McCurdy of Dunedin Florida. Karen succumbed to a rare form of cancer. Karen was born Sept. 28th 1942 in Charleston , West Virginia. Karen attended Anderson University in Anderson, Indiana. Following graduation Karen worked as a psychiatric nurse at Madison State Hospital in Indiana. Karen met Chris while both were doing graduate work at the Universtiy of Hawaii after which they both completed advanced graduate degrees at Michigan State University, Karen's as a Master of social work. Karen and Chris both taught at the University of Guam for seven years where Karen also served as a counselor to students. Their three children were born on Guam where they built two homes and became very active in the community. They then spent four years in Germantown, Maryland while Chris worked in Washington, D.C. and Karen focused on the children. They returned to Chris's hometown of Cohasset in 1982 where together they started the real estate company, Hallmark 100 Properties, which grew to include four successful offices on the South Shore. After selling their business in 1999 they bought a retirement home in Dunedin Florida. Karen was well known for her great faith and she devoted many hours to serving and praying for others. She was a dedicated member of St Stephens Episcopal church in Cohasset and Bayside Community Church in Dunedin. She served as the founder and President of the Cohasset Chapter of Aglow International, a faith based organization dedicated to reaching out to those in need, particularly women in developing countries. Karen was also a member of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, the Cohasset Golf Club and the Dunedin Golf Club. In addition to her children and mother, Karen is survived by her brother Jonathan McCurdy of San Francisco , son-in-law Shane Rice of Westwood, her Honolulu daughter-in-law's Claudia Ford and Julie Ford and her grandchildren Eva and Sean Rice and Brandon and Logan Ford. A Memorial service was held for Karen at St Stephens Church in Cohasset on Monday the 10th of October, at 3 PM. In lieu of flowers donations may be made in Karen's name to the Norwell Visiting Nurses and Hospice Association, 120 Longwater Drive Norwell, MA 02061 or to St. Stephens Church, 16 Highland Ave. Cohasset MA 02025.

Priscilla D. Daniels

COHASSET – Priscilla D. (Caswell) Daniels, 81, of Cohasset, Oct. 8, 2011.

Beloved wife of the late Edwin E. Daniels and loving mother of Scott and his wife, Peggy of Hull, Kim Blakeslee and her husband, Jim and Stephen and his wife, Susan, all of Norwell. Sister of Howard T. Caswell Jr. of Belmont, NH. Priscilla is also survived by seven grandchildren and two great-grand children.

Born in Lynn, Priscilla graduated from Swampscott High School in 1947 and the New England Conservatory of Music in 1951, where she earned her BA degree in Piano Forte, graduating Magna Cum Laude. She received her Mass State Teaching Certification from Boston University in 1952. She continued to pursue a degree in Psychology at Northeastern University 1971-72 and later completed graduate classes in poetry and writing at Harvard University Extension School. She was an active member of Pi Kappa Lambda, the Cohasset Women's Club, Garden Club and Historical Society and past president of AXR and the Norwood Women's Club.

A gifted musician, Priscilla played piano for June's Dance Studio in Lynn and taught piano at the Lincoln Public Schools, and out of her homes in Norwood and Cohasset. In her middle years, she publically shared her improvisational talent playing popular dinner music at weddings and restaurants such as the Parker House in Boston, the Whiton House in Hingham and Hugo's Lighthouse in Cohasset. For many years she directed the children's choir at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

Priscilla enjoyed reading, antiquing throughout New England, and designing and decorating Colonial homes; she collaborated with her husband, Ed, on the design of homes he built on Lantern Lane in Cohasset. Her passion for writing and reading poetry led her to improvising piano music to accompany her poems. Priscilla cherished her family, drawing her greatest joy from attending her grandchildren's birthday parties, backyard football games, family barbecues, musicals, band concerts and graduation ceremonies.

A funeral service was held Wednesday, Oct. 12, 2011 at 11 a.m. at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. Visiting hours were Tuesday from 5-8 p.m. Interment at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Priscilla's memory may be made to Norwell VNA & Hospice, 120 Longwater Cir., Norwell, MA. 02061.

POLICE, FIRE HQ

Building in tough shape

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It was built back in 1962 and has barely been seen an update since. Windows and doors need replacing, tile floors are coming up, and whenever it rains, the basement floods.

Over the past few weeks, Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca have been shopping around their proposal to renovate the public safety complex on Elm Street. The short-term solution is to renovate the current structure; in the long-term, however, the chiefs believe a new public safety complex is needed.

"These items are not luxuries or creature comforts," the chiefs explained in their written report. "These requested repairs are merely an attempt to provide a positive, respectful and safe environment by which Town employees must conduct business. Even in the short term these urgent repairs will reduce some liability risks and lower energy costs."

The written report includes several photos depicting just how much the current building is deteriorating.

"Long term continued maintenance and repair of the facility will become more costly by diverting funds into a facility that must be replaced," the report reads. "Additionally, there is simply not enough room in our current building."

Police station

Since the complex was built in 1962, Police Chief DeLuca reports that his department has grown by 400 percent.

"Due to the growth of the department, we currently have two employees that utilizes the utility closet as an office," DeLuca wrote. "The closet is 5x14, which is smaller than a jail cell."

Other problems on the police side of the complex include:

Retooling the finance department

Coughlin presents plans to reorganize

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"The town benefits from a strong town manager statute and I am prepared to take decisive action to overhaul the town's financial department."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

Following finance director John Stanbrook's recent resignation, the town's finance department is trying to soldier on despite the difficulties. The department was already in the middle of a major reorganization when Stanbrook announced his departure, including a new financial software implementation that has been underway for the past year.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin presented an update on town finances, along with a revised organizational chart for the finance department, to the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Oct. 18.

Coughlin reported that he and Stanbrook, along with independent accountant Eric Kinsherf and Dan Sullivan of the firm Sullivan and Rogers, all appeared before the Advisory Committee last Tuesday to solicit transfers from the reserve fund to pay for Kinsherf to act as the interim town accountant/finance director, while Sullivan and an assistant from his firm will perform the treasurer/collector's role. Kinsherf previously fulfilled the role of interim town accountant/finance director after Mike Buckley left and before Stanbrook started this past February. Both accountants essentially plan to work to close the books from fiscal year 2011 in order to meet the Department of Revenue's strident Nov. 22 deadline to submit the balance sheet and have free cash certified in time for the Dec. 5 special Town Meeting.

The Advisory Committee voted to approve the transfer of $30,000 to Kinsherf and $24,000 to Sullivan and Rogers.

Reorganization

Coughlin also provided the selectmen with a reorganization chart (see sidebar) during Tuesday night's meeting, letting the board know that he submitted the same documents to the DOR's Technical Assistance Bureau.

"I took it upon myself to contact [them]," Coughlin said at the meeting, adding that he spoke with branch chief Rick Kingsley.

"He agrees on increasing the manpower in each office by one full-time employee [each]," Coughlin explained.

Kingsley, Coughlin said, is also in favor of the town manager's proposed reorganization.

"He said it made sense, given the audit."

Coughlin also shared his chart with Selectman Paul Carlson, who reviewed it over the weekend and made a few revisions. Carlson was unable to attend Tuesday's board meeting.

The new chart, Coughlin said, "reflects the real authority of water/sewer to be one of joint management."

Coughlin further told the board that he believes Cohasset would benefit from a full financial management review. This suggestion was met with some contention. Coughlin asked the board to vote on the matter nevertheless.

"It looks like we're not in the shape to do that," Selectman Leland Jenkins said of the report.

Selectman Diane Kennedy wondered if the reorganization chart was premature. "I don't know if we're ready to

Bone marrow registry drive Saturday

Michael Meallo, a native of Cohasset and local landscaper (Meallo Landscaping) was recently diagnosed with myelodysplastic syndrome (MDS), sometimes referred to as "smoldering leukemia." You may know his parents, Paula and Albert, or his brother and sister, Greg and Melissa. Mike and his wife Jennifer have two children, Katharine Hannah and Max.

Mike's doctor believes a bone marrow transplant could successfully treat his disease, but a donor must be found, and time is very important. Without a donor, there is no other solution.

Coincidentally, there is a drive to join the marrow registry and be tested at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 22, at Daddy's Beach Club, 280 Nantasket Ave, Hull. People can also participate in the Walk/Run event that begins at 8a.m. at Hull High School.

Getting tested is easy. By getting tested, you become a member of the Be the Match Registry and could be a match for a patient in critical need.

For more information about the event and/or being tested please go to:www.bethematchfoundation.org/goto/teammeallo.

Town-wide flu clinic Saturday

Cohasset Board of Health will sponsor a town wide flu clinic from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 22, in the auditorium at Cohasset Town Hall. This clinic is for any Cohasset resident older than age 9. Remember to bring health insurance cards as the town will be attempting to bill health insurances for reimbursement of the vaccine.

This year, the Town of Cohasset has had their state supplied flu vaccine allocation cut from 800 doses to 200 doses. Therefore the Board of Health has purchased 600 doses of flu vaccine in order to have an adequate supply for residents. Remember to wear a short-sleeved shirt.

Hedlund gets flak over casino bill amendment

Democrat charges senator with conflict of interest

By Ed Baker
ebaker@wickedlocal.com

The state election season is more than a year away, but the race between Republican State Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth and potential Democratic opponent Steve May is heating up.

May said Hedlund's support for an amendment to a casino bill lifting the 1984 ban on the serving of discounted and free alcoholic beverages in bars violates the state's conflict of interest laws because the senator is co-owner of the Four Square restaurant, a pub-style eatery in Weymouth Landing.

"I believe he is personally enriching himself," May said. "He introduced the amendment to the bill. He championed it on the floor of the Senate."

Hedlund — who opposes the casino plan — dismissed May's claim and stated the proposed amendment would level the playing field between restaurants and casinos to sell liquor to customers.

"I do not blame Mr. May for seeking publicity for his fledging campaign, but it is clear that as someone with no private sector background he was confused by this non-issue," Hedlund stated. "The bottom line is that Mr. May's complaint is self-serving and frivolous. It should be dismissed."

The Senate approved the amendment by a 25-13 vote last week, although Hedlund did not vote on the final Senate version of the casino bill.

"His abstention from the vote is irrelevant," May said. "The vote that mattered was when the amendment got added to the casino bill."

May was not the only one upset about the amendment. Hedlund got some flak from angry callers on his WATD radio show on Monday night.

Also, Mark Cronin staged a one-man protest outside Hedlund's restaurant. Cronin, the victim of a drunken driver, has worn a prosthetic leg since the accident.

The 44-year-old Weymouth resident is puzzled by Hedlund's amendment because Hedlund has been a staunch supporter of tough drunken-driving laws — notably as one of the main sponsors of Melanie's Law.

"I understand where he's coming from," Cronin said of Hedlund's argument that business rules should be equal. "But what does a casino in western Massachusetts have to do with a bar in Weymouth?"

One of those critics is Erin Brenton of Kingston, whose family has been directly affected by drunken driving. Brenton and her sister, Heather Woods, then 6 and 9 years old, were run down by a drunken driver in 1982. Heather was killed.

Brenton said that she was "shocked" when she heard about Hedlund's amendment.

Mark Cronin outside state Sen. Robert Hedlund's Four Square Restaurant in Weymouth Landing where he was moved to stage a one-man protest after Hedlund offered a successful casino bill amendment that would allow restaurants and bars to operate under the same rules as casinos. STAFF PHOTO/GREGG DERR

"To have Hedlund, an advocate of Melanie's Law, bring this amendment forward is truly disturbing to me," she said. "How could he in his heart-of-hearts do that? He wants to be commended on his actions for Melanie's Law but is he going to hold the same responsibility for his actions for condoning 'binge drinking'."

Brenton said she plans to attend the hearing on the issue Thursday, Oct. 27 at the State House and with the help of friends has organized a letter writing campaign.

May stated that Hedlund would reap profits at his restaurant under the proposed amendment if Gov. Deval Patrick approves the bill.

"Hedlund derives a portion of his personal income from the restaurant's gross receipts," May stated in a press release. "Creating an environment where more alcohol is sold will result in Hedlund enriching himself personally. Benefiting personally from an action taken by the Legislature creates a clear conflict of interest."

Hedlund said it is unfortunate that anyone would consider operating a business and creating jobs to be a liability to the legislative process.

In addition to consulting with the Senate counsel, Hedlund said he filed a disclosure with the State Ethics Commission prior to filing the amendment and acknowledged he is a non-managing partner of the Four Square.

"I have always stood up for what I believe in," Hedlund said. "I have always been an active participant in Senate deliberations and will continue to do so."

Hedlund, who said that he has publicly said his restaurant would not be offering any free drinks, says his aim is to protect small businesses such as restaurants and theaters, which, in other states, have suffered when casinos open.

Hedlund said Melanie's Law has done far more to reduce drunken-driving arrests and fatalities than the happy-hour legislation. Melanie's Law was passed in 2005, and is named for Melanie Powell, a Marshfield girl who was struck and killed by a drunk driver. Hedlund also supports requiring interlock ignition devices for first-time, convicted drunken drivers.

Hedlund's amendment passed the Senate but isn't in the House version of the casino bill. The two versions must now be reconciled in a conference committee before Gov. Deval Patrick can sign it.

Lane Lambert of the Patriot Ledger and Dana Forsthye of the Pembroke Mariner contributed to this report.

POLICE BEAT

Honda totaled by tractor-trailer truck

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 7:26 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 11), police responded to a motor vehicle crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 52-year-old Marshfield woman in a 2010 Honda Accord reported colliding with an International Tractor Trailer truck from Stop & Shop. She said the truck continued down Route 3A. Police said both vehicles were headed south when the Honda attempted to pass the truck on the right just past Shaw's before the lanes merge. The Honda got caught under the back tires of the truck that forced the car off the road. Police said the Honda was totaled. Police were able to track down the driver of the truck, a 53-year-old New Bedford man, in Freetown. Freetown police viewed the damage to the rear of the tractor-trailer unit that was consistent with the accident.

Police said the driver of the truck, which is 60 feet long, said he did not realize there had been an accident.

The truck driver was charged with leaving the scene of an accident and the Honda driver was cited for passing on the right. No one was injured.

MV crashes

• At 7:15 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 12) there was a two-car accident on Margin Court. Police said a 66-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2009 Ford Escape had apparently attempted to turn around to exit Margin Court when she struck a 1998 Mazda, operated by a 17-year-old Scituate girl. The Mazda, which was traveling straight ahead on Margin Court, was towed. There were no apparent injuries and neither operator was cited, police said.

• At 1:06 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 14), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at Beechwood Street. Police said a 2004 Toyota 4Runner, operated by a 51-year-old Wakefield man, was headed north in the lane closest to Leo's Gulf Station. A 2002 Chevrolet Trailblazer, operated by a 24-year-old Cohasset woman, was headed south when she attempted to make a left onto Beechwood Street colliding with the 4Runner that was traveling straight through the intersection, police said. Both vehicles were towed. The operator of the Trailblazer and her passenger, a one-year-old baby, were transported to the hospital with bumps and bruises, police said. The 24-year-old was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Harassment

Last week a 19-year-old woman, who works in town, reported to police that a coworker, a 51-year-old Hull man, was harassing her. Police said she had reported the alleged harassment to her employer who was taking action but also wanted to file the complaint with the police department. Police said the alleged harassment involved some physical contact such as rubbing her back.

Erratic operation

Police observed the operator of a box truck weaving and pulled the vehicle over last week. The 24-year-old operator from Scituate appeared to be impaired in some fashion but not from alcohol. Police did not have a drug recognition expert they contacted the man's father and turned the truck over to him.

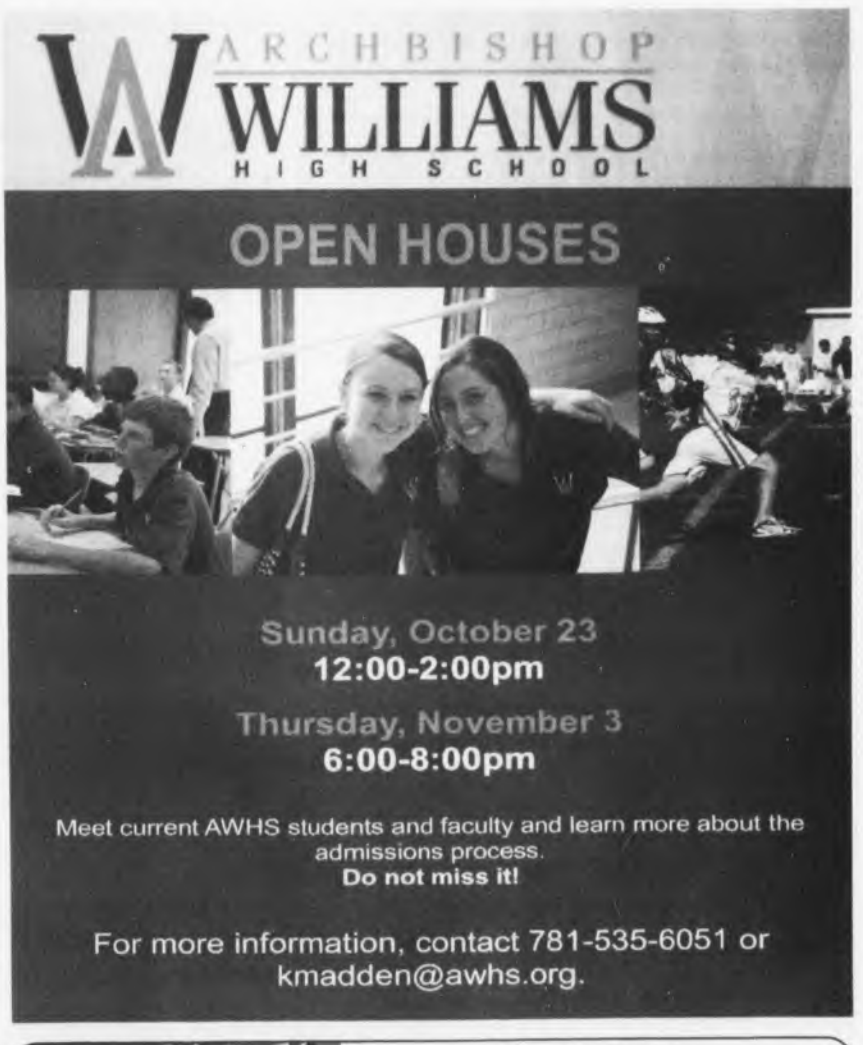
Snake

The animal control officer, Paul Murphy, responded to a report from a River Road resident that there was a snake in his basement last week. Murphy successfully removed the snake.

Wall damage

Reported damage to a wall in an alley off Depot Court where dumpsters are located turned out to be about a year old and caused by a Dumpster being dropped at the wrong angle hitting the wall during a snowstorm, police said. The landlord of the building, a 78-year-old Mashpee man, recently saw the damage apparently for the first time and reported it. Police talked to the business owners who explained what had happened during a storm last winter and the landlord was satisfied with that explanation.

Lost driver



Police stopped a 2009 Mercury Marquis, operated by an 82-year-old Stoughton man, at 7:32 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 15) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). As it turned out the man was lost and was trying to read the signage in the dark. Police pointed him in the right direction.

Teens charged

Police arrested three Scituate teenage boys for being minors in possession of alcohol at 10:04 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 15) on Border Street. An officer on patrol observed a blue 1997 Chevrolet Lumina run the stop sign in front of the American Legion Post at Summer and Border streets and followed the car down Border Street. The officer pulled the car over. Inside the car were a 24-pack of beer and a large bottle of Captain Morgan rum. The officer confirmed that all three were underage and placed them under arrest. Police said the boys had just picked up the alcohol but would not say where. The operator, 19, was also cited for failure to stop at a stop sign.

Septic & sewer loans: What you need to know

• Financial assistance for community septic repair and sewer hookup is now available through the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust (MWPAT) program. This program has loaned $48.7 million since 1997, assisting over 4,700 homeowners in the state.
• The Old Colony Planning Council (OCPC) has been hired to manage the application process, the first part of the program. OCPC manages loan programs for 30 towns along the South Shore, from Pembroke to Wareham.
• "Funds are in place in order for everyone to take advantage" of the program, said Jane Linhares, OCPC's program administrator. "It's a great program with a low interest percentage to pay back over 20 years."

How does the program work?
• Upon receiving a homeowner's application, OCPC will contact the town treasurer to assure there are no outstanding monies/taxes due to the town.
• A betterment lien is prepared and signed before funds are released to the homeowner.
• If the application is for a septic repair, the homeowner must hire an engineer to make a proposal regarding the work that will be required. No engineering report is required for sewer hookup.
• Three work proposals for installment of the septic plan are required. The homeowner is not required to take the lowest bid; one proposal is required for sewer hookup.
• OCPC requests money from the treasurer for payments as work progresses. These include a deposit and final payment for engineering plans (for septic repairs), and for deposits and final payment for the contractor. Final payment is authorized only after all required inspections are successfully completed.
• All payments are released jointly to the engineer/contractor and homeowner.
• The betterment lien is filed at the Registry of Deeds. The filing fee (currently $77) is paid by the homeowner and is not part of the betterment loan. This ends the involvement of the OCPC for the homeowner.
• The Town of Cohasset collects the loan as a betterment on the homeowner's tax bill, amortized over 20 years at a 2 percent interest rate.
• Any betterment lien remaining at the point of a house sale must be paid and cannot be passed to the next owner.
• Yearly repayment by Cohasset to the MWPAT begins in the second year of the program. This will enable us to accumulate a year of payments, including 2 percent interest, before repayment begins.

What is the application process?
The homeowner must prepare an application that includes a copy of their property deed and tax bills. The applicant will pay a $650 fee for a septic loan and $350 for a sewer hookup loan, which will be paid to the OCPC and are not covered by the loan. Applications are processed on a first-come, first-serve basis. Jane Linhares of the OCPC has been on-hand at Town Hall to help residents with their loan packets.

How much will this program cost the citizens of Cohasset?
There is no cost to any citizen, except for those who are participants in the loan process. Homeowners will pay 2 percent on the loan through a betterment charge over 20 years.

What will this cost the town?
The town has borrowed $3 million from the state in a revolving fund, which is the amount available to loan out to the people of Cohasset. The town also received a one-time $15,000 grant to cover the program's startup costs. The cost to the town is for the work of the town treasurer in setting up the betterment collection fee on the tax bill and the issuances of the monies from the fund; this is a minimal task and should not require additional personnel. Linhares has been working with directly with assistant treasurer/collector Linda Litchfield and the Cohasset Board of Health to administer the applications.
According to the Cohasset Board of Health, the town's finance director John Stanbrook reported that this fund is not considered as a debt issue in financial ratings for the town. The bonding agency for the town stated that this program should have no impact on our bond rating. Since the program is self-supporting, financial and bond rating agencies don't consider this program as a concern.

What happens if you default on my loan?
The Town of Cohasset would use the funds in the account to pay the state for the loan, and a municipal lien would be placed on the home for these costs. The lien is collected at the time of the home sale with an additional 14 to 16 percent interest charge. Municipal liens must be paid ahead of any other debt. There is no home in Cohasset that is valued less than the cost of these loans, so there is a guarantee of payment back to the town.

Isn't $3 million too much to borrow?
"The money is loaned to the town at zero interest," said Tara Tradd of the Board of Health. The town collects the 2 percent interest in order to keep the program going. "There is only a problem if people default and start missing payments," which is not something the board anticipates happening in Cohasset. There is no penalty if the town uses less than the approved borrowing amount and no interest is charged. Once the sewer hookups are done, the board anticipates requesting less money in future funding requests to continue aiding septic repairs. Town Meeting approval must occur before any request for money is made to the state.

How can I apply?
Linhares has already sent out around 50 applications since September. Anyone interested in the program, or who may need help filling out an application, can call her directly at the OCPC: 508-583-1833.

You can help the Food Pantry

Do you have a garden? Fresh vegetables may be left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m.

Other needs include coffee, juice, clam chowder, corned beef hash, mayonnaise, jelly/jam, canned fruit , spaghetti sauce, applesauce, maple syrup, cereal, dish and laundry detergent, toothpaste/toothbrushes and bar soap.

Donations can be dropped off at the rear entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays, at Stop & Shop or at local churches on Sundays. Donations may also be left at the St. Anthony Parish Center, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3.m.

To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call.

Brush chipping and paint collection day

Residential brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 29. No trees over 10 inches in diameter. No stumps, firewood, briars or weeds. No contractors.

Final 2011 paint collection day will take place from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 29. Oil-based paint will be accepted at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Water Dept. to begin shut-offs

Peter DeCaprio, chairman of the Water Commission, submitted the following to the Cohasset Mariner:

"At its most recent meeting, the Water Commission voted unanimously to begin the process of shutting off customers for non-payment. We will begin with the largest outstanding balances first. Any customer more than 30 days overdue will be at risk to shut off. At this point, we are coordinating with the town treasurer to ascertain the status of outstanding balances. Once we confirm an outstanding balance exists, we will notify those customers via registered mail. Customers will then have three days to pay in full

"In addition, the commission voted unanimously to also implement a $350 shut off fee for the reinstatement of water service. Water service will not be reestablished without proper receipt from the property owner that the bill has been paid in full, and the fee of $350.00 paid directly to the Water Department."

GIMME SHELTER

Carmel is a real cutie

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Carmel. Carmel is an adorable black, baby kitten. She has three sisters and two brothers and they all look alike.

They are all playful, love to cuddle and sit on laps. They purr a lot and have been in a foster home with a very indulgent foster Mom. They are so sweet that she hates to part with them, but will happily let them go to feline loving families. HSAR will give preference to those who adopt two. They look so much alike that HSAR bought special gel to dot the top of their heads with different colors so they could be told apart.

Now is the "purrfect" time to adopt that cat or kitten you've been waiting for. HSAR has a shelter filled with adoptable felines, so please check out their website at www.hsar.org to view some of the available cats and kittens.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

HSAR thanks the many people who generously donate to their cause. They couldn't do it without you!

HSAR's 2012 Kittendales Calendar is now available. Joanne Berman, and her sister, Susan Berman Davis, have donated their time and talent to this collectible and unique calendar. It makes a great holiday gift. All the kittens are from HSAR. It's a great combo of adorable kittens and fine-tuned male physiques.

AROUND TOWN

Help Mike, join bone marrow donor registry

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Positive thoughts

Hello Cohasset, how are you all doing? The fall weather is in full swing, the colors on the trees are BEAUTIFUL and this is a great time in the season to think about life, love and laughter. So many are dealing with issues from medical ones with family/friends, personal home issues and also, work-related issues and financial strains as well. Make sure to take the time for yourself and take a nice walk or run and use the time to reflect and think about all of these things and then, take the time to try to be positive and share those thoughts with others. The power of positive thoughts goes a long, long way! Have a great week Cohasset.

Helping Mike

I wanted to start the column this week with a request from a local family that so many of us know and to see if you can take the time to help Michael or others in need. Michael Meallo desperately needs a marrow donor match. Mike was recently diagnosed with Myelodysplastic Syndrome (MDS), sometimes referred to as "Smoldering Leukemia." Michael's doctors have told him a stem cell transplant is his best chance to survive. Mike is married to Jennifer and together they have two beautiful children, Katharine Hannah and Max. Michael's family is still in the area including his parents Paula and Albert and his siblings Greg and Melissa. You may have seen his landscaping trucks around town or know Michael as a past youth football coach. Please join his family and friends in support of Michael and others like him. Elizabeth Naylor is a local transplant recipient who is celebrating two years of successful health by having a walk/run Saturday Oct. 22nd!

She has graciously extended her walk/run to include Michael and his supportive friends, family and community. If you are interested in being tested to see if you match Michael or someone like him please support the run/walk. After the walk/run come to Daddy's Beach Club to register as a possible marrow donor. Together you can save Mike's life or someone like him. Have you ever wondered what it would be like to save someone's life? A simple cheek swab is all that is needed to determine if you could be the one to save one of the thousands of patients in need of a bone marrow transplant. You'll only be contacted if you're a match for someone in need. To register for the walk/run, come to the Hull High School on Saturday, Oct. 22 at 8 am to register. Also on this day, you can head to Daddy's Beach Club on Nantasket Beach starting at 10 am at 280 Nantasket Ave to join the Be The Match Registry. Please visit Mike's Be The Match Team Page for more information at: www.bethematchfoundation.org/goto/teammeallo.

On stage

Get ready to put these dates in your calendar and line up those babysitters NOW! Cohasset Dramatic Club's (CDC) will present Wendy Wasserstein's award-winning comedy The Sisters Rosensweig from Nov. 4 – 13 at Town Hall! For more please see page 4 of this week's Mariner!

Cabaret

Don't miss this year's Cabaret on Nov. 4 & 5! For more (including photos) see page 19 of this week's issue! Tickets are on sale now and cost $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at South Shore Community Center. Call 781-413-7540 for more information.

Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.

Pizza!

When you purchase pizza from Papa Gino's on Thursday, Oct. 27 from 4-9 p.m., 20 percent of the proceeds will go directly to support arts programs at Cohasset Middle High School. Flyers must be presented when you pick up your order. You can download a flyer from the Cohasset Arts Boosters Facebook page, or ask a MS/HS art department teacher. Flyers have also been sent home with elementary school students so check those backpacks! Please support Cohasset Arts by treating yourself at Papa Gino's of Cohasset.

Halloween parade

Oh my gosh, this event is SO much fun and looked forward to each year. The South Shore Community Center Nursery School announces that the Halloween Fair will be held on the common on Sunday, Oct. 23rd from 2-4 p.m. There will be a Costume Parade at 1:45p.m. Children should meet on the Common and parade around the pond with our favorite witch! Bring the family and enjoy games, slides, hayrides, and prizes. There will be raffles and a delicious Bake Sale! Proceeds benefit the Nardo Scholarship, The Nursery School Enrichment Fund and the Nursery School Playground Fund.

Difference Day

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and make a difference at the same time. This year the annual PSO-sponsored Make A Difference Days is the weekend of Nov. 5th & 6th. This event pairs volunteers with seniors to assist with general fall clean-up (i.e. raking and disposing of leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.). This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together while fostering community pride and spirit. Families, students and scout groups welcome! If you are interested in volunteering contact: Kelli Gildea 383-6529 or at ckgildea@verizon.net. If you would like assistance with general fall clean-up contact: Carol Barrett at Cohasset Elder Affairs at 383-9112.

Gridironfest

The Gridiron is hosting "Gridironfest" at Atlantica on Saturday, Oct. 29th to raise money for the Cohasset High School football program. From 7:30 to 11:30 the Gridiron will host this first annual event with raffle prizes, appetizers, music and a cash bar. Tickets are $25 for the function. For further information please call Lillian Curley at 781-383-0695.

That s the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your info no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Q&A WITH MARK CIRONE

Cohasset Jewelers is still in the fight

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

While companies small and large are doing their part to raise money and awareness for breast cancer, many local businesses are also doing what they can to aid the fight.

Mark Cirone, owner and president of Cohasset Jewelers, has contributed a great deal to breast cancer charities over the years. He has personal experience with the disease; his wife, Sharon, is a stage IV survivor. Cirone's store sells a pink ribbon pin, which Cirone wears daily, and has partnered with various companies to sell "pink" merchandise and donate portions of proceeds to the cause. To date, sales of the pin alone have allowed Cohasset Jewelers to donate over $65,000 to breast cancer research.

This month, Cohasset Jewelers is selling a collection of pink Vera Bradley bags featuring a special breast cancer logo. Vera Bradley donates 10 percent of the sale price to breast cancer charities. Cirone said that adding these bags to his store was "an easy decision," given his support for the breast cancer cause.

The Mariner caught up with Cirone to discuss his involvement in the battle against breast cancer, both as a businessman and a personal advocate.

The breast cancer cause is near and dear to your heart, particularly because of what your wife Sharon has had to endure. Could you share a little more about her and her fight?

Sharon has been a stage IV survivor for just over 10 years. She's currently on two chemotherapy regimens. Although she no longer drives, she deals with the disease with an unimaginable grace and dignity.

You've said that you wear your pink ribbon pin as a daily reminder. Why do you believe it's important for folks to think about this cause year round, not just during breast cancer awareness month?

I wear the pin to remind others that the fight is far from over. We've accomplished a lot. Women are surviving longer with advanced stage disease, adjuvant therapies are responsible for non-recurrence (non-recurrence=cure), and we're using targeted, less invasive therapies for newly diagnosed patients. Unfortunately, though, we're diagnosing almost 300,000 new cases and 40,000 American women perish from BC [breast cancer] on a yearly basis. Numbers that are daunting, in my opinion, and why we can't limit the fight to just one month a year!

You know the Mariner papers contribute to the cause as well, partnering with the Susan G. Komen Foundation and printing a pink paper.

I think it's wonderful that the Mariner has gotten involved with the cause. First, to raise awareness by the pink paper and articles concerning BC in each local community and secondly, by making a substantial donation from advertising sales to the cause. We can only rid our world of cancer by raising the monies for research and education, and every dollar towards that goal is hugely important!

SEE JEWELERS, 7

Your store has launched several awareness projects over the years, and you've raised a good deal for the cause. What is your latest project? Is the Vera Bradley sale/fundraising part of that?

The latest project is twofold. Vera Bradley is the newest line we're selling to promote awareness and raise monies for BC research. They are very committed to the cause and it was a natural fit for us to support them. We've also re-designed our signature BC pin and now offer it in sterling silver at a reduced price.

How much does the pin cost, and how much of the proceeds are donated to the cause?

We sell the pin in two versions. The 14K pin costs $275 and the Sterling silver pin is just $145. 100 percent of the proceeds from both of these pins is donated to BC research, and to date we've donated just over $65,000.

Previously, you told the Mariner that you believe it's just as crucial for men to be involved in the cause as women. How has your store's stance on the cause enabled you to reach out to other businessmen?

These are our wives, mothers, daughters and sisters. Breast cancer affects men as caregivers and support providers, and even sometimes as patients. It's going to take a prolonged joint effort of both men and women to provide the resources needed to win the battle. It's all about the funds needed to do research. We've come a log way in the last 15 years, but still have a ways to go if we're ever going to eradicate BC as a life threatening disease. Yes, I've reached out to other businessmen, and there are many in our community that support the effort and contribute to the fight.

How would you encourage others to get involved today?

It's easy to get involved. If you don't have time, then people can simply make a donation to one of the many BC charities. Two of my favorites are Komen for the Cure and The Breast Cancer Research Foundation. Our current benefactor is the South Shore Hospital's New Cancer Center. We think it's hugely important to support local causes as well as the aforementioned national causes.

If you have the time, then there are a bevy of things one could do to support the patients and families going through treatment. The hospitals and cancer support centers have a long list of ways to contribute in that manner.

What inspires you to keep fighting for a cure?

Frankly, I've seen up close and personal the affects BC can have on a family. We've lived with this disease for over 16 years. My daughter has not known her mother when she wasn't ill. The possibility of being part of a solution that would eliminate a similar scenario in the future is a huge motivation. I'd also like to believe through my efforts, my daughter will never face the same issues that her mom has had to face.

Cohasset resident elected president of the MBA

In addition, Campbell organizes and leads his firm's pro bono project, educating parents, students, and school administrators about civil and criminal laws applicable to underage drinking in private homes.

Cohasset resident Richard P. Campbell has been elected president of the Massachusetts Bar Association for its 2011-12 year. He took office on Sept. 1. Campbell is the founder and chairman of Campbell, Campbell, Edwards & Conroy PC in Boston, a nationally recognized firm of trial lawyers who primarily represent Fortune 100 corporations in multi-district litigation, class actions, aviation disasters, mass torts, toxic tort, product liability, and major commercial disputes. He is one of seven national trial counsels for Caterpillar, Inc. and currently serves as lead counsel for one of the commercial airlines in the 9-11 litigation pending in federal court in New York City.

In addition, Campbell organizes and leads his firm's pro bono project, educating parents, students, and school administrators about civil and criminal laws applicable to underage drinking in private homes.

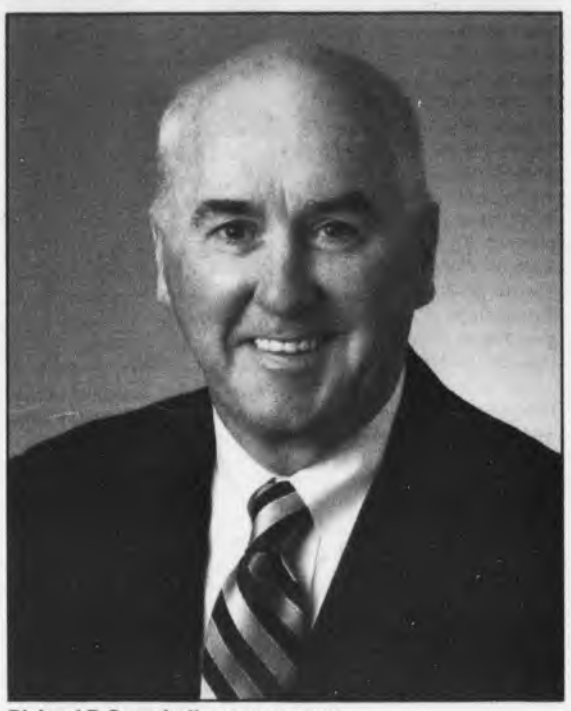
Campbell takes office at a time of great challenge to the bench and bar. As a result of severe underfunding, the Supreme Judicial Court ordered the closure of courthouses and announced forced layoffs and furloughs. The SJC also served notice on the governor and Legislature to stop appointing new judges and clerks due to fiscal restraints. With regard to lawyers in practice, 2011 marks at least the fourth consecutive year where new law school graduates face bleak prospects of securing jobs.

Campbell is committed to educating the public at-large on the implications of underfunding the judicial system to the quality of their lives in the commonwealth.

"We take the rule of law for granted. We never ask ourselves what our individual lives would be like if the rule of law was ignored, unenforced, or non-existent. Images from Syria, Libya and Somalia show us the ugly face of lawlessness. Murder is common in Ciudad Juarez, barely across the Texas border. Kidnappings for ransoms are now said to be common in southern Arizona," Campbell said. "By underfunding the justice system, the public at-large puts at risk the way in which they live their lives and with it their hopes and dreams for themselves and their children and grandchildren."

Campbell expressed particular concern for the erosion of the rule of law in cities like Lawrence, Brockton, New Bedford, and Fall River.

"It is here, in the Gateway Cities, that the rule of law is tested every day, whether by violent crime, or by corruption, or by unsafe living conditions," Campbell said. "Closed courthouses, unsafe courthouses, and dysfunctional courthouses that serve Gateway Cities breed contempt for the law and diminish our collective safety and security statewide."



With regard to glut of lawyers produced by the nine law schools in the state, Campbell has committed the Massachusetts Bar Association to action.

"Many individuals in this debt ridden, lost generation of recent law school graduates are turning to solo practice without either prior experience or access to mentors," Campbell said. "Practical problems ensue. Clients are poorly served; incivility abounds; established practitioners experience a decline in revenue coupled with an increase in transactional expenses."

A past MBA secretary, vice president and president-elect, Campbell chaired the MBA's Peremptory Challenges Task Force and has served on the MBA's governing body, the House of Delegates, for more than seven years; on the Criminal Justice Section Council for five years; and currently as a Massachusetts Bar Foundation trustee and Oliver Wendell Holmes Fellow.

Campbell is a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. Campbell is also a past chair of the 34,000-member Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section of the American Bar Association. Campbell served seven years as the Chair of the Board of Overseers for Boston College Law School.

In 1995, Boston College Law School honored Campbell with its highest award for dedication to the law the Founder's Medal. In 2009, the ABA Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section (TIPS) honored Campbell with the Andrew C. Hecker Memorial Award, in recognition for his leadership, outreach, enthusiasm, professionalism and pride in TIPS.

Autumn changes at Atlantica

Restaurant gets ready for fall and winter

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As Cohasset transitions from summer to fall, the Atlantica is switching up its menu, events and décor to accommodate the change in season. New executive chef Garry Payne is excited to get these changes underway. Payne, who hails from Michigan and has held executive chef positions in Boston, Worcester and Framingham, is new to the South Shore. He started his position as Atlantica's executive chef this past March.

"We rolled out a relatively new menu two weeks ago," said Payne (see sidebar). "I try to think outside the box" with the food offerings, the chef explained. "I want it to be fun and exciting."

While folks flock to the harbor side restaurant in the summer, sitting outside during lunch at the Olde Salt House, Payne hopes to draw the crowds in with comfort food in the winter. Payne also plans to add couches around the bar to contribute to a cozy atmosphere and "warm things up."

Now that the spring and summer wedding season has come and gone, Payne said that he is free to focus less on the banquet side of the business and more on the Atlantica side. The chef hopes to offer wine dinners and cooking classes during the winter months.

New fall promotions are also underway, including $1 oysters on Wednesday nights and $2 tapas on Thursdays. The new tapas selection will act as a preview for the new restaurant Payne plans to unveil this coming spring.

"It's going to be a tapas-style venue outside by the water," said Payne. The offering will be a "typical [Spanish] tapas menu," but will also feature "regional, local food." Some of Payne's tapas dishes have an Asian flair to them, the chef explained. "There's an Asian meets southwestern flair going on there."

"In general, I cook healthy, local, fresh, seasonal cuisine," the chef said, adding that one thing he likes about working at the Atlantica is working right on the water ("What other chef has this view to work with?") and enjoying lobster caught fresh by Rick Borrow in the Diana Too lobster boat in the harbor.

When customers order the lobster, Payne said, they are "literally eating lobster caught that day."

To complement the cooler months, the Atlantica is offering "home style" cooking on Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday nights, featuring dishes like meatloaf with garlic mashed potatoes and a wild mushroom sauce and a turkey dinner "with all the fixings." Sundays will feature spaghetti in meatballs with Chef Payne's "world-famous oversized meatballs" made of veal, beef and pork.

The Atlantica has been extensively promoting its new offerings on Facebook, using the social networking site to connect with clientele. Photos have been posted to remind customers about oyster night and the restaurant's big Sunday brunch and Bloody Mary bar.

Payne was inspired by time he spent as the banquet chef in the Bristol Lounge at the Four Seasons in Boston, where he said big brunches are popular.

The Sunday brunch costs $20 and features crepes and omelets made to order; a carving station with two different kinds of roasted meat; five to six different prepped salads to choose from; bagels, danishes, muffins, poached salmon and more.

"It's quite a spread," Payne said.

The Bloody Mary bar consists of 20 or more different items – hot sauces, peppers, and various stuff olives – allowing customers to mix their own cocktails.

For the younger set, "We've also introduced a soft serve ice cream and yogurt bar with all the toppings you can imagine," said Payne.

To promote the brunch, the restaurant has been handing out $5-off coupons around town. Payne said that they are also coming out with a Groupon deal for lunch.

Payne, who began working as the Atlantica's executive chef around six months ago, said that he was excited to come onboard and "give the place a facelift."

The chef also complimented Atlantica owner/operator Peter Roy and director of operators Joe Campbell, saying they have "a make it happen kind of attitude."

They have certainly given Payne free reign to implement all of these changes.

"Everyone is excited with a new chef," said Payne. "There's a new burst off energy."

Grandparent scam alert

The last time we wrote about the infamous "grandparent scam" that preys on senior citizens nationwide was back in June of 2010.

However, the scam has resurfaced locally. This week in Hingham a 94-year-old grandmother almost became a victim of the scam.

The Hingham grandmother was on the phone with a caller who said he was her "oldest" grandson, had been in an accident in San Diego after leaving a wedding, had champagne on his breath, was arrested and needed money to get out of jail and pay for the damages to the car. He asked that she not tell his parents.

Fortunately, the grandmother's son arrived at her house while she was still on the phone. The son overheard some of the conversation and immediately recognized that it was a scam and they reported the call to police.

The scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from a supposed grandchild, who typically explains that he is traveling and has been arrested or involved in an auto accident and needs the grandparent to wire money to post bail or pay for damages — usually amounting to a few thousand dollars.

It is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

If someone is scammed or thinks there is an attempted scam – they should notify the police.

Here are some other examples:

• In the spring of 2010, an 80-year-old Cohasset grandfather — who got a call from a young man saying he was his grandson, was in trouble in Spain and wanted money wired to him via Western Union — became suspicious. He asked the caller if he was his grandson Matt and the caller said he was. Then the grandfather asked for the caller's date of birth. The caller then swore at him and hung up the phone, police said.

• In April of 2009, a Cohasset grandmother fell victim to a scam. She reported the incident to police after reading about the scam in the Mariner. She sent $4,000 to the caller, whom she thought was her grandson.

• Also in 2010, a 72-year-old Cohasset grandmother almost lost nearly $3,000 in the "grandparent scam." She received a phone call from a man, who said he was in Canada and claimed to be her grandson. The caller said he was in trouble and was crying. Before she could question him further another man took the phone that said he was a police officer. He explained that her grandson was not in trouble but his friends were and $2700 was needed right away to pay for the bond.

The Cohasset woman drove to Stop & Shop and completed a cash transaction to have the money wired to Canada. After leaving Stop & Shop, she drove to the police station to report the incident. The officer handling the matter recognized the scam right away and called Stop & Shop, which was able to stop the transaction.

• Police said a senior citizen in Scituate also fell victim to one of these scams and wired $2,500 to Canada from a supermarket in Cohasset.

HEALTH NOTES

Free town-wide flu clinic Saturday

STEVE BOBO

Town-wide Flu Clinic — The Board of Health has scheduled a town-wide flu clinic at the Town Hall on Oct. 22 from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. The National Center for Disease Control at Atlanta publishes statistics about flu and a host of other health topics. Much of the data below is from that source.

The town nurse has flu shots which are covered by Medicare and private insurance. All flu shots are free.

On average, 1 out of 5 Americans suffer from influenza every year. In addition, influenza and its related complications result in approximately 226,000 hospitalizations in the US each year. Depending on virus severity during the influenza season, nationally, deaths can range from 3000 to a recorded high of about 49,000 people in the worst recent year. Albany, Fort Wayne, Charleston, Chattanooga, and Roanoke were the cities affected the most.

We all are at risk for contracting influenza. The results for some will be lost work or school days. But for those at highest risk, the results can be more serious — leading to hospitalization and more health issues. The best way to prevent influenza is with an annual flu shot. Combined with pneumonia, influenza is the nation's eighth leading cause of death. Influenza viruses spread in respiratory droplets caused by coughing and sneezing. They usually spread from person to person, though sometimes people become infected by touching something contaminated with the influenza virus and then touching their mouth, eyes, or nose. It's therefore imperative to get a shot.

The Epidemiology and Prevention Branch in the Influenza Division at CDC collects, compiles and analyzes information on influenza activity year round in the United States and produces FluView, a weekly influenza surveillance report, from October through mid-May. The U.S. influenza surveillance system is a collaborative effort between CDC and its many partners in state, local, and territorial health departments, public health and clinical laboratories, vital statistics offices, healthcare providers, clinics, and emergency departments. Information in five categories is collected from eight different data sources that allow CDC to:

• Find out when and where influenza activity is occurring

• Track influenza-related illness

• Determine what influenza viruses are circulating

• Detect changes in influenza viruses

• Measure the impact influenza is having on deaths in the United States

• These statistics are published by the CDC and sent to most health offices.

We seem to have less time and opportunity for the small things like flu shots, but those who've had the disease make no secret about its consequences and the discomfort derived from the illness. Contracting flu is bound to affect our attitudes and thus our long-term health.

For more information call Tara Tradd: 781-383-4116.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

POLITICAL NOTES

Honoring Democrats of the Year

The eight towns and cities of the South Shore Democratic Caucus will host the Democrat of the Year Banquet at South Shore Country Club in Hingham from 6 to 10 p.m., on Friday, Oct 28. All South Shore area Democrats and their families and friends are invited to come and enjoy the evening. This biennial gathering of South Shore Democratic Party members will honor Democrats of the Year from each of the South Shore Caucus towns.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee voted unanimously to nominate Edward Lappen as this year's honoree. Lappen was also Cohasset's Citizen of the Year for 2011.

The evening will include cocktails, dinner and the awards ceremony. Local, state and federal Democratic officeholders are invited and often participate in the award presentations and make brief comments to the attendees.

Advance reservations are required. Cost is $40 per person. Call Kevin McCarthy to make a reservation at 781-534-0509.

'Shortcomings of the safety complex'

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Police and Fire stuff — Some time ago, around the year 2000, the Police/Fire complex was expanded and "updated." You will see the reason for adding the quotes around the term "updated" later as we continue with our discussion. If we fast-forward to today, after speaking with the Police and Fire Chiefs and after reviewing the stations, we can draw the conclusion that there definitely is short term work that needs to be done to improve the safety and health of the building's employees and to improve the building itself.

Clad Fire Station doorjamb.

Speaking of doors, the rear door in the Police Station that is used extensively for building access by the Police is so rusty that there are holes through the door.

When the Police/Fire Complex was updated, some corners were cut to save money by the then Town Manager. At that time, we suppose it sounded like a good idea. Saving money always sounds good, doesn't it? But, as you probably realize, short-cut methods usually don't last as long as the proper repairs. So, now it's time to pay the piper. For example, the original windows and doors in the building, that date back to 1962 are not very weather tight nor energy efficient by today's standards. In addition, in numerous places the putty that holds the single layer of glass in place has gotten very brittle and has fallen out of the windows. As you might imagine, this does not make for a very draft-free or energy efficient building. We have included a photo that shows (if you look carefully) the missing putty in the windows at the edge of the glass. Also, the outside frames of the windows that had begun to deteriorate had been clad in aluminum rather than being replaced. Although they looked better with the cladding, the wood window structure under the cladding continued to deteriorate due to the trapped moisture.

Missing glazing putty and aluminum window frame cladding.
COURTESY PHOTOS

While we are talking about cladding, the same treatment was used on exterior doors in the complex. Another photo we have included shows a door at the front of the Fire Station with an aluminum clad door exterior jamb. However, the exposed wooden portion that meets the door when it is closed has continued to deteriorate and the firefighters have had to take an axe to the wood to cut it back so the door can be closed. It would seem that replacing this door is a must for a weather-tight secure building.

Speaking of doors, the rear door in the Police Station that is used extensively for building access by the Police is so rusty that there are holes through the door. These are a safety hazard since it is easy to snag a uniform sleeve on the door itself. This could be especially dangerous if it were to happen while escorting a prisoner.

Other areas that have deteriorated include the floor tiles that have come loose in the Police side of the building. Of course, these can become a tripping hazard. But, they are also a serious safety hazard. Isn't that an extreme claim, you might ask? Well, let's think about where we are. We are in a Police Station. And from time to time very unsavory characters are gracing these hallowed halls. In the hands of the wrong person a shard of loose floor tile can become a lethal weapon. In a Police Station sometime simple problems can lead to tragic conclusions.

While we are talking about shortcomings of the safety complex, let's take a minute and look at the Police basement. As you probably already know, there is extensive ledge in Cohasset. If you look at the Police Station from Elm Street, to the left of the station is an exceptionally large ledge outcropping. Ledge also makes ground water do funny things. Well, this location is no different. In fact, water from the ledge goes underground and, lo and behold, it materializes in the basement of the Police Station. Even when it is not raining, water can be found literally running in a steady stream over the basement floor to a floor drain about ten feet away from its point of entry. This tends to raise the humidity in the building a fair amount.

A rather simple fix that will handle the water flow is to add a trench drain along the wall that has the most water inflow. A pipe from the trench drain placed beneath the floor for a distance of about ten feet will carry the water into the floor drain. The drain is presently piped to a sump pump basin, where the water will be safely removed from the building. This can be done at a relatively modest cost to remediate a situation that has existed since the building was originally constructed. Plus, the opportunity for growing nasties that inhabit damp places will be significantly reduced. We are also considering a few simple enhancements around the exterior of the building to direct surface ground water away from the building.

The proposed series of repairs that the safety forces are requesting will improve the building, personnel safety and energy efficiency for the near term for relatively short money. As a point of interest the highlights of these near term repairs were informally discussed at this past week's Board of Selectmen's meeting. A final proposal with a budget is currently being developed.

Get poppin' before it's too late

GREGORY MATHIS

A colleague was walking around the newsroom the other day offering up some popcorn from a piping hot bag he had just taken out of the microwave. The aroma that was filling the office — no, he didn't burn the popcorn — was too good to pass up.

After I took a handful, he proclaimed someone had sent him the bag because October is National Popcorn Poppin' Month.

Who knew?

But National Popcorn Poppin' Month is real. While it has been celebrated for more than 30 years, it received official recognition in 1999 through a proclamation by then-Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman.

October is a lot of things to a lot of people. It brings us sometimes-spectacular fall foliage. Columbus Day is observed near the beginning of the month and Halloween is celebrated at the end.

And there's a lot to celebrate and recognize in between.

We know October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. You may have noticed the pink newspapers a couple of weeks ago or the pink that outlines our Wicked Local websites. We are in week three of our four-week Paint It All Pink campaign to raise awareness and money for the Massachusetts affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure.

October is also set aside to raise awareness for other serious issues and causes such as National Bullying Prevention Month, National Fire Prevention Month and National Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

We don't hear much about AIDS these days, but October is also National AIDS Awareness Month, National Depression Education and Awareness Month and National Dental Hygiene Month.

While it's great to set aside a month to draw closer attention to breast cancer, bullying or domestic violence, I think we can all agree that these issues not only need our attention each and every month, but each and every day.

If the secretary of agriculture had to weigh in on October becoming National Popcorn Poppin' Month, you have to make that leap of faith that the other observances for October are legitimate.

Food is particularly popular to celebrate in October. For instance, there's still time to pay homage to the following foods this month by eating a "better breakfast," enjoying a tasty dessert or feasting on seafood, pizza, pretzels, pork, pasta and picked peppers. (Don't say the last part too fast or your tongue will be too tied to eat.)

On the other hand, be careful what you eat because it's also National Cholesterol Awareness Month.

In addition to month-long observances, there are also days to consider in October.

Monday, Oct. 17, came and went with little fanfare in our office. It was National Bosses Day, but I wasn't expecting anyone to make a big deal about that. I work with a lot of people, but I don't consider myself the boss in a bossy kind of way. So no big deal there.

I am a little wary of next Thursday, Oct. 27, which is Cranky Co-Workers Day. There's a much greater possibility for that to generate a buzz around the office as we head into Halloween and the end of what is an eventful month.

I might want to consider petitioning for this week in October to be "I Can't Think of a Column Week," which might better explain all of this. I'll try to do better next time.

WILLCUTT CORNER

Field trip to Duxbury Senior Center

RICK STOCKWOOD

Large rooms, lots of light, comfortable furniture, and plenty of nooks and crannies awaited them on their tour as did plenty of vibrant and active seniors who were proud to show off their center.

As the conversations continue about the proposed senior center at Willcutt Commons in Cohasset a small group of residents made the 20-mile trip south to Duxbury to tour the senior center there and see firsthand what the excitement is all about.

The group, comprised of members of the Social Service League's Board of Directors and the Town's Senior Center Planning Group, knew from the moment they walked through the door that they were in a place very different than the several small rooms dedicated to Elder Affairs back in Cohasset. Large rooms, lots of light, comfortable furniture, and plenty of nooks and crannies awaited them on their tour as did plenty of vibrant and active seniors who were proud to show off their center.

"There was so much energy in all of the rooms at the Center, but the one thing I really enjoyed was their large dining room and kitchen," said Joan Brown, a Cohasset resident, member of the Senior Center Planning Group, and volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs along with other senior center's in the area. "The current space in Cohasset is inadequate for many things including preparing a meal for a large number of people. We are often bumping into each other in the kitchen and have little room for the prep necessary to prepare a nice meal."

Designed to fit the evolving needs of seniors the Duxbury Senior Center has grown into its space utilizing all of its rooms for meals, exercise classes, card games, shows, instruction, just about anything that the community of seniors need to remain active, learning, and involved.

"Everywhere we walked there was a buzz about the place," said Alyson Silvia, a Cohasset resident and new Social Service League board member. "There was so much vitality and so many different activities going on in each room of the Center that you couldn't help, but leave with a smile on your face."

The Social Service League will be scheduling additional tours to senior centers in Kingston and Hanover. If you would like to take part in a tour, have questions about the proposed senior center for Cohasset, or want to know how you can help make Willcutt Commons a reality please contact Marita Carpenter, president of the Social Service League, at (781) 383-0771 (office) or (781) 383-2914 (home). You can also stay informed through the bi-monthly Willcutt Corner column in the Cohasset Mariner or show your support by participating in the Town's upcoming Senior Center Planning Group meetings.

FINANCE

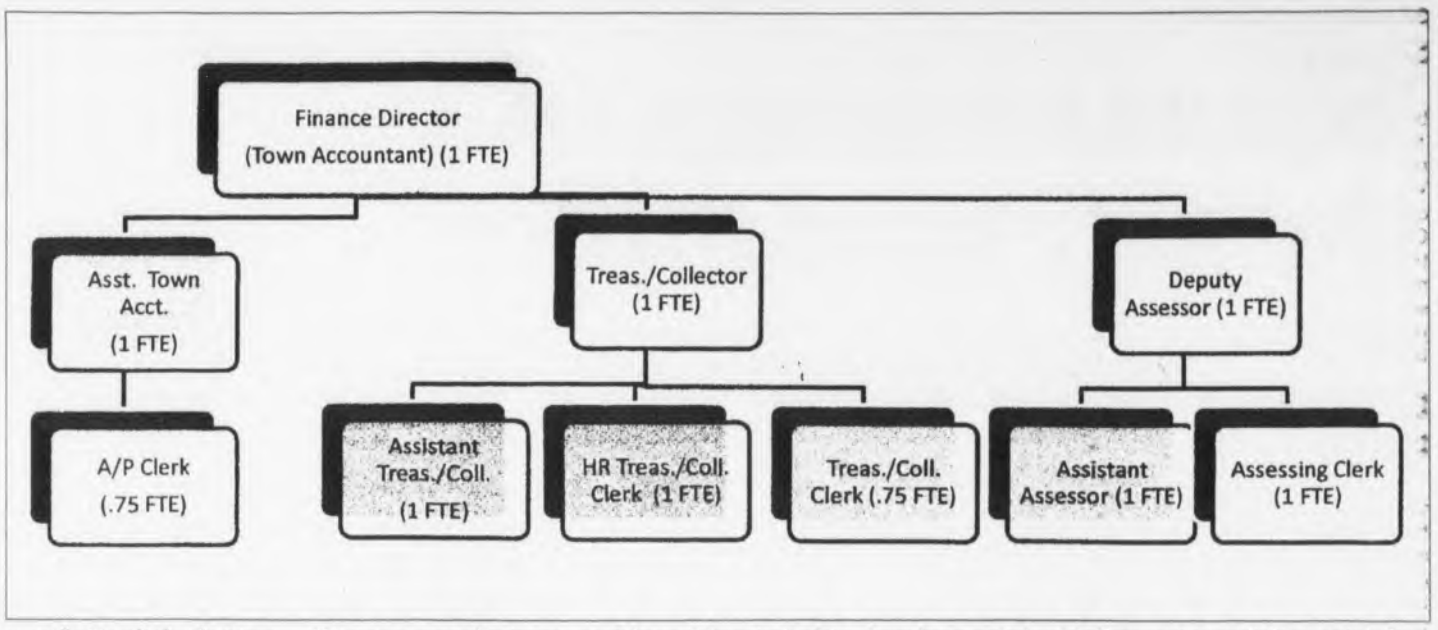
vote on an organizational chart" without a permanent finance director in place, she said.

Coughlin emphasized that a financial review by DOR would "give us an idea on how to govern" by studying the town's "the entire financial picture."

Kingsley's staff previously completed a review for the town of Westport when Coughlin was town manager there.

"In the past six months, Cohasset has faced significant financial challenges not least of which stem from the recent departure of the finance director/auditor and the demotion of treasurer/collector," Coughlin wrote in an Oct. 12 email to Kingsley. Coughlin added that audits conducted by Roselli, Clark & Associates and a special audit of the water and sewer departments by Melanson and Heath revealed significant deficits in the water department, and that this deficit will have to be reconciled during special Town Meeting.

"The town benefits from a strong town manager statute and I am prepared to take decisive action to overhaul the town's financial department," Coughlin wrote in the email.



"Immediate steps must be taken and it would be of great benefit to the town if your office could render some practical advice as to whether my proposed reorganization is the best way to go."

Jenkins asked Coughlin whether the chart reflected permanent or temporary changes. The town manager answered that some are, and some are not. Coughlin's plan to hire a second full-time accounting position, for instance, could be reduced to a part-time one after the department has been caught up.

"We won't know the final outcome till the financial software is installed," Jenkins said.

Software woes

While the finance department scrambles to catch up on "both sides of the house" – both the accounting and treasurer's office – concerns have been raised during previous selectmen and advisory meetings that the town's long-planned software conversion to SoftRight will be left by the wayside. Tuesday's selectmen meeting proved no different.

Coughlin pointed to "growing pains" in the department due to all of the recent changes.

Jenkins asked Coughlin whether the Capital Budget Committee was still involved in the software implementation. The committee had previously volunteered to help keep the implementation process on track. Member Jack Keniley was especially vocal about offering his unpaid assistance to help oversee the project.

"I've been involved in the software process since [interim town manager] Steve Lombard was here," Keniley said. "It's something I did as a profession," adding that he has overseen huge projects, and this one "is not hard to do. The issue is having clear lines of authority during the process."

Keniley added that failing to complete the conversion in a timely manner could lead to "all sorts of problems."

Coughlin countered that the implementation requires manpower that cannot be spared in the finance department.

"At the moment, it's a manpower issue," he said to Keniley. "The implementation does not necessarily need to cross writes with closing out the books. We can't steal manpower from closing out the books."

Keniley agreed that Kinsherf needed to be left to close out the books in time, but that perhaps someone else should be brought in just to deal with SoftRight.

"How many consultants can you bring in to a small town?" Coughlin countered.

Keniley said that he had "been doing this for a long time" and has managed many large-scale projects.

"And I've managed municipalities," Coughlin said.

In a letter to the selectmen dated Oct. 13, Coughlin seemed to assure the board that the situation was under control. The town manager said that he met with Kevin Adolph of SoftRight to devise a strategy to keep the project moving forward despite the recent changeup in the finance department's staffing. One way Coughlin hopes to do this is by letting the firm Sullivan and Rogers assist with the implementation, which is something they have agreed to do, if necessary. Coughlin told the board that the firm has helped other towns convert to SoftRight before.

"We might be able to have Sullivan and Rogers just work on SoftRight" if other pressing deadlines are met, said Coughlin. "It's a day-by-day situation."

During the selectmen meeting, Coughlin also explained that he learned that SoftRight would provide an intensive two to three day training boot camp for whoever the new town accountant/finance director and treasurer/collector turn out to be.

Coughlin said offering this training would be key in attracting the best candidates to the position by creating a familiarity with the software.

Kinsherf, who is temporarily taking over Stanbrook's post, has not been trained in SoftRight.

Coughlin expressed his concern about continuing the implementation at full speed when "we don't have anybody in accounting at present to deal" with it. Training each key employee will take time that the department, according to Coughlin, simply does not have, given the pressing Nov. 22 to submit the balance sheet to the DOR.

Coughlin told the board that he did not believe the town would fall far behind on the implementation schedule if the finance department waited just a few more weeks until they close out the books.

"We're not delaying the implementation," Coughlin stressed. "We're not losing much" on the timeline, he explained. "We need to be focused solely on getting our submission to DOR, or there will be hell to pay."

Finding Stanbrook's replacement

Keniley, along with some members of the board of selectmen, wondered why the town could not go ahead and post the finance director/town accountant position publicly and start interviewing candidates right away.

"I think we should get started now," said Keniley, explaining that the hiring process will likely take two to three months anyway.

"To a good person, it's an opportunity and challenge," Keniley added. "If we wait for the implementation [to be completed], we won't get anyone until April or May."

Coughlin would like to wait until the financial problems have been sorted out before attempting to find a quality candidate.

"I don't think we'll have to wait until April," Coughlin said, adding that he hopes to have someone hired by January. But the town manager believes that it would behoove Cohasset to wait a few more weeks to post the position, after the Nov. 22 DOR deadline has been met and free cash has been certified, explaining that accomplishing these things will show that the town "has turned a corner."

At the moment, Coughlin said, "We have a town on the brink, and that scares [candidates] away.

"We're better off to wait just a month," he continued. "When the headline in the newspaper is that we got our certified free cash, it will attract people."

Keniley expressed concern that the town "could easily burn a month and half up" just working on the job description; Coughlin said that the description is ready to go, thanks to Stanbrook and Lombard. However, the town manager prefers to wait to post the position.

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer also weighed in on the matter during Tuesday's meeting.

"The town outlasts the individuals in this room," Gaumer said. "The critical functions are what matters, not who fills them. We don't want to halt the process by waiting to fill functions with the ideal person; not to denigrate Mike's desire to hire the right person, but the software implementation ought not to wait for a certain human being."

Keniley told Coughlin and the board that he believes a coordination meeting should be held each Friday to discuss how the implementation is going. Coughlin felt that this would tie up the finance department's time.

The town manager said he is wary of "putting too much on the town employees. That's why we're seeing a departure of personnel."

"John [Stanbrook] was overwhelmed," Keniley agreed. "If Eric [Kinsherf] had been brought in two months ago, we would be flying."

"John needed help from when he hit the ground here," Gaumer added.

Coughlin argued that the financial officers should be left alone to do their jobs and make their deadlines.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr recommended that the finance department hold at least one strategy meeting, preferably this week, to discuss the situation further. The financial discussion alone took up the first 40 minutes of Tuesday's selectmen meeting, and there were plenty of other matters on the agenda that night.

"We're talking about another meeting," said Coughlin.

Carr asked for "one hour, to see where we are."

"I'm not getting paid for this," said Keniley. "I'm just concerned." He went on to say that he does not want to get in the way of the implementation or interfere with Coughlin's plans.

"Mike and I are both strong-willed guys," Keniley said.

POLICE, FIRE HQ

- Extension cords stretched across floors to power air conditioners and heaters
- Three sergeants sharing one office and, at times, the same desks
- Too small conference room (24x14)
- Lack of interview/interrogation room
- Inefficient filing and storage space for reports
- Outdated property/evidence room, which still relies on handwritten ledgers rather than a computerized system
- Exposed and dangling electrical wires in the basement
- Plumbing deficiencies

The above issues indicate that the building is not up to code, presenting safety and health hazards to the employees that work there.

On the fire side

Chief Silvia noted some similar problems in his report. Lack of space and storage are major issues in his department, especially when it comes to making room for reserve apparatus such as the spare ambulance, which is stored in the Water Department garage, the rescue boat, which is wedged into a tight space, and the emergency management trailer, which is currently stored outside at the Department of Public Works.

The fire department's records and equipment storage space is also inadequate, Silvia explained in his report. Furthermore, the chief wishes to address the following areas:

- Additional office space
- A "clean room" to store medical supplies (which are currently stored in the basement and hose tower)
- A decontamination area for cleaning contaminated medical or firefighting equipment
- Space for employee fitness training

Silvia noted that there have only been two major renovations to the fire headquarters in the past 25 years, which only led to the amount of storage space being decreased each time.

The fire department side of the public safety complex, Silvia explained, was originally designed to replace a station located at the intersection of Border and Summer streets. Back then, Cohasset had three fire stations; one located in Beechwood and the other in North Cohasset.

In 1982, two of the three stations were closed, causing all of the fire services to be relocated to the current structure. Silvia stressed the need for an additional fire station to both the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen, explaining that the station's current location does not allow for the adequate response time to get to certain parts of town.

There are many areas of Cohasset that fall outside the standard four-minute response time, Silvia said:

- Forest Ave. from Old Coach Road and Surry Drive
- Linden Drive neighborhood
- Jerusalem Rd. from Atlantic Ave. to Forest Ave.
- Brewster Rd. neighborhood

Some areas take longer than eight minutes to get to on a sunny day, and 12 in inclement weather, Silvia explained.

Boards weigh in

Steve Gaumer, chairman of the Capital Budget Committee, expressed his support for the building renovations during the Tuesday Oct. 18 selectmen meeting.

"We voted to conditionally support the project with one objective," Gaumer said, adding that he asked the chiefs to re-estimate the cost of the project and increase the scope of work due to the need for water remediation.

"It may be five years before the town can consider a new public safety building," Gaumer added. "They're going to be in the current building for some time. I believe it's in the best interest of the town to preserve the property."

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr added that he's visited the station and seen the water damage firsthand.

"It's really something," he said.

"A river runs through it," said Chief DeLuca.

Town engineer and special assistant to the town manager Mark Brennan told the board that he believes the problems are "easier to fix than we originally thought," and the cost could be less than previously anticipated. "It's maybe a week's worth of work."

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore asked if the electrical service would also be upgraded. Gaumer said that it is not being addressed in the current proposal.

"It's a 1960's construction," Gaumer said. "I suspect the electrical service reflects that."

"It's a big job," Capital Budget Committee member Jack Keniley noted, adding, "The police and fire departments definitely need a phone system upgrade as soon as possible."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin said that the matter would have to go back to Capital Budget to address the water concern. He hopes to proceed with the repairs following special Town Meeting and "plan a multi-year approach."

New public safety complex

Coughlin and the chiefs have also presented a proposal for a new public safety complex.

"We expect to see improvements in the chain of command," Coughlin told the Advisory Committee last week, which is why he and the chiefs are also "advocating for a better facility."

"The current facility is in dire shape," Peter Pescatore, Advisory chairman, noted, explaining that it is not up to code and inadequate in size to support both departments. The town used to have three stations, he explained.

Preliminary costs for a new building could be funded with free cash from special Town Meeting on Dec. 6. The actual building process will take a while, however.

"This is a five-year process," Coughlin said.

Chief Silvia told both the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen that this proposal has been around since the 1970s. Back then, the town did a feasibility study and planned to close two of the existing stations in town and add one on 3A. It would have been next to the Stop and Shop, but the project was continually voted down.

"The thought process has been in town for 40 years," said Silvia. "It's viable and makes sense for responding to all areas.

It doesn't have to be a palace," Silvia added. "We just need another place to respond from."

Coughlin told the committee that he is confident there will be a sufficient amount of free cash available to fund this facility, as well as dealing with the water deficit and other issues.

The Advisory Committee did not take a vote on the building project, as a warrant will have to be prepared for special Town Meeting. Erecting a new structure would be a capital building expenditure.

Coughlin concluded the Oct. 18 discussion with the selectmen by saying, "We'll be back at [special] Town Meeting."

SELECTMEN BRIEFS

STM is Dec. 5

Special Town Meeting will be held on Monday, Dec. 5. The selectmen voted to open the Special Town Meeting Warrant this week and to close it at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 25. The board will sign the warrant during their next meeting on Nov. 1; it will be sent to the printer on Nov. 7, posted on Nov. 14 and mailed to residents.

Deputy chief posts OK'ed

The Board of Selectmen voted to approve proposals from Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca to create two new positions to their respective departments.

The assistant fire chief position will be elevated from a current captain's position that has not yet been filled. According to Silvia, it is already in the fire department's budget for fiscal year 2012, and will lead to a slight increase in the budget for FY '13.

The new deputy police chief will likely be promoted from an existing lieutenant position. Chief DeLuca assured the selectmen that the vacant lieutenant position would not be filled.

The police department expects to save money on overtime, since the new deputy chief will be a non-union, salaried position.

Woodside discussion

Jennifer Oram, assistant to the town manager, has been working with two families to help them resolve an issue involving gravestones placed on the wrong lot lines. Members from both families, the Rose and Jason families, initially met with the board of selectmen this past July to express their stone encroachment concerns.

After meeting with the family members several times and conducting site visits to Woodside, Oram drafted a letter outlining her proposed solutions. Some stones will be moved and rotated, but the family members will have a chance to voice their approval or disapproval before any action is taken. Oram asked that the families notify the town in writing if they wish to have their stones rotated.

The plan is to bring all of the stones into alignment in a way that is fair to both families involved, Oram explained.

Some of the family members present during the Oct. 18 selectmen meeting expressed their disapproval over the current plans.

"The idea is to move [the stones], then have everyone approve it," Selectman Fred Koed, who went on site visits to Woodside, told the family members. "It's a jigsaw puzzle, step by step process."

Oram agreed to make an amendment to her current letter and send out a new draft to all of the family members.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr asked the board to vote to approve the letter; the board did so, contingent upon Oram's amendment.

"This is a priority for us," Carr told the family members.

National Grid petition supported

Tropical Storm Irene is long gone, but town manager Mike Coughlin continues in his quest to take National Grid to task for their lengthy response time to turning the power back on in Cohasset. Many residents were without power for nearly a week.

Coughlin plans to air his dismay, joining in the Dept. of Public Utilitie's field hearings on National Grid's response during Irene.

Furthermore, Coughlin is recommending the town attorney file a petition asking for National Grid to reimburse the town of Cohasset.

During the last major storm in December, Chief Robert Silvia sent National Grid a bill, part of which they paid to the town. The petition is a more formal version of that procedure, Coughlin explained.

"To settle this, National Grid would have to talk to the town," said Coughlin.

Selectman Leland Jenkins said that while he was not defending National Grid, he was not in favor of filing the petition. He said that he believed National Grid lacked sufficient manpower and that folks should not expect to get power back within 24 hours during a major event.

Selectman Fred Koed said that he participated on a conference call with National Grid the day before Irene hit, and "heard all kinds of promises." The town was assured that National Grid would be properly staffed and prioritize turning the power back on for people who were sick, elderly and in need of electricity.

Koed added that this could happen again during the next major storm, "unless you call them out on this."

The selectmen voted to support the petition three to one, with Jenkins voting against it; selectmen Koed, Ted Carr and Diane Kennedy all voted for it. Selectman Paul Carlson was unable to attend the meeting.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

MCAS presentation

Louise Demas, curriculum supervisor of Cohasset schools, presented MCAS data in a PowerPoint presentation during the Wed. Oct. 19 School Committee meeting.

Demas shared that the current grade 11 was ranked number one in the state for ELA (English Language Arts), which was recently reported in Boston Magazine.

However, Demas also explained that the school district has not met its targeted AYP (adequate yearly progress) score, as determined by the No Child Left Behind Act.

The school committee expressed confusion over how the district could be ranked first in the entire state in one category, while coming up short overall. Demas explained that the better the district does, the harder it is to improve.

"It's a flawed system," school committee chair Helene Lieb said. "We're already in the 'A' category, so to speak. In order to get from 97 to 99, we have to be amazing."

"We're a high-performing district not meeting the standard we set," said Demas.

"It's harder to improve when you're so close to the top," said Dr. Mike Gill, interim principal of the Middle-High school.

Demas reminded folks that this data is collected from one assessment that students are asked to take once a year. She concluded her presentation by saying that the Cohasset district is only in competition with itself.

AP Awards

The school committee invited AP scholars, along with scholars of honor and scholars of distinction, to attend the Oct. 19 meeting, where the students were presented with awards.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo noted that two students tied for academic perfection, a distinguished award. These students are Madeline O'Grady and Isabelle Robinson.

Following some test recalculations, several more students will be honored at a later date.

The following students received honors on Wednesday night:

AP Scholars:
This award is granted to students who receive scores of 3 or higher on three or more AP Exams:

11th Grade:
Emily Dormitzer
Anya Gruber
Elizabeth Hagearty
Whitney Jaffe
Patrick Kearney
Eloise Lucas
Morgan McCarthy
Charlie Neaves
Madeline O'Grady
Kaye Slamp
Elisa Tedeschi

12th Grade:
Colette Altholtz
Dominic Brennan
Mathew Brooks
John Carrier
Patrick Dunn
Andrew Fewsmith
Elizabeth Kinnealey
Emma Musto
Danielle Sookiasian
Richard Trojnor-Barron
Imani White-barboza

AP Scholars with Honor:
Students who are AP Scholars receive an average score of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and scores of 3 or higher on four or more exams:

11th Grade:
Chase Baldwin
Olivia Franklin
Gus Helbock
Carly Oddleifson
Tucker Oddleifson
Isabel Robinson
Colleen Ryan

12th Grade:
Meaghan Costello
Kelsey Erler
Tara Goodwin
Carli Haggerty

AP Scholars with Distinction:
Students with this honor received an average score of at least 3.5 on al AP Exams taken, and scores of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. Two of the students earned all five points on each of the seven exams they took. These students have all graduated and are no in their first year of college:

Andrew Burnett
William Choi
Natalie Dignam
Matthew Durant
Rachel Fredey
Samuel Green
Ashley Howard
Sarah Mavilia
Jay Monaco
Greta Shwachman
Emily Toomey

Sign up for the Polar Express

On Saturday Dec. 3, the annual Scituate North Pole Express will be sponsored by the Scituate C.O.R.S.E Foundation (Community of Resources for Special Education) and S.H.O.R.E. (Scituate High Opportunities and Resources for Education). This magical event will be held at the Greenbush Commuter Rail Station with four trains departing at 9:45 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2:40p.m and 4:40p.m. Passengers should arrive 30 minutes prior to departure.

Children and adults alike will enjoy this 60-90 minute train ride which replicates the journey to the North Pole as told in the classic story of "The Polar Express." Along the ride the children will be read this holiday story, be served milk and cookies, sing Christmas carols, receive a goody bag and be greeted by holiday characters including Santa and Mrs. Clause. The cost of this event is $20; children under the age of one will ride free on the lap of an adult. Tickets may be purchased with cash or a check at The Front Street Book Shop, 165 Front St, Scituate Harbor.

Additional information, tickets, and sponsorship for this event will be made available on www.scituatenorthpoleexpress.com.

Member Linda Tobin says, "I had always been able to lose weight on my own when I was younger by modifying my diet, but at 49 I needed something more structured in order to lose the extra weight that I had gained.

Still, I found excuses not to check out GISFW until I ran into a girlfriend at a New Year's party. She had recently reached her weight loss goal, and would be turning 50 just days before me. I looked on the GISFW website and found her testimonial along with many others, and thought that most stories sounded very much like my own.

In my first month after joining GISFW I lost 11 pounds, and after three months I've lost a total of 17 pounds. The personal training, nutrition guidance, online meal plan tracking and accountability all work together to make Get In Shape For Women an ideal place for women of all ages and abilities to come together with the common goal of becoming more fit."

Pink Tulip helps 'pink' charity

Women's boutique contributes to breast cancer cause

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Christine Nagle, owner of women's clothing boutique Pink Tulip, is a champion of women's causes, and makes that obvious in her brick and mortar store and on the Pink Tulip website. Her three-year-old shop contributes to cancer charities, not only during the month of October, but year-round.

This month, Pink Tulip has been advertising in the all-pink Mariner newspapers, along with donating a percentage of proceeds to "Learn Live Love." This is a cancer outreach organization located in Scituate, where Nagle lives.

Learn Live Love "helps families afflicted by breast cancer," said Nagle. "It was started by women in Scituate. They assist with medical bills, travel expenses," what Nagle called "the nuts and bolts" of cancer patients' needs. The organization works hard "to get this done," Nagle said. "They really moved me."

Pink Tulip participated in a benefit for Learn Live Love back in June, which is cancer survivor month.

Nagle is also raising breast cancer awareness by affixing stickers with the pink ribbon logo and messages of "faith, hope, love" to store purchases. Pink Tulip has also raised funds for the South Shore Hospital's breast cancer building.

Nagle has been up close and personal with the disease through her dealings with clients who are also cancer survivors.

"A woman who works here had breast cancer," Nagle shared. "She is such an inspiration... I also have a lot of customers going through it."

Breast cancer organizations are not the only women's charities that Pink Tulip supports. Last week, the store participated in a holiday fashion show held at the River Club sponsored by the Christ Lutheran Church in Scituate to benefit the Ruth House of Brockton, which assists homeless mothers aged 14 to 20 and their young children.

The fashion show was "fun — we had a great turnout," said Nagle, adding that her store has also held a fashion show to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter.

Pink Tulip often donates a "girls' night out" gift certificate to various local silent auctions; a women recently bid on one at a fundraiser for St. Paul's Church. Nagle said her store would be holding one of its girls' night out events this week.

"We try to give to local organizations," Nagle said, adding that as a local business owner, "You've got to be" involved in area charities.

Nagle said that in the grand scheme of things, her store is doing "just a little" for the cause.

"It's not a big store," she said. "But we do what we can."

SPORTS NOTES

GOLF

Correction

In the Oct. 14 edition of the Cohasset Mariner, a story on the Cohasset golf team on page 17 was incorrect.

Due to a miscommunication, it was reported that Cohasset beat Scituate 37-35 at Widow's Walk last Wednesday.

Scituate actually was a 37-35 winner.

The Skippers are still undefeated in South Shore League play.

YOUTH WINTER LACROSSE

Liv2Lax registration

Cohasset Club Lacrosse is once again hosting a series of Liv2Lax winter skills programs at the Cohasset SportsPlex for youth boys and girls of all grade and skill levels.

These 1-hour weekly sessions will be held right after-school as a way to burn off some extra energy, to polish your skills for next spring, or just to work on a game that we just can't get enough of especially after the snow starts to fly.

The 16-week Liv2Lax program will be run by experienced high school, club, and college coaches and players providing progressive, age appropriate skill development for the beginner thru to the advanced player with groups divided by skill, gender, and grades with equal parts development, game play, and fun. Sessions run weekly from early November thru to late Feb. (excl holidays/vacation weeks).

For more info, schedules, and on-line registration please visit our website at www.cohassetclublax.com or call 781/383-6074. These programs were a sell out last year and space will be limited to insure the quality of instruction so if you are looking for some great off-season lax at a convenient time and location, sign up today for our after-school Liv2LAX .

Open to all area laxers - See you out on the fields

YOUTH FIELD HOCKEY

Jamboree

Cohasset Youth Field Hockey will host their annual Field Hockey Jamboree on Sunday October 23 from 8 a.m. – 2 p.m. at Alumni Field. All three fields will be used and six towns and 14 teams will be represented. In case of bad weather it will be cancelled by Saturday.

There is no rain date.

CROSS-COUNTRY

Keeping it close

Cohasset/Hull battles Abington

The Cohasset/Hull boys and girls cross country teams traveled to Abington Tuesday for their weekly cross-country meet.

The girls' squad battled their Abington counterparts throughout the course of the 3.1 mile race in quest of their third victory of the season, but came up on the short end of a close 25-30 decision.

Christina Secatore once again led the Lady Skippers/Lady Pirates with a second place finish in a fine time of 23:18, which was a personal record (PR) for Chrissy at the 5K distance.

Skippers boot Rockland

Late field goal ices win

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team prides itself on taking things one game at a time.

That doesn't mean they forget the past though.

That past includes a 9-8 loss to Rockland at Cohasset's Homecoming last year.

That game was decided by a 24-yard field goal by Ricky Witt on a drive that took up more than eight minutes.

The boot was on the other foot this year.

With the Skippers clinging to a 14-6 lead at the beginning of the fourth quarter, Rockland had just taken advantage of a Cohasset turnover to march to the 45 with a fourth-and-three play coming.

The march stopped there, as Rockland's Ricky Witt fumbled and Cohasset recovered at the 45 with 6:45 left.

The rest of the game belonged to Cohasset as the Skippers mixed the run and pass while driving to the Rockland 23 on a drive that covered six plays and ate up more than five minutes of the fourth quarter before Shane Haggerty connected on a 32-yard field goal that gave Cohasset a 17-6 lead with just 1:35 left to play.

"This was a very good job, a good team effort," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said.

GIRLS SOCCER

Work to do

Cohasset fighting for playoff invite

After a slow start to the season, the Cohasset girls soccer team began to find their way, and it has left them with a chance to get to the second season.

"After turning the corner to the second half of the season the Cohasset girls varsity soccer team has some serious work to finish," Cohasset coach Deb Beal said. "In the remaining six games of the season we need to gather eleven points in orders to qualify for post season play. If there is a group of athletes out there any more determined than ours, I'd like to meet them. Each and every day these kids come out here and play to win. There are days when their best is challenged but they never stop giving it all."

Beal said anything can happen at this level.

"High school sports are funny in that these kids come out every day and work hard and play hard and then when the season ends they just switch gears and go do the same hard work and the same play for an different sport," she said. "Each member of this team is at least a two-sport athlete at Cohasset High School and most are three-sport.

"Coaching them is a very fine balance, working with various commitment levels is challenging but also very rewarding. Just when you think you are defeated they show up and prove to you that any doubt you may have is garbage."

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

South Shore Indians baseball

The South Shore Indians, based out of Hanover and Cohasset, finished their 2011 fall baseball season undefeated. It was capped off this past weekend with winning the NEAAU 14U championship title in New Hampshire.

Drawing the top seed, the Indians had a first round bye, defeated the Hit Doctor Diamonds in semi-final play 12-7, and then defeated the RBI Storm 15-4 later that day for the title.

Strong pitching performances by Tyler Balzarini, Jack Ruprecht and Pat Kielty contributed to the solid defense play in both games.

The South Shore offense was on fire, producing 27 runs and 30 hits during playoffs. Matt Downing led the team with multiple hits (5), Brett Dooley (3), Tyler Balzarini (3), Jack Ruprecht (3), Sean Cornell (2), Evan Clancy (2), Dan Cole (2), Joe Oriola (2), Jackson Bennis (2), and Pat Kielty (2). Brendan Connolly ended the final game early with a 2-run homerun. The South Shore Indians are coached by Don Cornell, John Balzarini and Denis Downing.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week six: Silver Lake boys, Marshfield girls leading the pack

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The sixth week of Inside the 6 saw a few significant changes, most notably two new teams entering the fray. For the boys, Hanover jumps into the top six for the first time this season, while the Scituate girls find themselves back in the rankings for the first time since the preseason. The Marshfield girls ousted Plymouth North for the No. 1 spot, while the Silver Lake boys retained their No. 1 position. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 16.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – The Lakers improved to 8-0-4 and don't appear that they'll relinquish this No. 1 spot anytime soon. The Lakers tied Duxbury, 1-1, two days after wiping out Marshfield, 6-0, a surprising result on Marshfield's end. The Rams hadn't conceded more than four goals in a game this season (and that only happened once).

2. Weymouth – The Wildcats shook off an uncharacteristic 1-2-1 slump and picked up three key wins last week, first knocking off Oliver Ames, 2-1, followed by a 1-0 win over Walpole (first place in Bay State Herget), and a 3-1 victory over Newtown North. That win over Newton North was key as it put Weymouth back in first place in the Bay State Carey.

3. Hingham – The Harbormen comfortably hold down first place in the Patriot League's Keenan division despite Silver Lake's perfect form. Hingham hammered North Quincy, 14-0, last week, just two days after beating Whitman-Hanson, 3-1.

4. Norwell – In a vital game last week in the South Shore League, the Clippers slipped past Cohasset, 3-2. The win kept Norwell in first place in the league at 7-0-2, two points ahead of Cohasset with two league games in hand.

5. Duxbury – The Dragons return to form after a two-game losing streak set the club back. Last week, they came close to handing Silver Lake its first loss of the season, taking a 1-1 draw. Earlier in the week, Duxbury beat Middleboro, 6-2, and sit in third place in Patriot League Keenan.

6. Hanover – After a seesaw start to the 2011 season, the Indians have kept up a solid pace and now find themselves in first place in the Patriot League Fisher division, tied with Scituate heading into action this week. A 2-2 tie against Quincy followed by a 5-2 victory over Whitman-Hanson extended Hanover's unbeaten streak to seven games (5-0-2).

On the bubble: Scituate, Marshfield, Pembroke

Week Five Rankings: 1. Silver Lake, 2. Hingham, 3. Norwell, 4. Weymouth, 5. Marshfield, 6. Duxbury

Girls

1. Marshfield – It's a slugfest at the top of the girls' rankings, and this week, there's yet another change as the Lady Rams and Plymouth North battle it out to see who holds down the No. 1 spot. This week, it's Marshfield's turn after the Lady Rams earned a 1-0 win over a strong Notre Dame side.

2. Plymouth North – It wasn't exactly a stunning setback, but the Lady Eagles drew, 0-0, with Plymouth South last week in a pivotal match that, had North won, it would've earned some valuable points in the race to the Atlantic Coast League title. What was eye-opening was that North was held scoreless for just the second time this season.

3. Duxbury – It was a light week for most teams in the region as rain swept the South Shore, and the Lady Dragons had an even lighter week, facing a winless Middleboro side. Duxbury won easily, 7-0, to remain in first place and unbeaten in the Patriot League Keenan.

4. Weymouth – A slight bump in the road (a 2-1 loss to Walpole, which is second in Bay State Herget) didn't slow down the Lady Wildcats as they responded with a convincing, 4-1 win over tournament-bound Newton North.

5. Hingham – It was an up-and-down week for the Harborwomen as they opened the week with a tough, 3-1 loss to Whitman-Hanson. They did come back and beat North Quincy, 3-1, earning the result they needed to hold down second place in the Patriot League Keenan.

6. Scituate – A well-deserved return to the top six for the Lady Sailors after their impressive run landed them in first place in the Patriot League Fisher division. Wins over Pembroke (2-0) and North Quincy (4-0) made it four games without a loss and three straight shutouts for Scituate.

On the bubble: Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth South

Week Five Rankings: 1. Plymouth North, 2. Marshfield, 3. Duxbury, 4. Hingham, 5. Weymouth, 6. Norwell

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. 5 To Watch

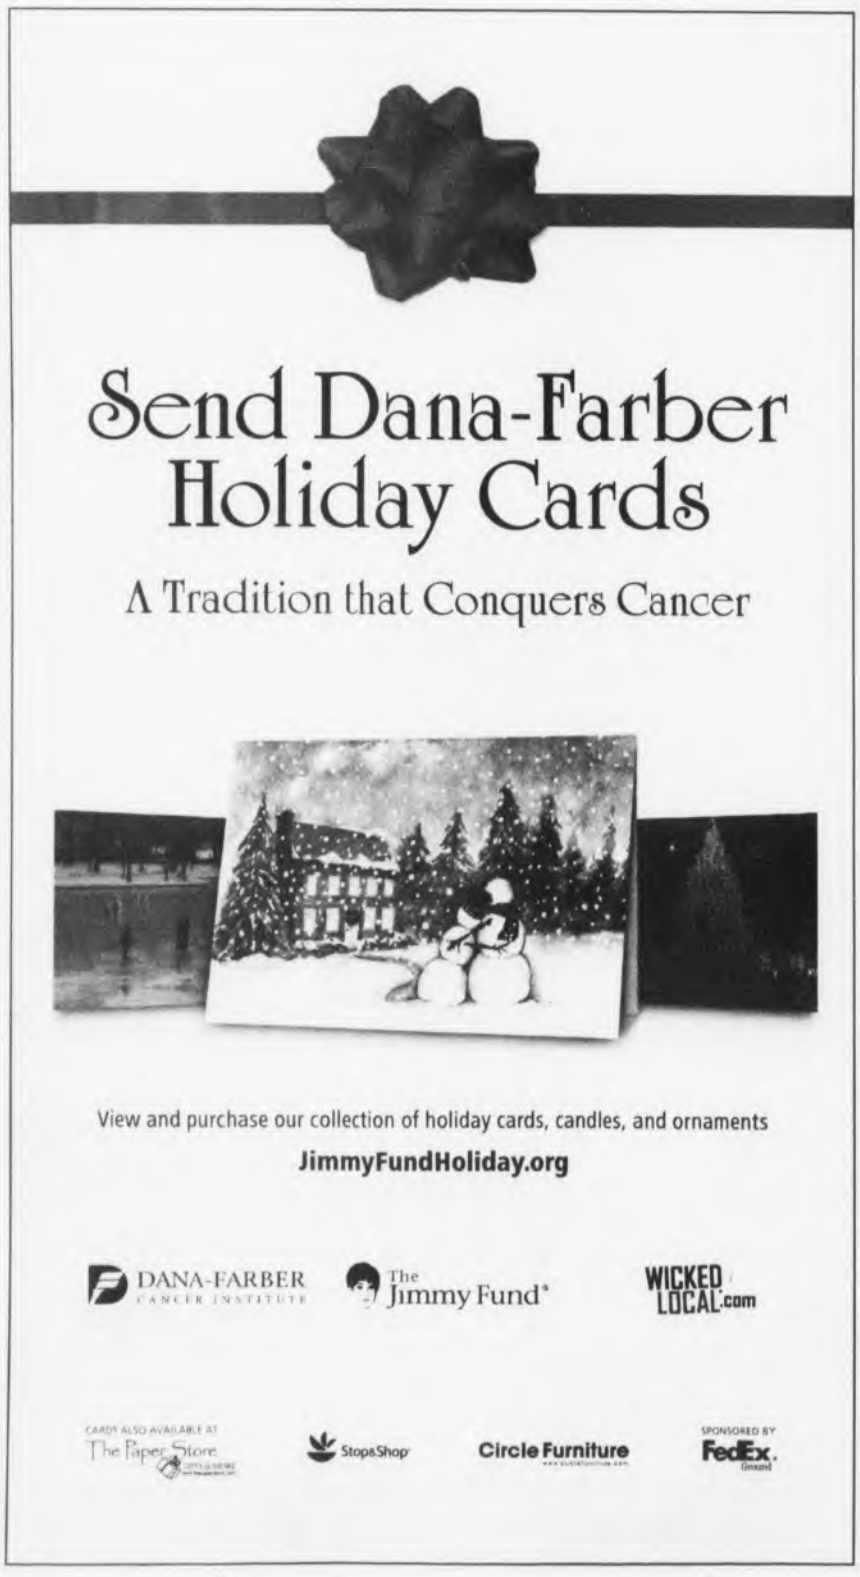
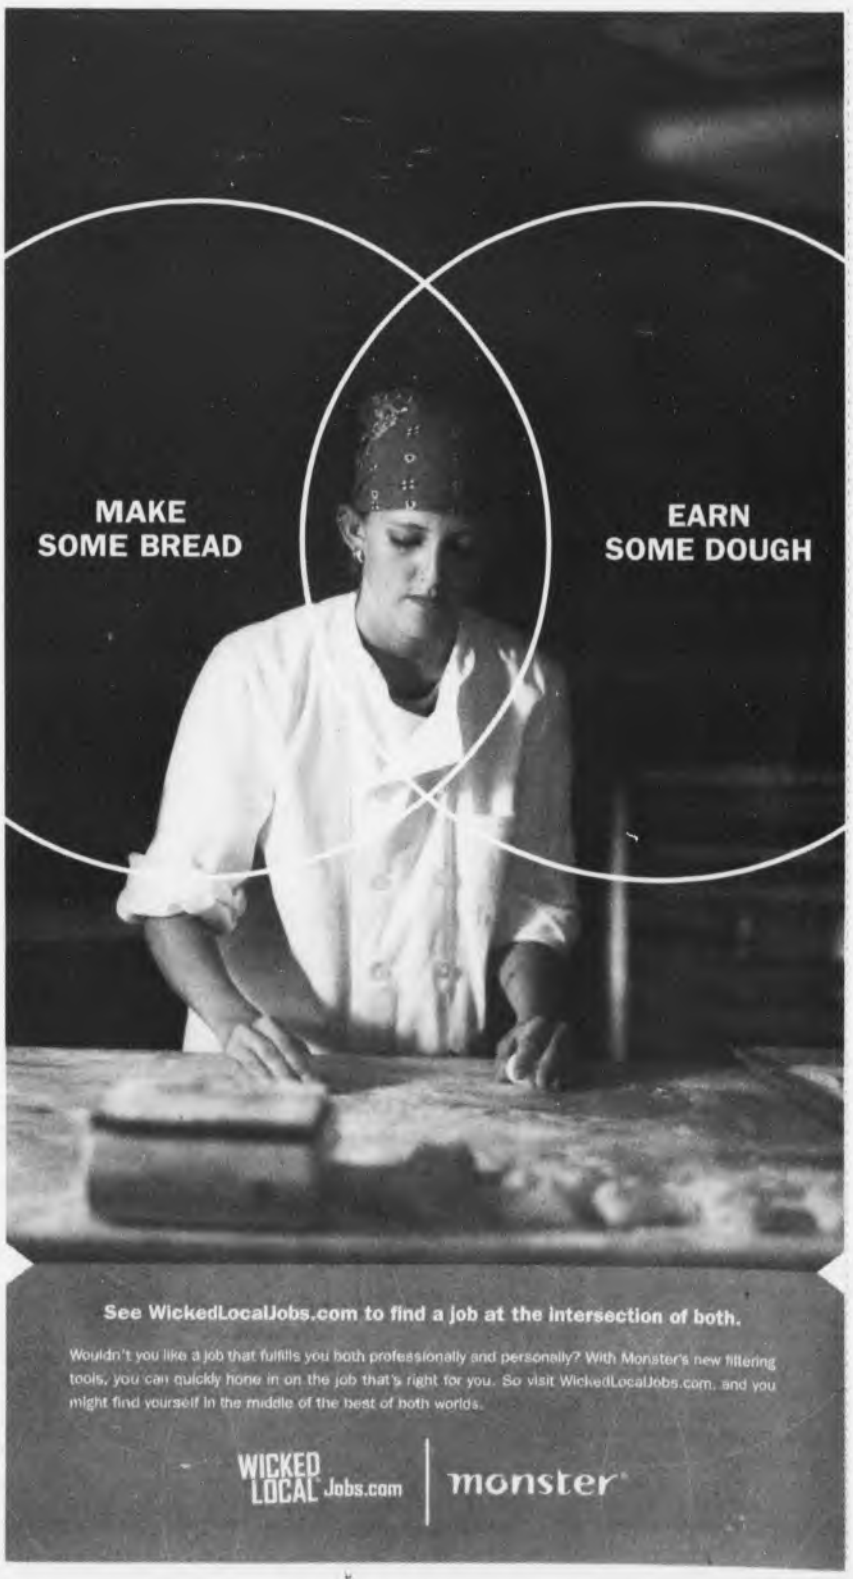
Pembroke Boys: Their dominance at the Brown Invitational this past Saturday surprised even their biggest supporters. As an appetizer, the JV boys dominated their Div. 1 race, scoring 31 points thanks to Billy Stafford (17:35) and Pete Graceffa (17:38), placing third and fourth. Then, despite scoring an 89 for fifth place, they used the power of their incredible top four of Wes Gallagher (15:22), Christian Stafford (15:39), Joe Vercollone (16:02), and John Valeri (16:02) to eke out a 2 point win over St. Anthony's of NY.

Joel Hubbard, Marshfield: Who ran the fastest time of the weekend in the Northeast that isn't named Edward Cheserek (the No. 1 runner in the nation)? Oh, that would be Rams stalwart Hubbard, who placed 2nd in the Championship division at the Brown (RI) Invitational. The poll would like to personally apologize to Hubbard for doubting his ability to beat the likes of Wesley Gallagher and Mike Marsella. The poll will doubt you no more sir.

Whitman-Hanson Girls: There's a reason why they continue to be the No. 1 team in the Poll for the third straight week. When you do what they did #1-4, the nation takes notice, not to mention the area. Placing four runners in the top 25 of the Varsity II girls' race, Rachel Baker (18:58), Gianna Cacciatorre (19:02), and Abby Baker (19:13) led the way, with Jenny Dimascio-Donohue (19:37) not far back. Not to mention, the one Achilles' heel might have been not having a strong enough 5th runner before, freshmen Caroline Mulrey (20:40), Kelsey Tierney (20:51), and senior captain Casey Egan (20:55) have closed the gap and provided good depth at the same time. Look for this team to take over the DI MSTCA poll's top spot this week.



Ashley Betts, Weymouth: Welcome to the show. The Wildcat freshman has been spending the season learning from the likes of Julie Tevenan, Bridget Jaklitsch, and Molly Barker about how to run big when it counts the most. All she did was place 22nd in the Championship race at Brown in a personal best (by a minute) time of 19:42. She was paced by Tevenan and Barker, who fell off the pace only later on, and only Jaklitsch (19:37) stayed ahead. Betts' time was a freshman record at Weymouth over the 5K distance, and the fifth fastest time of the dozens of freshmen who raced the distance on Saturday.



Sarah Saccoach, Archbishop Williams: Racing to a fouth place finish in the small schools race at the Catholic Memorial Invitational at Franklin Park (20:20), Saccoach cemented herself as the top harrier for Kelly Goff's Bishops, and one of the top runners in Mass. as well. Look for her to make a return trip to All States, although graduated teammate Erica Gagnon won't be along for the ride this time.

Meet to Watch

Whitman-Hanson at Pembroke: Two of the three fastest boys teams from Massachusetts last weekend at Brown get to come back and do it all over again on Tuesday. The plot thickens though. This time, the pupil faces off against the master. Coach Matt Vercollone tries to unseat Greg Zopatti from the grip his teams have had on the Patriot League these past four years in his first meet against his former team. To make the action more intense, Verc's brother Joe is the Titans' captain. And the tension doesn't end there as Lady Titan Chelsea Savage attempts to break apart the Panther top four, something no Massachusetts kids could do in the Div. 2 girls race at Brown.

The South Shore cross-country poll is the work of Mike Miller, head girls' coach of the Div. 1 defending cross-country champions at Weymouth High School.

GIRLS SOCCER

Beal had a recent example.

"Two weeks ago Saturday we played East Bridgewater at home for our Homecoming," she said. "EB was undefeated and had the state's leading scorer on their team. Our girls played with every ounce of passion they had that afternoon. They gathered a couple of days before and developed a game plan which they brought to me and we formulated it together. I cannot take an ounce of credit for the defensive strategy; I merely just helped to orchestrate it. They played the best I've ever seen them play as a team. Our first year goaltender junior Kristin Alexander was outstanding, never giving EB a chance to score. We have many flashes of brilliance on the field, sometimes they just don't mesh together. That day we gelled all afternoon. We left that field with a 0-0 tie and the confidence to beat anyone."

The feeling was short-lived.

"That didn't last too long though as we crashed and burned in our next game with Abington," Beal said. "The simplest aspects of soccer the next outing were challenging. We got sloppy with our touches and our communication was lacking. Then two days later with tournament qualification on our minds we turned around and tied Carver 2-2 merely out of hard work and determination. That afternoon Emmy McGoldrick scored her second varsity goal and Michaela Brophy added the tying goal off a penalty kick with just under a minute in regulation play."

Next up was Norwell.

"Again we come back to practice confident and ready to go and then we face Norwell," Beal said. "We struggled with their speed and their skill all evening. We were prepped and ready to play just got caught behind from the get go. I know that what we saw on that field that night was frustrating and crushing but again they returned to practice and continued to work hard. I guess we need to catch the breaks when we can and roll with the punches when we have to. I really enjoy working with these girls and we will do everything in our power to win at least five out of our last six games and add at least a tie to one and we will qualify, and if we don't qualify, then so be it, the soccer stars were not aligned for us."

Regardless of playoffs, Beal said the experience is important.

"I do though believe that these girls will go out and play hard and will come out of this season stronger and tougher athletes," she said. "Each one of them will continue the school year and become members of different athletic teams and make their mark and always will continue to make us proud. You can see many of these athletes playing basketball, hockey, lacrosse and tennis this winter and spring. It is wonderful to be in the building with these kids and be a part of their day and share these experiences with them."

"We never shot ourselves in the foot or made any big mistakes. We stayed focused and executed well."

Afanasiw was pleased with the all around play.

"Special teams, offense, defense," he said. "All played well. When you combine solid play in all phases, it makes it easier."

When Haggert made his final kick, the moment wasn't lost on the coach or players.

"The kids mentioned a field goal," Afanasiw said. "They felt it would be sweet justice. They talked me into it. It was a nice turn of events, sweet redemption for last year."

With a swirling wind, the field goal was not a given.

"Looking at the flag, you could see it wasn't an easy kick," Afanasiw said.

John Collins scored Cohasset's first two touchdowns on passes from quarterback Jamie Faber.

YOUTH HOCKEY

Coastal Stars roundup

Coastal Stars U14B Girls Split the Weekend

The Coastal Stars U14B Girls hockey team had a busy weekend on the ice. Beginning with Saturdy's win against Hanover. The Stars came out strong and fast determined to dominate the game.

Most of the first period was a defensive game with Both Hanover's goalie and Star's Goalie Alexa Henriksen stopping all shots.

With 3 minutes left in the first period Star's defensive player Kathy Moore of Marshfield flew in from the red line to put the puck past Hanover to put the Star's on the boards first.

The Star's strong defense (Maddy Welch, Megan Powers, Kathy Moore all of Marshfield) and Lindsey Beiche of Cohasset) effectively fought off Hanover's attemps in the second period while Star's forwards Emma Boudreau, Brooke Hart, Erin Murray all of Marshfield and Lexi Sangeleer of Hanson were unstoppable setting up plays and forechecking.

The Star's came unleashed in the third period scoring three more goals by Sammy Quackenbush, Sydnee Reardon of Marshfield and Allie Siroonian of Abington to end the game with a 4-0 win.

Sunday's game against Plymouth did not turn out as well for the Stars. However, despite the outcome the girls played well.

Defensive players Maddy Welch, Kathy Moore, Sammy Quackenbush and Lindsey Beiche worked hard against the towering Plymouth team to limit their shots on net. Star's goalie Alexa Hendriksen did an outstanding job stopping 21 out of 25 shots.

Forwards Emma Boadreau, Allie Siroonian, Syndee Reardon, Brooke Hart, Erin Murray, Emily Stockless and Megan Powers were aggressive working their way into Plymouth's zone and putting pressure on their defense. However, Plymouth was able to come out on top but a well played game by the Stars.

Coastal Stars Squirt B 8, Seahawks Blue 0

Missing four key players (Michael Fullam, Brendan Fullam, JJ Pavlik and Brian Melvoen) the Coastal Stars Squirt B team knew they needed to have a strong team performance against the Seahwaks Blue team. A strong performance is exactly what they gave in a 8-0 win, Oct. 9.

The passing was amazing as was the goaltending, and defense.

The scoring was opened up by Sean McIntyre (2 goals) with a great break awaygoal powered by passes from Nick Valianti (1 goal, 2 assists) and Jake Blinn (2 assists).

The goal scoring continued with Shane Brait (1 goal, 2 assists) working his magic from behind the Seahawks net and stuffing the goal home on the short side. The Stars got some much needed offense from some of their best defensive players. Ben Greer playing forward for the first time this season put in three goals in a row for a natural hat trick.

Assists on the hat trick were seen from Matt Hines (who would also add a goal), Alex Erikson (3 assists), Jarrod Wright (2 assists). Also playing forward for the first time this season was Jack Fitzpatrick who scored a goal on a great pass from Matt McGrath. The team play was amazing as was the team defense. The Stars were backed by incredible goaltending by Mike O'Toole who recorded his first shutout of the season, turning back 16 shots.

Everyone on the team played defense and forward making it a great team effort that allowed the Coastal Stars to improve to 4-1 on the season.

Coastal Stars Squirt B 7, Seahawks 3

The Coastal Stars Squirt B team continued it strong start to the season with a 7-3 victory over the Seahawks White team on Saturday in Rockland.

Falling behind quickly 2-0, and missing Shane Brait, JJ Pavlik, Ben Greer and Jarrod Wright, the Stars faced a strong test from the Seahawks.

As the first period came to an end Matt Hines was able to score on a great assist from Sean McIntrye (3 assists). Then early in the second period Jake Blinn would pull the game even after an incredible play by Brendan Fullam (3 assists) who kept the puck in at the blue line and took a shot that Jake Blinn was able to bury for the goal.

From there the scoring continued for the Stars.

Matt Hines scoreed two in a row to complete the hat trick and help the Stars take the lead, 4-2.

Playing defense after spending most of the season at forward were Jake Blinn (1 goal, 1 assist), Sean McIntrye, Nick Valianti (2 assists), Michael Fullam (1 assist), Matt McGrath (1 assist) and Brian Melvoen (who would also add two goals including a top corner wrist shot).

They all played great positional hockey and their backchecking and team play was instrumental in the Stars keeping the lead and coming away with the 7-3 victory.

Also playing out of position were standout defensemen Alex Erikson, Jack Fitzpatrick and Brendan Fullam. All three played forward and played great.

In addition to Brendan Fullam's three assists, Alex Erikson added 1 assist and Jack Fitzpatrick added two assists.

Their great play along with the solid goaltending of Mike O'Toole (14 saves) helped the Coastal Stars improve to 5-1 on the season.

Fellow captain Corin Postell also set a PR in 24:48, which was good for a fourth place finish.

Teammate Stephanie Brierly was right on Corin's heels in 24:49, which also was a PR, for fifth place. Olivia Franklin took ninth to in 24:48 and Ellie Tedeschi was tenth in 25:31 to complete the CHS/HHS score sheet. Emily Robbins also competed for the Lady Skippers/ Lady Pirates and finished 13th in a fine time of 29:12.

On the boys' side, captain Harry Hellboch led the way for his teammates with a seventh-place effort in a PR clocking of 21:40. He was followed by teammates Matt Menice in tenth in 25:19, Tom Saide in 26:10, Chris Daniels in 28:31, Jack Quigley in 37:48, and Kristophe Suprenant in 39:08, all of which were PRs.

"The teams ran well," said CHS/HHS head coach Ted Coyle. "It was nice to see almost everybody run a PR. The teams are getting faster and that's what you want to see at this time of the year."

Both the boys and girls teams will travel to Carver Tuesday for their final dual meet of the season.

LIFE AT CHS

Volunteers sought for Make a Difference Day!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

The event will be held on November 5th and 6th, and people of all ages are welcome. Bring friends and family along with you for a guaranteed good time.

Hello Cohasset! This week seemed to drag on forever, partially because it was the first full week we've had in a long time, and partially because of the icky, rainy weather. I wanted to skip school on Wednesday and curl up on my couch in baggy sweatpants watching reruns all day long.

Make a Difference Day is coming up and looking for volunteers! This annual event, sponsored by the PSO and partners with Cohasset Elder Affairs, is a great opportunity for high school students to participate in community service while helping seniors in town with their fall cleanup! The event will be held on November 5th and 6th, and people of all ages are welcome. Bring friends and family along with you for a guaranteed good time. To volunteer, contact Kelli Gildea at 383-6529 or ckgildea@verizon.net.

PSAT Testing was this Saturday, which meant an extra-early wakeup call for sophomores and juniors. PSAT's function as a practice for the actual SAT's and, for juniors, can enter you into the National Merit Scholarship Program based on your scores. The October SAT Scores came out this Thursday – hopefully everybody did as well as they wanted! If not, don't forget to register for the November or December testing sessions.

The Spinnaker articles were all completed and submitted to the editors by Monday. The editors-in-chief spent long hours after school (I know they were there past 7 pm on Wednesday!) getting the paper together. Don't forget to bring your dollar to school next Friday, you won't be disappointed!

On Wednesday, the School Committee Meeting took place at 7 pm at the high school. Some students were honored for their accomplishments on College Board exams, and were given certificates for earning either the AP Scholar or and AP Scholar with Honor award. Graduates of last year's class who won these awards will be getting certificates in the mail. A select few of last year's seniors were named AP Scholars with Distinction. Congrats to all!

Thursday was an Activity Day for students in the high school. This year, Advisory groups are required to complete a project that will benefit the school by the end of the year. It'll be interesting to see what everybody comes up with!

The football team beat Rockland this past Saturday in Rockland. The field hockey team tied rival Harwich 1-1 in an exciting game on Monday. The soccer teams both have away games tonight, but you should definitely watch the field hockey team play Mashpee at 4 pm on Alumni Field! For more sports news, see the sports section.

Well, it wasn't too busy of a week after all. That's a wrap Cohasset, see you next

Halloween fair

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School proudly announces that the Annual Halloween Fair will be held on Cohasset Town Common on Sunday, Oct. 23rd from 2-4 p.m. There will be a Costume Parade at 1:45p.m. Children should meet on the Common and we will parade around the pond with our favorite witch! Bring the family and enjoy games, slides, hayrides, and prizes. There will be raffles and a delicious Bake Sale!

This event is sponsored by the South Community Center Nursery School

All proceeds benefit the Nardo Scholarship and the Nursery School Enrichment Fund.

Haunted Hayride

Brendan St. John's Classic Haunted Hay Ride and Barn will take place 5 to 8 p.m., on Oct. 21, 22, 28 and 29. Parking will be at the DPW on Cedar Street, Cohasset. Tickets are $12 per person per ride with profits being donated to Cohasset Food Pantry. Price includes hayride to and from the haunted barn.

Class of 2006 reunion planned

Cohasset High School Class of 2006 fifth-year reunion will take place at 8:30 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 25, at Legion Post 118. More information will follow.

Organizers have already reached out to a lot of classmates through Facebook who graduated and those who left along the way and have been getting great feedback. For information, contact Brendon Barrett at brendon.barrett@gmail.com or Alison Krupczak at Krupczak.a@gmail.com.

Curtain rises on Cohasset Cabaret Nov. 4 and 5

Lilly Sestito and Chris Bullock at a dress rehearsal for the upcoming Cohasset Cabaret 2011 "That's Entertainment."

Some of the featured acts at Cohasset Cabaret, "That's Entertainment," will be Lilly Sestito and her brother Tony Carbone who will sing "The Prayer." Barbara Baumgarten will sing a rendition of "As If We Never Said Goodbye," and there will be a group performance of "When The Saints Go Marching In."

Directing this year's cabaret will be Douglas Trudeau. Trudeau is known to South Shore audiences as the founder and director of the Scituate based Showstoppers organization. He has written a show titled "That's Entertainment" for this year's Cohasset show. A feature of this year's show will be "Highway of Love" but this is not like the original Johnny O version, people will just have to come to the show to see this comedy surprise.

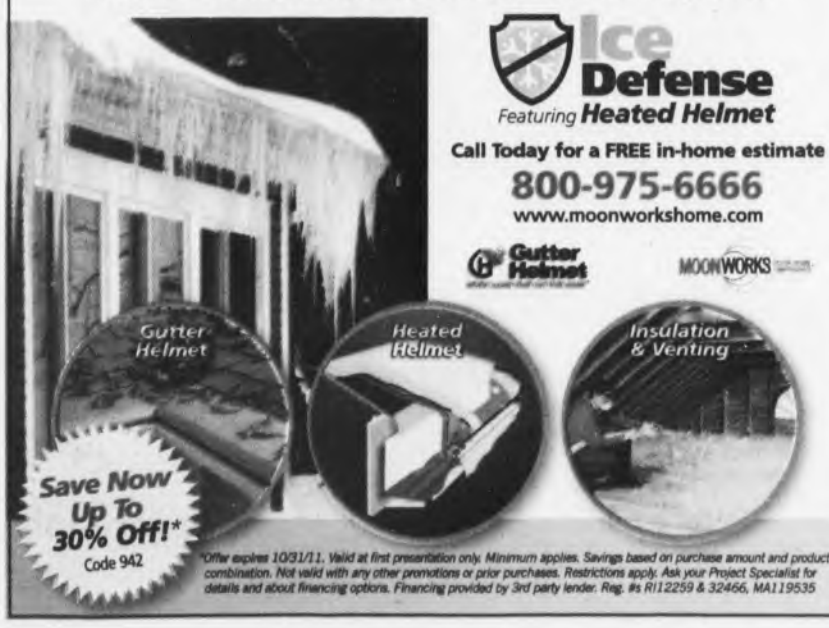
"That's Entertainment" will be an up tempo musical revue that will provide a variety of numbers from Broadway and movie musicals. The show will be comprised of solo and group numbers, comedy and dancing.

The cast will include some familiar faces from prior shows and performers from the Showstoppers organization.

Attendees can try their luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "cabaret style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks.

Cohasset Cabaret takes place on Nov. 4 & 5. Social hour is at 7 p.m.; the show starts at 8 p.m.. Tickets are on sale now and cost $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at South Shore Community Center. Call 781-413-7540 for more information.

Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.



The ensemble led by Director Doug Trudeau practice dance steps during a dress rehearsal for the upcoming Cohasset Cabaret 2011 "That's Entertainment" at St. Anthony's Parish Hall on Summer Street.

Massage: a positive step in your preventive health care: This is the message that Mariposa Massage and members of the American Massage Therapy Association are sharing. COURTESY PHOTO

MARIPOSA MASSAGE

Celebrates National Massage Therapy Awareness Week!

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

The week of October 23 is National Massage Therapy Awareness Week, and simply put, it means that massage therapists would like everyone to learn about the health benefits of getting a massage on a regular basis. Once considered a "luxury," massage, acupuncture and other complementary and alternative therapies are now becoming integral parts of an overall health and wellness plan as they have been in other countries for centuries.

Cindy Doody and her team at Mariposa Muscular Therapy and Wellness Studio in Cohasset will be promoting the benefits of massage for health and wellness at an Open House from 2-4 p.m. on Oct. 29 at 15 Depot Court. Please join us in the Yoga Room at Balance Studio. There will be free chair massage demonstrations, acupuncture mini sessions, reiki sessions, education events, special client promotions and door prizes. If you ever had any questions or wanted to try any of these, now is the opportunity to experience at no charge and learn a little more about how to improve and keep your health.

In addition to massage, the Mariposa team also believes in the value of acupuncture and Oriental medicine and will have acupuncturists on hand to explain and demonstrate the countless benefits of both.

Visit mariposabody.com for details.

Upcoming programs at Holly Hill Farm

Growing Great Garlic - Join the Friends of Holly Hill Farm for a workshop to learn about the world of growing healthy, organic garlic from 1 to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 22. This is the right time of year to plant the bulb for harvesting next summer and a perfect time for roasting. Come learn how to prepare the soil, plant the seeds, mulch appropriately and enjoy some roasted garlic with bread, straight from the farm's wood-fired mud oven. Seed garlic for planting will be available for sale. For directions and more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org. Fee is $12 for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members, and $16 for non-members.

Harvest Sip and Sample - Chef Maryann Saporito of Hola in Marshfield will prepare tapas and soup from Holly Hill Farm produce paired with wines from 4 to 7 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 22, inside the Tomato Barn. Cost is $30 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm,$40 for non-members. Space is limited so reserve ar spot by paying in advance at www.hollyhillfarm.org.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 17, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The pitter-patter of all those Sheep feet means that you're out and about, rushing to get more done. That's fine, but slow down by the weekend so you can heed some important advice.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're in charge of your own destiny these days, and, no doubt, you'll have that Bull's-eye of yours right on target. But don't forget to make time for family events.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be prepared for a power struggle that you don't want. Look to the helpful folks around you for advice on how to avoid it without losing the important gains you've made.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations! You're about to claim your hard-earned reward for your patience and persistence. Now, go out and enjoy some fun and games with friends and family.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat might find it difficult to shake off that listless feeling. But be patient. By week's end, your spirits will perk up and you'll be your perfectly purring self again.

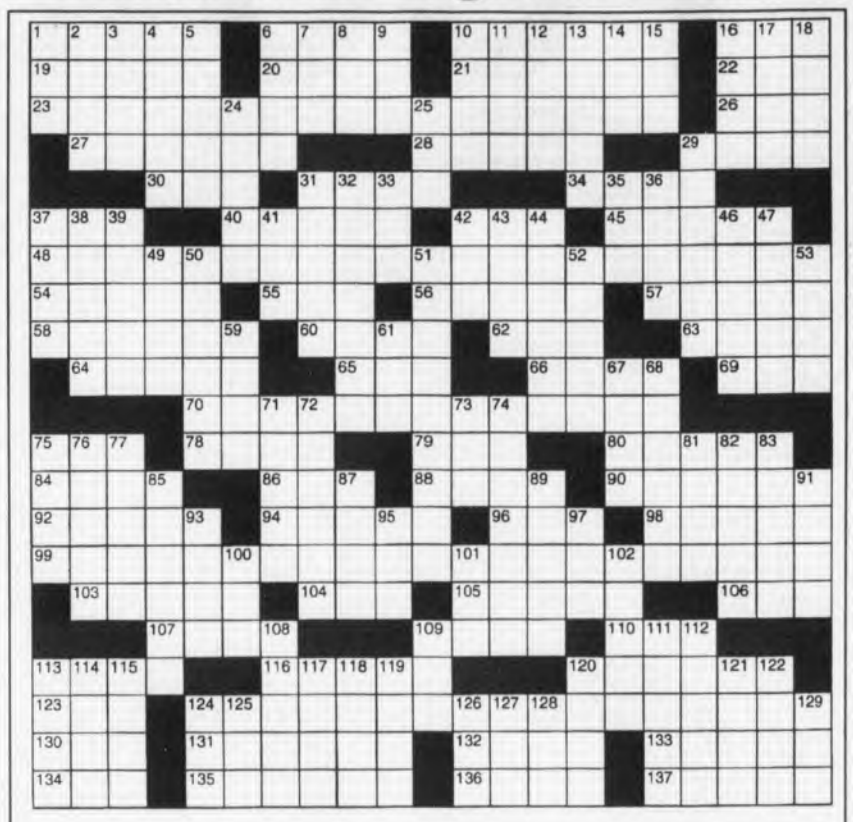
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A problem with a co-worker could prove to be a blessing in disguise when a superior steps in to investigate and discovers a situation that could prove helpful to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a favorable time to move ahead with your plans. Some setbacks are expected, but they're only temporary. Pick up the pace again and stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your creativity is recognized and rewarded. So go ahead and claim what you've earned. Meanwhile, that irksome and mysterious situation soon will be resolved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A new associate brings ideas that the wise Sagittarian quickly will realize can benefit both of you. Meanwhile, someone from the workplace makes an emotional request.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It might be a good idea to ease up on that hectic pace and spend more time studying things you'll need to know when more opportunities come later in November.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A relatively quiet time is now giving way to a period of high activity. Face it with the anticipation that it will bring you some well-deserved boons and benefits.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Go with the flow, or make waves? It's up to you. Either way, you'll get noticed. However, make up your own mind. Don't let anyone tell you what choices to make.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

Exploring spiritual path at New North

Women exploring a spiritual path are usually more filled with hard questions than easy answers. "Is my cup half empty, or is it half full?" If it is full, are the contents nourishing or depleting? Full of blessing or overflowing with contents that aren't nourishing?

Women of the community are invited to participate in a three-part series titled "No Ordinary Cup," which is based on the book "The Cup of Our Life" by Joyce Rupp. Dr. Kate Kallis, long time Hingham resident and formerly on the pastoral staff at South Church, UCC, Andover and an experienced leader of retreats, small study and support groups, will lead a team of presenters. Each two-hour session will include a safe environment to explore one's own particular expression and experience.

The three meetings will be held Thursday evenings at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham, on Oct. 27, Nov. 17, and Dec. 8. For further information and to register, which is required, contact Sue Wetzel at 781-749-8759, Janet Hersey Andrews at 781-749-4709, or Joy Turpie 781-738-4370. Rupp's book will be available for $10. Bring a favorite cup to the first session.

Faith Mapping to be part of retreat

Faith Mapping is a new technique for understanding how everything from geographical changes, life transitions and religious upbringing effects faith development.

Hingham Committee on Faith is sponsoring a retreat to help men explore the adventure of faith using techniques like Faith Mapping. Participants will work on creating their own faith map, learn how sharing their map with others provides insights, and enables them to plan for the next phase of their journey.

The retreat is titled Explore the Adventure of Faith and is sponsored by a group of Protestant and Roman Catholic laymen from the area. It will start Friday evening, Nov. 4, at New North Church and continue on Saturday, Nov. 5, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. New North Church is an interdenominational Christian community church in downtown Hingham across from the Lincoln Statue at 1 Lincoln St.

The experience is open to all men from the area. Cost is $20 for Friday and Saturday and includes dinner on Friday evening, a light breakfast and lunch on Saturday.

Hingham Committee on Faith is composed of Bob Murray, Craig Noble, Pat McGeoghegan, Jack Rayburn, Bill Turpie and Larry Wetzel. For information, call Bill Turpie, pastor of New North Church, at 781-760-2098.

Programs offered at St. Joseph's

St. Joseph Retreat Center, 339 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset is holding the following programs. The retreat house is often available for individual or group private retreats.

The Mornings of Prayer begin at 9 a.m. and end at 12:15 p.m. The cost is $25 for the morning, including light refreshments and use of the facility.

Register for three or more Mornings of Prayer during the 2011-12 schedule and receive a discount; see our website for a full listing of Mornings of Prayer.

The healing power of 'metta'

In light of October being Breast Cancer Awareness Month, it may be fruitful to consider some wisdom that has its roots in the ancient teachings of the Buddha.

If you are living with breast cancer or any other chronic illness, either as a patient or a loved one, you may be experiencing fear, confusion, and uncertainty. Helplessness and a wish to end any of that pain and suffering is a normal response to this difficult life challenge.

At times like these we may feel that there is nowhere else to turn, but turning inward is an option that may help us to deal with these feelings. Sitting back and observing our reactions will allow them to arise and eventually pass. Just as a rainstorm doesn't last forever, feelings can also ebb and flow.

The cultivation of lovingkindness or "metta" is a popular form of meditation in Buddhism. It is about holding yourself and your difficulties with care and tenderness. Metta is a practice that makes the heart sensitive to the joys and sorrows we are subject to. It helps us to discover our deep connection to all of life and end a sense of isolation.

To practice metta all you need to do is to get in touch with your heartfelt desire to be happy. Once you understand that this is ultimately what everybody wants you can start the practice first with self-compassion by saying phrases such as:

May I be happy
May I be at peace
May I live with ease
May I be free from suffering

As you repeat these phrases you may begin to feel more relaxed and at ease. After a while you begin to wish for happiness for other people in your life, as well as others in the world who may be in pain or suffering in some other way.

Consider the good feelings you get when you have helped a friend or neighbor in need. These are the same feelings that will arise by sending positive thoughts and loving energy toward yourself or another person.

Directing healing energy toward yourself and others has a calming effect on the mind and body. Lovingkindness meditation is also healthy for your brain as it actually stimulates the release of endorphins that are essential to a sense of well-being. Whether you are the patient or the loved one of someone who is ill, lovingkindness meditation can put you more at ease with your emotional and physical pain and enhance your overall health.

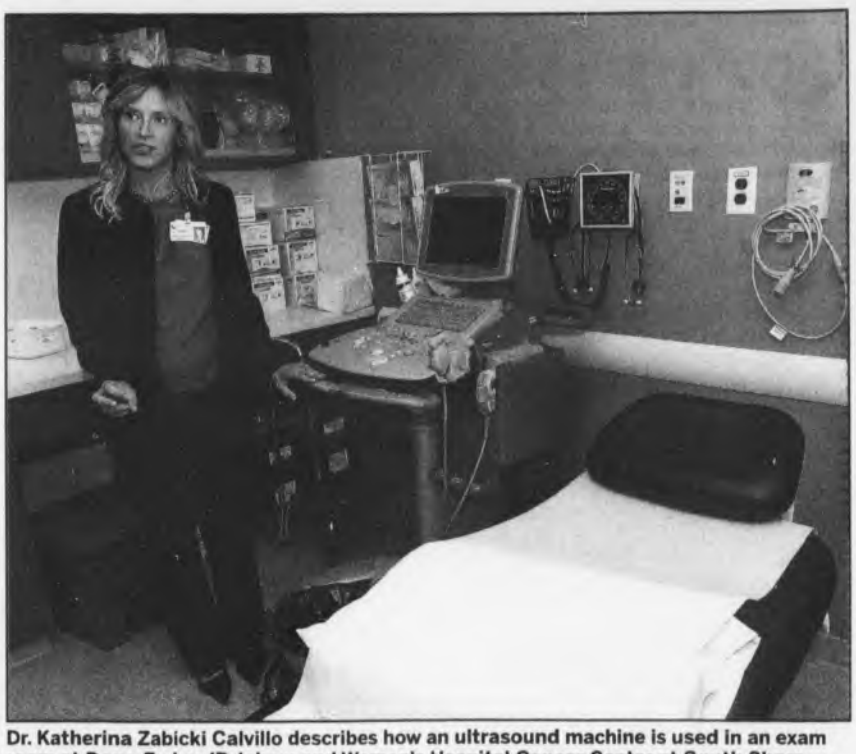
Lovingkindness meditation is a component of Mindfulness Based Stress Reduction. Participants in this program are taught to use relaxation techniques, yoga, and mindful meditation to help manage stress.

People come to MBSR for help with chronic pain, anxiety, depression, or illness. They leave with the ability to be more accepting of their struggles instead of trying to make them go away. This is a step on the path to freedom from suffering.



One woman in treatment for breast cancer who participated in the MBSR program last year said that it enabled her to change her relationship to her illness. It became less of a focus. She was able to attend to her family with greater ease, to clear her mind, relax, and have more overall energy for life.

"I found it very helpful," she said. The diagnosis and treatment "caused a lot of anxiety and extra stress on top of usual everyday stress." She was able to stop and quiet herself. It even helped with sleeping. She said, "You need to keep going and also be able to slow down and relax."

She was able to work with negative thoughts, explore their content, and let them go. On the five-hour retreat, which is a part of the program, she said that "the self-compassion meditation was a good release" and enabled her to connect with her capacity to care for herself and to be comforted.

Lauri Klein is a Clinical Social Worker in Hingham. She has more than 20 years of experience as a psychotherapist and teacher. She conducts Mindfulness Based Stress Reduction Programs and also offers Self-Compassion workshops and other mindfulness-based programs in the South Shore area through her business, The Path to Mindful Living.

SOUTH SHORE HOSPITAL

Getting Boston care locally

By Ed Baker
ebaker@wickedlocal.com

"It met its three-year projected patient number at the end of its first year of operation. This tells us there is a need being met, and it is an affirmation of what we built."
Sarah Darcy

South Shore Hospital's cancer treatment center makes it possible for a breast cancer patient to receive most, if not all, of the medical services that is offered at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

The $72 million Weymouth facility has been open for two years and serves approximately 350 patients each month.

"It met its three-year projected patient number at the end of its first year of operation," said hospital spokeswoman Sarah Darcy. "This tells us there is a need being met, and it is an affirmation of what we built."

The Breast Care Center provides a variety of services that include diagnosing patients with breast cancer, treatment, surgery and screening to detect cancer in its early stages. Patients can meet with a breast care specialist and go to a medical oncologist or diagnostic imaging room for more testing without leaving the building.

"We have medical oncology and surgical oncology," said Dr. Suniti Nimbkar, medical director of the center. "We offer diagnostic imaging and radiation. Once a woman or man comes in here, they can receive one-stop care."

Nimbkar said there are many ramifications a woman can experience after she has been diagnosed with breast cancer and the hospital has staff that is ready to assist.

"Sickness does not leave for a better economy," she said. "We had a situation where a woman's husband lost his job a week before she was supposed to start having chemotherapy. She called sobbing and said, 'We have no health insurance.' We told her to come in, and that we would figure out what to do and a social worker got her insurance in four hours."

Nimbkar said the center offers breast cancer patients and their families a variety of support groups.

"We have a regular survivors group that meets and a nutritional support group," she said. "They help people deal with issues that pertain to their treatment."

Patients additionally have access to a resource center that offers a variety of information about cancer treatment and self-care advice.

"All of our surgeries at the breast care center are the same as what is done at the Brigham and Women's Hospital," Nimbkar said. "Our center is a breast health center, and it is our intention to make sure women can get treatment for all breast health issues."

Nimbkar, Dr. Laura Dominici and Dr. Katherina Zabicki Calvillo perform surgery at the center. The surgeons additionally serve the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"We are accredited by the American College of Surgeons Oncology Group," Nimbkar said. "That is significant."

Nimbkar said the ACSOG makes sure that the highest standard of care is being offered at the Breast Care Center.

"We got a perfect score to get the accreditation," Darcy said. "We met all 27 points."

Nimbkar said the Breast Care Center is not an easy medical model for hospitals to replicate.

"One of the most important aspects of caring for a breast care patient is to have a multidisciplinary approach," she said. "There needs to be a team of dedicated people on a medical team who have a specific interest in breast care. There is no one recipe that fits every patient who walks in through these doors."

She said the Breast Care Center has a medical review group, or tumor board, that reviews 75 to 80 percent of the patient cases the facility is managing to determine the best level of treatment for each patient.

"We have a discussion that involves doctors who are involved in radiology, medical oncology and pathology," Nimbkar said. "We look at MRI images. If I have a case that is particularly challenging, I will bring it to the tumor board for review."

Calvillo said breast cancer treatments and surgery have come a long way over the years and that early detection is playing a big role for the increasing amount of women who survive the disease.

"Women are being diagnosed early," she said. "A test can be done by a medical oncologist to determine if chemotherapy should be done that is less toxic and less evasive. Our medical treatments are becoming very tailored to each patient. We've come a long way from performing radical mastectomy surgery on patients and total mastectomy surgery without removal of muscle."

Calvillo said lumpectomy surgery has permitted surgeons to remove tumors without having to remove a breast or the lymph nodes under a patient's arms.

"We still have access to the same clinical trials that are offered in Boston," she said. "Patients can be seen here or in Boston. I see patients in Boston and sometimes I bring them here because they are coming from the Cape and the Islands."

Yoga champions showcase in Cohasset

Joseph Encinia shares his personal story

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Looking at the professional athlete twist and turn his toned body into various complicated yoga poses, one could never tell he was once overweight and suffered a heart attack — at the age of 13.

Joseph Encinia is used to shocking onlookers with both his contortionist poses and his life story. The 26-year-old International Yoga Asana champion showcased his moves and shared his story to a packed auditorium at the Cohasset Middle School on Thursday, Oct. 20.

Yoga champion? Those familiar with the practice of yoga might give pause to this concept.

Yogis like Encinia, a native of Dallas, Texas, and female international yoga champion, Yukari Miwa of Tokyo, Japan, compete in yoga competitions around the globe. Encinia and Miwa competed against athletes from 34 different countries. The ultimate goal of the asana championships is to promote yoga as a sport and have it included in the Olympics. Competitive yoga demonstrations are similar to floor routines in gymnastics; but instead of tumbling, competitors present a three-minute exhibition of yoga poses, or asanas.

The middle school students were treated to 12-minute-long presentations from each yoga champion. The students showed their appreciation with claps and gasps as Encinia and Miwa each moved fluidly from pose to pose.

Both champions, sitting cross-legged on the auditorium stage, addressed the audience after their performances.

From heart attack to yoga champ

"I started this yoga about six years ago," Encinia told the kids, "and the physical ability that you see within both of us... standing on our hands, putting our feet behind our heads, doing backbends... It's not always been there. We had to work really, really, really hard to get to this point.

"Six years ago before I started, I suffered a lot. I was very weak, very sick and depressed."

At eight years old, Encinia was diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis.

"It's a really tough condition," he said. "Your joints, your elbows, your knees, your hips, even your ankles and shoulders swell up, and your range of motion is very limited. I

NEWS UPDATE

Water commissioner discusses shut-offs

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Last week, the Water Department announced that they would begin the process of shutting off customers for nonpayment.

"We will begin with the largest outstanding balances first. Any customer more than 30 days overd ue will be at risk to shut off," DeCaprio said.

"At this point, we are coordinating with the town treasurer to ascertain the status of outstanding balances. Once we confirm an outstanding balance exists, we will notify those customers via registered mail. Customers will then have three days to pay in full."

So far, DeCaprio said this week that the department has circulated a bill stuffer and will start with the top 10 overdue notices.

"We haven't gotten started yet because we're in the process of reconciling receivables with the town's," DeCaprio explained.

Considering the current restructuring of the finance department, and the fact town auditor Tony Roselli found a deficit of $350,000 (which was later changed to $95,397.77) in the water department, this task is easier said than done.

DeCaprio and Water Commissioner Lenora Jenkins have both disputed the numbers and claim that any deficit is a receivable, not an operational, one. The commissioners have pointed to outstanding balances from various town departments and the school department. Conversely, a state law established in 1994 and reaffirmed in 2008 does not allow the Water Commission to collect interdepartmental billing.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro also said that the school has paid its water bill for the past six years, long after they no longer had to do so.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin has been working to jointly manage the water and sewer departments. Audits conducted by both Roselli and John J. Sullivan of Melanson and Heath revealed significant deficits; Sullivan recommended that the Town Manager act as business manager for water and sewer.

During the Oct. 18 board of selectmen meeting, Coughlin presented a reorganization chart that reflects his authority to jointly manage the two departments.

DeCaprio said that the water department does not "want to put any inordinate pressure on town hall," but that his department is "dependent" on the town finance department. "If they can reconcile the receivables, we can get [the shut-off process] started.

"We don't want to cause any angst," said DeCaprio. "If people are uncertain, they can call us, or the town. If they think there's been an error in bill status, they should try to get it rectified."

Budget Planning Group meets Monday, Nov. 7

Fiscal 2013 picture emerging

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The budget planning subcommittee was scheduled to meet on Tuesday, Oct. 24, but had to postpone until Nov. 7.

The group will meet "to go over preliminary revenue estimates for the fiscal year 2013 budget," said Town Manager Mike Coughlin.

Coughlin wrote a memo dated for Oct. 27 to be sent to all of the department heads; it will be presented during the Tues. Nov. 1 Board of Selectmen meeting.

The memo includes a recap of Coughlin's first three months as town manager, a description of fiscal challenges (including Finance Director John Stanbrook's departure), a preliminary FY 13 revenue forecast, and Coughlin's recommendation to support a level services budget for FY 13 and increase reserve funds.

Coughlin wrote that he expects free cash to be certified in the range of $400-500K, and that the monies would be used to fund "minor capital projects" such as renovating the police and fire station. The balance would be used to replenish the stabilization fund.

The town manager also wrote that he is "cautiously optimistic" that the town will experience growth in revenue in preparation for FY 13. He expects to see a surplus, despite the FY 12 deficit in the Water Enterprise Fund, and anticipates this surplus will be debated at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting and enable the town to resolve the deficit and set the tax rate.

POLICE BEAT

Car stolen, later recovered

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 61-year-old Lighthouse Lane resident reported to police on Sunday morning (Oct. 23) that someone had apparently tried to steal his 1996 Toyota Camry parked on Government Island. He had left the car unlocked but had taken the keys. That morning he found his car door open and a screwdriver on the front seat that did not belong to him. It appeared that someone had tried to tamper with the ignition. Nothing was missing and the incident is under investigation.

About 90 minutes later a 52-year-old Parker Avenue man reported that his 1989 Jeep Wrangler had been stolen out of his driveway. He had left the keys in the vehicle overnight and when he came out in the morning, his Jeep was gone.

The following morning (Oct. 24), an officer on patrol located the Jeep parked by the Sailing Club on Government Island. There was no apparent damage but the keys were gone. Police found a bottle of liquor near the Jeep, which is being processed for evidence. The car theft is under investigation.

Clipped mirror

At 10:35 a.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 18), a 40-year-old Hingham woman went to the Cohasset Police Station to report she had clipped the mirror on the side of a Verizon 2008 Ford box truck. Police said the woman's 2011 Honda Pilot had moderate damage to the side panels, doors and fenders. There was minor damage to the Verizon truck.

The woman was headed west on Beechwood Street near Norman Todd Road when the mishap occurred. The truck was parked on the side of the road but was facing east.

Police said the Verizon had the proper safety cones deployed. Papers were exchanged. There were no citations and neither vehicle had to be towed.

Older driver

Police are keeping an eye out for a 74-year-old Cohasset woman for whom they have received complaints about her driving. There is concern that the resident is becoming forgetful and should not be driving. No specific infractions were detailed, police said.

Warrant arrest

An officer on patrol last Thursday (Oct. 20) at 3:26 p.m. pulled over a moped that was swerving all over its lane, police said. As it turned out the passenger on the moped, a 19-year-old Cohasset man had an outstanding warrant for trespassing. He was arrested on the warrant. The moped operator, a 20-year-old Cohasset man, was issued a citation for failure to stay in marked lanes, police said.

Panhandling

A 27-year-old Scituate man was sent on his way last Friday (Oct. 21) at 4 p.m. after complaints that he was asking people for money outside of Fiori's Gulf Station on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A).

Scooter

Police located a $100 Razor scooter, owned by a 12-year-old Cohasset boy, that was reported missing outside Tedeschi's in the village last Friday afternoon (Oct. 21). The boy went into the convenience store and when he came out, his scooter was gone, police said. Police located the scooter in the woods near the village where the alleged thief had apparently hid it.

Summonsed

A 25-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed to court for operating an uninsured and unregistered motor vehicle. An officer on patrol on North Main Street last Saturday (Oct. 22) at about 12:53 p.m., observed a 2002 Jeep Grand Cherokee near Quonahassit Trail with a flat tire. The officer stopped to assist but a registry check revealed the plates haD been revoked for nonpayment of insurance. The Jeep was towed, police said.

Tires slashed

A 25-year-old Hull man reported to police last Friday at around 3 p.m. that he had to have his car towed from Parking Way (the town parking lot) because its tires were slashed. Police said the man called to report the incident but did not provide further information or come to the station.

Pumpkins taken

Callers from Norfolk Road and Smith Place reported pumpkins missing last Tuesday (Oct. 18). The caller from Smith Place said six pumpkins were taken. The callers wanted the incidents logged, police said.

THE GREAT HALLOWEEN CANDY BUY BACK!

Money for You - Candy for the Troops!

One area dentist is redefining the phrase "put your money where your mouth is." This Halloween, trick-or-treaters can bring their excess candy to Abington Family Dental Care in Abington and receive $1 per pound ($10 maximum). Dr. Mike Thomas is leading this anti-decay movement by giving away dollars and toothbrushes in exchange for cavity-provoking candy.

"Ditch the candy, that's what we're saying. Visiting your dentist twice a year and brushing and flossing daily are great preventative measures, but doing away with excess sweets altogether would really give your teeth a healthy boost," says Dr. Mike Thomas from Abington Family Dental Care. "Kids can still have all of the fun of trick-or-treating, and now their piggy banks will benefit as well."

HOW TO PARTICIPATE:

Candy will be collected at Abington Family Dental Care at 477 Washington St. (old Alger building next to our office) in Abington on Tuesday, November 1, 2011, from 3-6pm. The candy must be unopened. Please no bites. It will then be shipped to our troops overseas.

Dr. Mike Thomas at Abington Family Dental Care in Abington emphasizes general family dental care as well as cosmetic procedures. Dr. Thomas and staff are available to provide more information at 781-878-2190, or visit Abington Family Dental Care on-line at www.abingtonfamilydentalcare.com.

COHASSET CABARET

Ensemble members practice the 50's compilation during a dress rehearsal for the upcoming Cohasset Cabaret 2011 "That's Entertainment" at St. Anthony's Parish Hall. PHOTO/K A. MACDONALD

Lots of music you will love!

What:
Cohasset Cabaret 2011 "That's Entertainment" will take place Friday, Nov. 4 and Saturday, Nov. 5. Social hour is at 7 p.m.; the show starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale now and cost $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at South Shore Community Center. Call 781-413-7540 for more information.
Many people have asked about Cabaret 2011, such as is this a new show? If so, how is it different from last year?

What changed this year from last?
They are presenting a format show where the director has selected most of the show tunes and has choreographed the singers into an ensemble.

How is this different from last year?
The show this year will feature more group singing such as you would see on Broadway, movie musicals, and show tunes. Also the group numbers will be costumed and of course there will be solos, duets, trios, and quartets. Another feature of a Doug Trudeau show is comedy and there will be some great classic numbers for all to enjoy.

Will the music be from different periods?
Yes, you will hear rock music from the 50s, old and new musicals, to classic songs from today's musical artists. Some to sum it all up, "That's Entertainment" will be an up tempo musical revue that will provide a nice variety of numbers from Broadway and movie musicals. The show will be comprised of solo and group numbers, comedy, and of course toe tapping dancing. The cast will be some familiar faces from our prior shows and performers from the critically acclaimed Showstoppers organization.

More information
You can try your luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "Cabaret Style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.
Tickets are on sale now and the cost is $25. You can purchase tickets at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-413-7540 for further information.

Can you open your heart for Carlos and Carlita?

They have never had their own home, and we're hoping that someone who understands felines, will consider giving them a chance.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Carlos and Carlita. These two beautiful felines came to the shelter as feral (living outdoors) kittens. They are now, well over a year old, and though they will probably never be "lap cats," they are fairly domesticated. They are quite playful; they get along well with each other and other cats.

Carlos and Carlita purr when you pet them. They have never had their own home, and we're hoping that someone who understands felines, will consider giving them a chance. They are lots of fun and could do well in a family with older children. Please stop by and meet Carlos and Carlita.

HSAR would consider letting them go separately, but only if there is another cat in the home. They are so accustomed to felines company, that HSAR doubts either would do well as an "only" cat. They would love to be adopted together.

Now is the "purrfect" time to adopt that cat or kitten you've been waiting for. HSAR has a shelter filled with adoptable felines, so please check out their website at www.hsar.org to view some of the available cats and kittens.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

HSAR thanks the many people who generously donate to their cause. They couldn't do it without you!

HSAR's 2012 Kittendales Calendar is now available. Joanne Berman, and her sister, Susan Berman Davis, have donated their time and talent to this collectible and unique calendar. It makes a great holiday gift.

Con Com discusses fining Avalon

AvalonBay Communities may be looking at a $25,000 fine for ignoring actions and warnings required by the Cohasset Conservation Commission.

AvalonBay has worked on street repairs that has impacted abutting wetlands. An after-the-fact notice of intent (NOI) application was filed. If it is discovered that AvalonBay did in fact ignore the Con Com's warnings, the company could face a fine of up to $25,000, the maximum amount allowed by state law.

The commission discussed the issue during their Oct. 6 meeting, and a representative from Avalon attended the following meeting on Oct. 20.

Commission chairman David Farrag said that in lieu of a fine, AvalonBay could perhaps use company equipment to perform rain-garden maintenance around town.

An AvalonBay rep may appear at the next Con Com meeting, Farrag said.

"No action has been taken," the chairman said. "The ball was put in their court."

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS SERIES

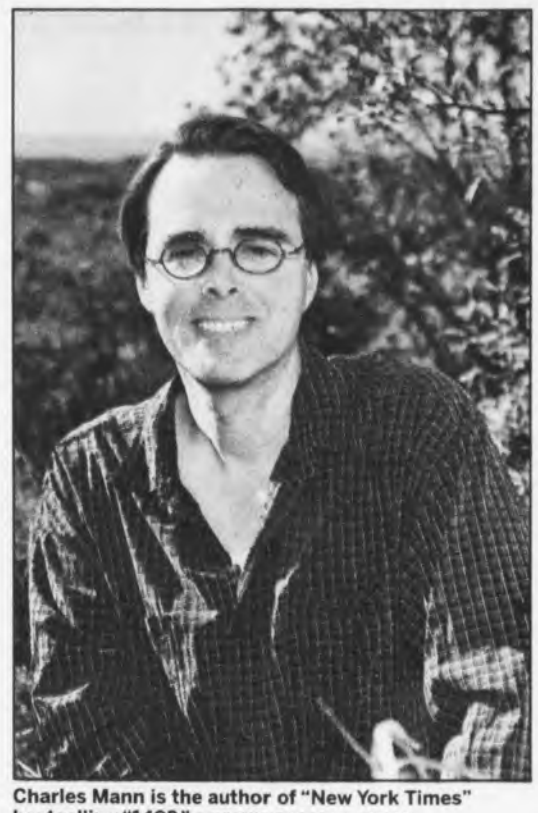
Best-selling author of '1493' coming to Cohasset

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

"1493" is a big book about a big event — in fact, the most monumental biological event since the death of dinosaurs, one that sparked the beginnings of the modern world.

Charles Mann, author of "New York Times" bestselling "1493," will speak at "Sunday AuthorTalks" at the Cohasset Library on Sunday, Nov. 6, at 4 p.m. — the second in a series of eight AuthorTalks. In this passionate work of encyclopedic detail, Mann challenges a number of our commonly held assumptions.

Mann's book is about the Columbian Exchange — the transfer of plants, animals, germs, and people across continents over the last 500 years. Mann rightly claims that only by understanding these phenomena can we make sense of globalization today.



The event that touched off this process was Christopher Columbus's voyage to the Americas which created a single worldwide network of economic and ecological exchange, one which devastated a formerly invincible imperial China, fostered the rise of Europe, wiped out between 70 and 90 percent of indigenous peoples in the Americas, and ignited some of today's fiercest political issues, from immigration to culture wars to foreign trade policies.

Ian Morris, in his "New York Times" review of Mann's book, says it best: "The Columbian Exchange has shaped everything about the modern world. It brought us the plants we tend in our gardens and the pests that eat them. And as it accelerates in the 21st century, it may take both away again. If you want to understand why, read '1493.'" And/or come and hear Charles Mann's talk on November 6. It promises to be a lively and informative presentation.

Charles C. Mann has written for a wide variety of publications, including the "Atlantic," "Vanity Fair," "Fortune," the "New York Times," as well as for the series "Law and Order." He is the recipient of a number of writing awards; "1491," his first book, won the National Academies Communication Award for the best book of the year. He lives in Amherst, Massachusetts.

Following Mann's talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for conversation and book signing. "1493" will be available for purchase.

Admission is free, but seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library, Buttonwood Books, Cohasset Historical Society, and the South Shore Art Center, or call Cohasset Library 781-383-1348, ext 1, to reserve a seat. Visit cohassetlibrary.org for more information about "Sunday AuthorTalks."

INTERGENERATIONAL CELEBRATION:

Students serve seniors Halloween-themed dinner

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"This was a nice coming together of the young and the old," said Rosmarie Engel-Conn, one of the senior citizens who arrived at the Second Congregational Church Monday evening decked out in a fashionable Halloween costume, resplendent with a giant silver bow.

High school student volunteers partnered with the Council on Elder Affairs and Friends of Paul Pratt Memorial Library outreach to serve dinner to seniors at Second Congregational on Oct. 24.

Both students and seniors alike dressed in Halloween costumes and played a holiday-inspired game of Catchphrase. The teenagers prepared all of the food; the evening's menu included vegetable lasagna, macaroni and cheese and spanikopita.

Marjorie Murphy of the Cohasset Elder Affairs said that the Reverend Gary Ritts of Second Congregational graciously donated the church hall for the event. The students met at the hall at 4 pm Monday to decorate an hour before the event.

Ellie Tedeschi and Chrissy Secatore, seniors at Cohasset High, started the volunteer group last fall along with senior Isabel Robinson, who was unable to attend that night. This event was the first the students have coordinated with the Elder Affairs. Fifteen student volunteers participated in the event, taking the seniors' orders, bringing them food and pouring drinks. Several members of the volunteer group were unable to attend due to a soccer game that evening.

Tedeschi told the seniors that she plans to have the volunteer group do something with the seniors each month.

The Halloween-themed dinner was "the perfect way to start off this relationship" between the students and seniors, said Tedeschi. "We have a lot planned, and we hope to continue the relationship between the senior center and the high school for a long time."

SENIORS

Tedeschi and Secatore shared some ideas for how the students may be of service to the seniors in the community. One idea is to help the seniors write their autobiographies; the teens are also willing to provide technology help, such as showing the elderly how to use the Wii video game system to enjoy activities like bowling.

"Anything you need, let us know," Tedeschi said.

The girls also said that the student volunteers could come around to play games like Scrabble and bingo.

"Start thinking of things you want to do because they want to interact with you," said Murphy. "I think that's a cool thing."

Cohasset Elder Affairs vice chairman Anna Abbruzzese was in attendance – and in costume – at the dinner and suggested organizing a book sale fundraiser with the student volunteers. She plans to sell used books from a push-cart she had purchased for the farmer's market. Murphy said that the book sale will likely be the next event coordinated by the students and senior center.

After serving dinner, coffee and dessert, the students sat with the seniors to form groups to play Catchphrase. The kids presented a special Halloween edition of the game. It was evident from the laughter and smiles around the room that both generations were enjoying the festivities.

"This is a wonderful event, and well organized," said Martha Horsefield, coordinator of volunteer services for Elder Affairs.

Carol Barrett, outreach coordinator, called the teenagers "very creative."

Tedeschi called the first outreach event between the students and seniors a success.

"I think it went great," she said. "I'm hoping we can continue doing stuff, and hopefully when Chrissy, Izzy and I aren't here, it keeps going."

"Everybody enjoyed themselves," said Murphy. "It's a really nice intergenerational thing."

TEAM EFFORT

New jackets help unify DPW, Facilities Management

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We're trying to get the resources and equipment needed to get the job done, which translates into better services to the citizens and the taxpayers."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

The Department of Public Works and Facilities Management employees are often referred to as the unsung heroes of town government. But Town Manager Mike Coughlin wants to highlight the hard work they do; with their new reflective neon yellow jackets, the team is being highlighted in the literal sense.

The new jackets were issued to the employees in the aftermath of Tropical Storm Irene; the federal government also mandates that town public works employees have a town-issued safety uniform.

"Because of federal safety factors, the fact that they didn't have them available during hurricane Irene was the impetus to get them ordered," said Coughlin.

"I think there are two functions for new garments," said Tom Gruber, town engineer and special assistant to the Town Manager. "One is safety — there's a new rule going into play, and certain minimum standards" required for employee safety while working on public roads. The second function, said Gruber, is to identify the town employees.

"We want people to know they belong to town and they're not independent contractors out there doing something else. It has to do with identifying who we are, along with various members of the operations team; that's why Mark [Brennan, also a town engineer and special assistant to the Town Manager] and I have them."

The new jackets are not the only change happening at the DPW and Facilities Management.

There is a "positive evolution of a team effort throughout the department," said Coughlin. "We're trying to get the resources and equipment needed to get the job done, which translates into better services to the citizens and the taxpayers."

Gruber, who was able to conduct phone interviews from his cell phone while working at the tidal gates on Tuesday and Wednesday, also said that the departments are "trying to get flexibility among resources" for the departments.

Coughlin stressed that having proper equipment and resources is essential.

"We have a responsibility to protect workers," the town manager said. "If someone gets injured on the job and failure to have proper safety gear, you pay twofold: less workers, and higher insurance premiums."

sonnel," said Gruber. "A good example is during Irene; a lot of people did a lot of different things they ordinarily would not be working on; manpower was needed. For example, we had the fire department doing things they wouldn't ordinarily do, the water department loaning equipment to fire, and DPW out distributing water and picking up trash. There were a lot of people pitching in.

"There's an old saying: many hands make light work," said Gruber. "That's exactly what we're trying to do."

Gruber went on to say that rather than having "isolated departments with isolated functions," the goal is to have the employees work together to provide support.

"Public Works is always the orphan child of government services," said Coughlin. "There's always a struggle in manpower and resources."

And while new jackets may not be the solution to all of the department's challenges, they seem to help foster a sense of unity. On Monday morning, members of both the DPW and Facilities Management team gathered outside the Public Works building for a group photo in their new gear.

Coughlin said that he is thrilled to "see this type of developing pride in an organization."

DIRTY JOBS

Gruber provides guide to the DPW and Facilities Management functions

DPW: "It used to be the highway department—roads, drainage pipes, etc. Cat Dam falls under this function as well."
Trees and Parks: "Responsible for mowing grassy areas around town, including the schools. They also have the responsibility to maintain the trees, pick up limbs, things of that nature."
Cemetery group: "Responsible for grave openings, except for mowing... They dig graves and, after funerals, have to close them up. This is only for the two town cemeteries, Beechwood and Woodside."
Transfer station: "Their job is to handle the orderly keeping of materials brought in—trash, recycling, etc. They also have to manage yard waste, and do the grinding of leaves to create the mulch pile that people can help themselves to."
Facilities group: "Responsible for taking care of all the buildings in town; 50 percent of their effort is directed at the schools, but this varies day to day. The schools have a huge number of square footage to take care of. They're also responsible for the janitorial responsibilities in all the [town-owned] buildings. Mark Kelly is the head, and there are only three people there; they have to hire outside contractors such as energy control systems, electricians and plumbers—people who are specialized in the maintenance that they [Facilities] don't do... The fact is that they have to work with a huge number of subcontractors who are specialists in their field, and do best the they can to supervise that work—it's highly intricate."
All in all: "Those guys work incredible hours. It's a big job."

Why Do You Want to Get Fit?

By Elizabeth Johnson

Many gym-goers know what the advantages are of exercise and improved nutrition: reduced risk of many lethal diseases, improved overall quality of life, and sense of confidence that shines through a healthier body. What about the "why"? The "why" is the critical piece of the puzzle that makes the goal so important and worth working towards. For some women, being fit, active and healthy for their children is the ultimate reason. For others, it's finally feeling confident in their jeans and t-shirt and wanting to go shopping for more.

Schedule time for yourself to really sit down and think about your health and fitness goals, your plan for reaching them, and why they are important to you. The managers and personal trainers at Get In Shape For Women can do just that with you. The result is a plan for success.

Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff holds you accountable by scheduling your appointments, checking in with your nutrition, and focusing on getting you results you want! Our program is composed of weight training, cardio, supportive nutrition and accountability to help you meet your goal. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com.

Read Anita's story about why her goal was so important.

Right after getting married, my husband and I decided we were ready for children. But I was having a difficult time conceiving. I was always a big girl and I eventually just got used to being the size I was, but in the three years after I had gotten married, I became the heaviest I had ever been. My doctor finally said my weight had become a factor in my inability to become pregnant. I couldn't believe how heavy I had really gotten until I saw pictures of myself after a trip to Boston. I decided it was time to make a change.

I always joined gyms with friends, which only gave me more excuses NOT to go when our schedules would conflict. When I got the advertisement in the mail for Get In Shape For Women's Open House, I knew I had to join on my own; I couldn't afford any more excuses. During my interview, when I was asked what my ultimate goal was, my reply was simple: "To become healthy so I can have a baby and be the best mom I can be."

On my 35th birthday, I scheduled a doctor's appointment (for a mid-life crisis check-up!) When I got on the scale, I learned I was 4 lbs shy of my goal... but losing 31 lbs. in 5 months was a huge accomplishment for me. I felt like a new person. That day, the scale wasn't my only surprise. While waiting what seemed a lifetime in the exam room, the nurse and doctor both came in and handed me a pregnancy test. It was positive. I learned you CAN reach your ultimate goal, even if you miss some milestones along the way, you just can't ever give up.

OUR VIEW

Calling out National Grid

Tropical Storm Irene is now a distant memory for most of us. The warm weather through most of September and nearly all of October has been nothing short of spectacular.

However, it is important that we do not forget that Cohasset and many surrounding towns were without power for up to a week or longer due to the then downgraded "Hurricane" Irene.

We are not electrical power or tree-trimming experts – but, from what we could tell, many of the power outages were due to lack of tree maintenance by National Grid. Limbs and branches fell on wires all over the place.

Tropical Storm Irene also hit next door in Hingham and down the road in Braintree – where there are plenty of trees but were very few outages. Those who were without power in those towns were back up in a couple of hours. What was different in those towns? Simply put, they have their own local power companies that know their communities. The Cohasset Mariner office, which is shared with the Hingham Journal, is in downtown Hingham. We can speak from experience that tree and pole maintenance are ongoing in Hingham.

We applaud the majority of our Board of Selectmen for supporting Town Manager Mike Coughlin's efforts to file a petition to have National Grid reimburse Cohasset for costs incurred during the extended outage. During public hearings, Couglin also plans to let National Grid know their lack of timely response during Irene was unacceptable.

While Irene was a major storm in many other states – it had been downgraded by the time it reached us. What we had was a windstorm: one that should not have shut us down for so long.

Cohasset government and public safety officials rose to the occasion in this town, checking on those without power, among many other outreach efforts. That was an example of the best type of local government – one that cares about the safety and well being of each and every citizen.

New Englanders know about storms – we have been through many of the severe variety. We all understand what it means to be snowed in or flooded out. Irene was not in that class.

National Grid must be taken to task for its poor response and lack of planning or it is very likely that recent history will repeat itself.

STATEHOUSE UPDATE

Cohasset in line for restored local aid

Rep. Garrett J. Bradley and Sen. Robert L. Hedlund said Cohasset will receive an additional $31,464 in local aid restored through passage of a supplemental budget. The funds reflect better than expected revenue figures for the first part of Fiscal Year 2012, which began July 1.

"With this restored funding, local communities such as Cohasset will have the same amount of unrestricted general aid as they had in FY 2011," said Bradley. "This restored funding will prove critical to ensuring the delivery of town services that local residents expect from their government, and I hope this trend signals an improving economic future."

Hedlund said he was encouraged by the restoration of the FY 11 unrestricted local aid levels in the passage of the Supplemental Budget approved by the legislature. "This aid will provide critical relief to our communities, and is a positive sign for the rebounding of the Commonwealth's economy. I am optimistic that the upward trend in the state's revenue figures will continue," he said.

According to the House Committee on Ways and Means, during deliberations on the FY2012 state budget, $65 million of unrestricted general government aid was held back due to serious concerns over the pace of revenues coming in to the State. Recently, enough revenue has been certified by state officials to warrant restoring that funding to local towns.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

Potatoes: More precious than silver and gold?

MARY KENNEDY

A diet enriched with the multi-vitamin foods found in the New World vastly improved the quality of life in Europe. At the top of the list of edible "treasures" was the potato.

Little Ice Age: The period from about 1400 to 1900, characterized by the expansion of mountain glaciers and cooling of global temperatures. (American Heritage Science Dictionary).

Western Europe in 1491: just another year during the Little Ice Age. For more than a century or so rich and poor alike had endured disease, dirt, darkness, and a dismal diet. Peasant fare included oats and barley — baked into bread and brewed into ale — onions, cabbage, salt pork and watery porridge (gruel). The rich feasted on beef, pork, mutton, and poultry. The diet of both groups lacked most of the vitamins now considered essential for health and vitality.

Longer winters and wetter weather shortened the growing season by one to two months compared to the present. Grain harvests were consistently poorer than they had been during the warmer Medieval period. Famines were frequent and reports of cannibalism rose. It was not uncommon for unscrupulous merchants to sell "two-legged" mutton.

The Little Ice Age had a devastating effect on the health of Europeans during the 1400s. Starvation killed millions and poor nutrition weakened millions more. Pity the poor peasant whose fields of grain were not only heavily taxed by rich landowners, but also regularly plundered by marauding armies on the march.

Then in 1492, along came Columbus to "sail the ocean blue," four voyages in a desperate search of a sea route to the Indies. He died penniless and alone, having disappointed Queen Isabella by failing to find either spices or precious metals. And yet, just a few years later, ships began entering European ports carrying items which later proved far more priceless than gold and silver: potatoes, tomatoes, corn, peanuts, peppers, beans, squash — and chocolate! Thanks to the foodstuffs first brought back in his ships and in the ships of those who followed him, population increased. A diet enriched with the multi-vitamin foods found in the New World vastly improved the quality of life in Europe. At the top of the list of edible "treasures" was the potato. As one of the four protein staples required for human nourishment, the others are wheat, rice, maize, potatoes provide an adequately balanced diet. They also produce more calories per acre than any other crop. The poor peasant whose family starved because the grain stored in his barn was easy to steal, was saved by potatoes. Safely concealed underground, for up to a year, they provided a cheap and nutritious daily staple during the long winters. Once it was found that a whole family could live on a single acre of potato land, the popularity of potatoes spread from Ireland across Europe to Russia.

English herbalist John Gerard, in his book "Generall Historie of Plantes," published in 1597, enthusiastically recommended a meal of potatoes as a stimulus to sexual potency.

Like potatoes, tomatoes have a high vitamin content that grains lack. Earning the nickname "apple of love" because of its suspected aphrodisiac properties, tomatoes were considered poisonous by some, craved by others. Perhaps the potency of vitamins A and C contained in both potatoes and tomatoes, contributed to increased potency? English herbalist John Gerard, in his book "Generall Historie of Plantes," published in 1597, enthusiastically recommended a meal of potatoes as a stimulus to sexual potency.

While the controversy over Columbus, courageous navigator or scoundrel of the seas continues today, there is agreement among historians about the benefits of the vitamin-enriched New World foods. The surge of population and spread of industrialization in northern Europe, with resulting shifts of power since 1750, simply could not have followed their actual course without the nourishment provided by expanding field of potatoes. We're losing our religion

There's a lot that goes into your local community newspaper. You can count on us for the latest news from your town government, police and fire departments. You turn to us to find out what's going on in the schools, at the library or with local sports.

You can find out what's happening with your neighbors and friends in town, who's getting married or engaged, who had a baby, who is celebrating a milestone anniversary and who's doing well at college, among other things.

When we do our job right, the pages of the newspaper and the content we post to the Wicked Local website is a good reflection of all aspects of the community.

One area we could do better, though, is covering religion.

For some reason — or maybe there are multiple reasons — we don't do as good a job covering religion as we do other areas of the community.

Covering religion can be tricky.

To avoid possibly offending someone or printing something that is off base, we tend to take the safe route when it comes to religion.

In many cases, that means we run a long listing of worship services that covers the community and a few surrounding communities. Most of the listing is stagnant information detailing an address, phone number, email address and other useful information. A few places of worship will send an updated weekly schedule detailing that weekend's service and upcoming events, although that occurs more often right around Easter and Christmas, or the Jewish holidays, when more special services are being held.

In addition to a long listing, the extent of our worship news coverage will often include a listing of events going on at various locations — everything from a healing service to an annual holiday bazaar being held at a church.

Another example of us playing it safe is evident with the title we use for that section or page in the newspaper. Many years ago, it was called Church News, perhaps more out of ignorance than insensitivity. Of course, not all religious places of worship are churches, as in synagogues and mosques. To be more politically correct, we use Worship or Faith as our heading.

While safe is easy, it doesn't paint a complete picture of this important aspect of the community.

While we don't intend our newspapers to become The Pilot or a weekly republication of a Missal, we could do a better job of covering the religious community by enlisting those who serve it.

In some communities, like Hingham, reverends, pastors, priests and rabbis write regular columns for our newspapers. For the most part, the columns deal with everyday issues people face and less with specifics or a particular religion. That's a good start, but there's more happening beyond the occasional feature we do welcoming a new clergy member to town or running a long listing of religious services and events.

Your feedback in this area is most welcome. Please send along story ideas and/or examples of religious coverage you've seen elsewhere and we'll try to do better with this important segment of the community.

SERIES OF MEMOIRS

The Cohasset Mariner has occasionally published memoirs from Cohasset resident Rosmarie Engel-Conn. The 85-year-old native of Germany has written down some of her most vivid memories and experiences as a teenager during World War II.
She lived under Adolf Hitler's rule, worked in an ammunitions factory as part of mandated service to the country, narrowly survived the bombing of Dresden, and escaped harm when the Russian army marched into her village just outside of Wittenburg.
She also has written memoirs of her life after WWII and experiences that shaped her life.

Eating – at the end and after war in Germany

By Rosmarie Engel-Conn
Special to the Mariner

It was not real hunger I suffered, but the continuity of getting smaller portions of everything and the lack or even loss of many foods you were used to, made daily life difficult and unpleasant.

Sometimes, when I sit in front of a plate, filled with an abundance of seductive smelling and delicious looking food-many memories are coming back. Memories when plates were barely and poorly filled in the harsh times I experienced during and after World War II in my home country Germany.

After the war began in Sept.1939, at once restrictions of the supply in the food sector occurred. They didn't feel too bad at this time, because for the sake of fighting and ending a war victoriously, you were willing, to accept everything possible. You wanted to be a part in enduring the necessary regulations set forth by the government. But when the following years became harder and the food supply much more limited, one really "had to pull the girdle together." It was not real hunger, I suffered, but the continuity of getting smaller portions of everything and the lack or even loss of many foods, you were used to, made daily life difficult and unpleasant.

I was just a teenager at this time, living in Saxony/Germany and looking back, I have a growing respect for all the people who lived around me - especially for my very inventive mother. She, full of ideas, born out of need, prepared during the last years of the war and afterwards, meals for her family out of nearly nothing! Meals, which not only fed the family, but at many occasions, were pleasing also.

I remember, when there was no fish or seafood available anymore, my mother cooked potatoes, mashed and spiced them with pepper and salt. But how to get the wanted fish-taste? She added some tablespoons of cod liver-oil and formed shapes of fishes out of the spicy mass. They were fried on both sides, brown and crusty, and served with a salad. "Voila," Julia Child would have said "Quel repas - what a meal!" And really, when I took a bite with closed eyes, I had the taste of fish on my tongue.

There was another - kind of strange way — to make the most out of the limited food supply, which was in reach. The region where I lived in Saxony, was rich in growing the so called: sour-cherries. A small sized, dark red, sour tasting cherry. It was only used for cooking jams, preserves, compotes, or baking cakes. All of which were very tasty-if a lot of sugar was added. But now in the harsh war and after war times, not only the meat of the fruit was used, no, the pits itself became important. These discarded, blood red dripping small pits were collected in a pot and covered with water. Cooked for a short time, they became the stock for a — kind of weak, lightly bitter tasting cherry soup.

Or another example: Because of the lack of butter and oil, which you needed for frying in a pan, my mother took the brown leftover ground of our malt-coffee, mixed it with a little water, and in some way, it did the job of frying items in the pan.

Mentioning coffee, I wasn't used to drinking coffee and didn't miss it. But I remember many of the elder people considered the lack of their daily cup of coffee as one of the things, they missed the most; coffee beans were totally out of reach.

So, people used malt-beans as a substitute. Roasted, ground and boiled, they gave a slightly brown, weak tasting beverage. The price for real coffee, shortly after 1945, was 360.-DM a pound — and it was nearly impossible to get some. There was only the so called - and forbidden - Black Market, were you eventually could buy it. All was difficult! To come to the nearest one of us, my father, who safely returned from Russia, one year after the war had ended, took some jewelry, good porcelain etc. and put it in an old brown leather-briefcase. To carry it, should give him a business-man-like appearance. Together with some other people, sitting on an open truck, he took part in a ride to Berlin, ca. 90 km away. They left very early in the morning, and all the people had the intention - with some caution and luck - to swap or to buy food, which was desperately needed. The cost of a pound of butter on the Black Market for instance was 250.-DM, a package of cigarettes 20.-DM, a plate of chocolate 80.-DM — if you could get it — at all!

The truck returned late at night and my father was eagerly awaited by the whole family. We were so relieved, when he entered the house, because the forbidden dealing on the Black Market was constantly controlled by police. It could end in capture and punishment.

I remember one time...after returning, my father unpacked the old leather briefcase. As a last item, slowly he took something out, we didn't need at all - but which was a wonderful surprise! An unexpected treat for my mother; my two siblings 19 and 13 years old and me. Smiling, he held a colorful decorated flat box, filled with chocolate candies, up in the air. I don't overestimate the timeframe we spent, when I say, we sat around the table for nearly one hour - in delight of something we all hadn't had for so many years. My mother opened the box, then it made the round from one to the other, to inhale the incredible missed smell of chocolate. Now, when my father read to us the information about the ingredients, listed on the box - so quiet it was and I felt my mouth watering inside.

To choose a piece, when the box made the round again, was done slowly and carefully. When everyone sat with a piece of filled candy between his fingers, no one took it as a whole, no, but took a small bite first, with closed eyes. Full attention was spent to a long missed and highly appreciated wonderful taste. Nobody spoke- or laughed - it was a very serious happening, and I can never forget it.

But this event was an exception in the routine of the daily simple food, which was in our reach.

On Sunday mornings, weather permitting; my father took his bicycle out of the garage - which not sheltered a car anymore since years. He fastened the old brown leather briefcase on the back of the bicycle and started - one can call it - a food hunting tour.

He crossed the flat countryside and mostly "welcomed" by the sharp, unfriendly barking of a big dog, he knocked at the doors of those farmers who owned a larger property. He showed to them and offered some nice pieces of jewelry or porcelain etc, which he wanted to exchange for food. Mainly fresh butter, eggs or meat he was asking for.

The farmers, now used to these visitors on Sundays, not always received them friendly - but slammed their doors in front of the unwanted visitors. But sometimes, when they liked an item, they were willing and agreed to an exchange.

Born out of need, to get some much wanted food on the table for his family, my father did this exhausting and humiliating job on Sunday mornings - for which, looking back - I admire and thank him today.

In the morning, we ate mostly a hot rye - soup, dark brown, spiced with cinnamon and sugar. When there was no more cinnamon available, only sugar gave a slightly better taste to the bitter rye soup.

At lunchtime, the so called "Mittagessen"— mid day meal—, the main meal in a German household, consisted mostly of potatoes. Potatoes in many forms: cooked, roasted, mashed, fried, as a salad etc. Sometimes the potatoes had even to replace the rare flour — as in the, so called "Kartoffelkuchen." It was baked in the tall shape of a coffeecake, and when it was cut, I had a steamy, hot, huge piece on my plate, which was satisfying and tasted special. Potatoes were more available than all other food - mainly because everyone who had a garden or only a front yard, planted potatoes. They were all over.

Sometimes, seeing so many potatoes plants around, it came to my mind, that Frederic the Great, King of Prussia, would have been very pleased, to see them. He was the one, who introduced the potato around 1750 to the Germans — and they despised them! The strange, unknown plant from South America, of which, ironically, they were supposed to eat the dirty roots. But the king, with the help of his controlling soldiers, forced his people again and again to plant them, until they finally adapted the potato.

But back to the last meal of the day, the "Abendbrot" - evening meal. It consisted of slices of bread, dry or with butter, combined with everything which was available, accompanied by herb tea.- Do I have to mention, that in those years, everyone - really everyone -looked thin and bony. The suits and dresses were hanging down on the bodies - shapeless. Nearly five years of war had taken a heavy toll. I said before, it impresses me up to today, how those hard war- and after wartimes enabled people to be inventive and full of ideas - using so far unknown methods and combinations, to create meals out of nearly nothing - for the sake of surviving.

I have to add, that two habits, born during these hard years stayed with me for all my later life, up to today. I cannot throw away any food or leftovers. And I always try to empty my plate. I have learned - the hard way - how much needed and how precious our daily food is.

was on a lot of medication... my knees would swell up to the size of a big grapefruit."

Encinia's physical ailments kept him sidelined during gym class, and competing in school sports was not an option.

The champion yogi has a twin brother, Matthew, who was, growing up, an "all-star athlete," said Encinia. "He played every sport out there, and I was pretty envious of this. But I was like, this is my life; I take my medicine, I'll get used to it.

"Well, when I was 11 years old - your age - I had surgeries on both my knees," Encinia continued. "And throughout my whole junior high, seventh to eighth grade, I was the kid on crutches... I couldn't do anything. Whenever the kids in my class would get together and be like, we're going to go play basketball outside, I would sit there and be like, man, I wish I could go out there and play basketball; I wish I could go do this, I wish I could go do that.

"It was a very tough time for me. So I was on a lot of medication, and by the time I was 13 years old, right after my eighth grade year, right before high school, I had a heart attack."

Encinia paused as the audience members gasped.

"Basically, my heart and lungs were not connected together... That really hit me hard."

While Encinia said his heart attack could have occurred for "many reasons" and was perhaps congenital, the yogi believers "it was all the medication I was on."

Encinia summed up the difficulties he encountered as an adolescent: "Arthritis, knee surgery, heart attack, all before I was a freshman in high school. I went through more than some of your teachers went through, by your age. Can you believe that?"

Encinia told the kids that, in high school, he was depressed and gained weight. The yogi thought, "I'm not ever going to get to be or look like my twin brother, or be as strong and athletic and charming as him. So I kind of gave up."

He added that junior high and high school were the toughest times for him, and thought the students in the audience could relate.

"You guys are in this," he said. "Maybe you're not as sick as I was, but maybe there's something. Maybe you have a broken arm, or broken knee, or maybe you just feel like the one person who nobody likes, or the unpopular one. And I went through all of this at your age."

Post-high school, Encinia decided to take control of his health. He tried getting fit by lifting weights, running and trying martial arts, but found that he experienced too much pain, particularly in his knees. "Nothing was working for me," he said.

"So, I found yoga. I was 19 years old," Encinia said. "I was looking to change my life."

A girlfriend introduced Encinia to bikram yoga, a 90-minute sequence of 26 beginner's level poses done in a 105-degree studio. Encinia dropped into a class to impress a girl; what he wound up learning about the practice, and his own body, surprised him.

"That night, for the first time in 19 years of my life, I had no pain," Encinia said. "I could sleep. I woke up... no pain."

Encinia continued practicing and began to appreciate the way his body changed; he lost weight, grew stronger, became more flexible, and found that he felt happier.

"I was like, this is it: yoga," he said. "This is what I want to do for the rest of my life."

Yoga as competitive sport

Encinia's life was about to take an even more drastic turn. One day, a world yoga champion came to the Dallas studio where Encinia practiced.

"What the heck is a world yoga champion?" Encinia said he wondered at the time. "Yoga's not competitive!"

Encinia was intrigued and inspired.

"I thought, look at that guy; he looks like he's shining," said Encinia. "I want to be like him."

The aspiring yogi decided to check out his first yoga competition.

"Yoga's like ommm," Encinia said, imitating a meditative chant. "I found out [competitive yoga] it's kind of like gymnastics. One person goes onstage, they do their yoga postures, and that's it. Whoever has the best yoga postures, most flexibility, strongest body, not shaking the whole time, the best grace, just like gymnastics — they win."

Figuring he had nothing to lose, Encinia decided to try out.

"For the first time in my life, I felt healthy, like I could do something with myself," he said. "I'd never even played a game, never participated in soccer or baseball or football or track my whole life."

His first time out, Encinia placed last.

"But that's not what it was about," he told the students. "I only went there because I wanted to finally, for once in my life, do something and be a part of something physical. I grew up my whole life watching my twin brother Matthew compete."

Encinia said he was glad to finally have a chance to compete against other athletes, even though at the time, "I was still a little chubby."

Undeterred, "I kept going and going and going, never wanting to win, just competing because my whole childhood and teenage years I couldn't compete.

"Six and a half years later, I am the five-time Texas champion, four-time U.S.A. champion, three-time world champion."

Upon hearing this, the Cohasset Middle School students erupted into applause.

Lessons learned

"By practicing yoga, I learned so much," Encinia said. "I was never competing or participating to become the winner, to beat her [gesturing to Miwa] or to beat somebody else, like my body versus her body or my mind versus her mind. This is not the spirit of the yoga championships... the spirit of it is, this is who I am, this is how I've conquered my ego, my mind, and this is my yoga. This is my life."

Miwa also started practicing bikram yoga around six years ago. After training for 10 years in rhythmic gymnastics, the lithe and flexible Miwa quickly took to yoga like a pro. After taking only 10 bikram yoga classes in L.A., she decided to become a certified yoga instructor so she could teach the bikram style in her native Japan.

"I never heard of [bikram] in Japan," said Miwa. "We didn't have it before."

Miwa, 32, competed in the International Yoga Asana Championship for the first time in 2005, when she placed fourth; during this year's international asana championship, she won first place.

While the story of how she became a yoga champion was a far different tale than Encinia's, Miwa told the students how yoga brings different people together.

"Yoga is beyond our culture," she said. "I'm Japanese; he's American. Our language is different, but our heart is the same."

If there was one message Miwa wanted to express to the kids at the assembly, it was, "Never give up! Be positive."

She encouraged the students to try yoga, or anything else they wanted to accomplish, "little by little." She also implored the kids: "Please enjoy your life."

"What I've learned the most from this yoga, and the message I really want to share with you guys, is to have faith," said Encinia. "Faith in yourself. There's so many times out there when somebody may put you down, they may make fun of you, you may feel bad about yourself... But if you have faith in something, all things are possible. So whether you want to be a musician, or you want to make straight A's, or you want to be an all-star on your team, basketball or football, or you want to be a dancer, or you want to go and become a movie star, whatever it is you want in life, it is possible. And with faith in yourself, anything is possible."

Encinia also encouraged the middle school students to hang in there throughout the rest of junior high and high school.

"It's not your life forever," he said. "After four years, it's done."

After a question and answer session with the students, Encinia and Miwa taught them a few basic yoga poses. Encinia gave instructions in English while Miwa taught in Japanese.

Of all the stops on their New England tour to various events and yoga studios, local bikram studio owner Katrina Klein said that this event was the only chance Encinia and Miwa would have to teach children.

"They are so humble," Klein said of the champions. "Joseph thanked me and said, 'this touched my soul.'"

Before concluding the assembly, Encinia asked the students if any of them had ever played yoga on the Wii. A majority of the children raised their hands.

"All yoga is good yoga," Encinia said.

Q&A: Yoga champions answer student questions

Q: Does it hurt doing any of the postures?

A: Yukari Miwa: When you practice a lot — no pain. We usually, before demonstration, do a lot of stretching... there is a lot you can do.

Joseph Encinia: Yukari was a rhythmic gymnast and dancer growing up; my answer is different. I couldn't even touch my toes when I started. But pain is a way for the body to communicate with you. Not being afraid of pain and suffering, pushing that aside, is how you start doing yoga.

Q: [To Miwa] What part of Tokyo do you come from?

A: YM: Do you know Tokyo? Shinjuku.

Q: [To Encinia]: What does your brother do now?

A: JE: He manages a taco restaurant... he's not as athletic now, but he is trying to be.

Local yoga studio made it happen

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Having world champion athletes descend upon a small town like Cohasset is not a usual occurrence. Katrina Klein, owner of Bikram Yoga in Cohasset, was instrumental in bringing Encinia and Miwa to the middle school.

Health teacher Maureen Duffy headed up the effort on the school's behalf, while art teacher Laura Swartz selected a handful of students to create a graffiti mural that was used as a backdrop for the champions' showcase.

When Klein found out that the champions' tour would find them in the South Shore area, she reached out to USA Yoga, who told her to contact Encinia directly.

The champions were scheduled for so many different appearances, Klein said, and she told Encinia that although she could see he was being pulled in many different directions, she hoped he would consider coming to Cohasset to speak to students.

Encinia was happy to make the additional stop.

"They wanted to share with the kids," Klein said.

Klein and Encinia quickly scheduled the assembly; in a matter of 24 hours, a date was set.

"I told Joseph, I'll take whatever day you can give me," said Klein.

The studio owner said that this is the only children's assembly on the champions' schedule for the year.

One of USA Yoga's goals is to promote yoga as a sport, not only to land it a spot in the Olympics, but also to see yoga offered as an alternative to competitive sports in public schools.

But how would competitive yoga differ from other competitive sports?

Klein explained that yoga "is physical, spiritual and emotional... not everybody is into the competition of it." Some of Klein's bikram students, for instance, "just like to see what they can do."

Practicing yoga asana, the instructor said, is not about hitting each pose perfectly.

Klein was quick to point out the healing properties of yoga, explaining that bikram is the only style of yoga that is sponsored by the American Medical and American Diabetes associations.

"We work the lymphatic system by flushing it out," said Klein, adding that yoga is also considered a form of cardio. Along with improving the body's flexibility and the elasticity of the lungs, Klein said, bikram yoga torches serious calories. It is cardio and conditioning at the same time, no weights needed.

"We don't use props," Klein explained. "We don't need props. We work the body; we use what we have."

But yoga is not all about achieving fitness goals, said the instructor.

"There's a class for any age, any condition," Klein said. "There are times in life when we need to heal... it's not just about fitness."

Klein has been a licensed bikram instructor since 2000. She has been practicing yoga since the nineties and is also a licensed kripalu yoga and QiGong therapist. She is more than merely a professional yogi; Klein is a devotee to the practice who has experienced the healing power of yoga herself. Not wishing to elaborate on health issues, Klein explained how yoga has helped her eliminate pain and challenge doctors' prognoses over the years.

When in pain, Klein said, "I take it back to my mat."

Now, Klein is hopeful that the yoga champions' showcase at the middle school will inspire kids to give yoga a try.

The instructor is also hoping a few will drop into her yoga school.

"I love teaching children," she said, "so much so that words do not adequately express the joy in my heart."

Klein also said the junior high age is a good time to start practicing yoga. Especially those who wish to become future champions like Miwa and Encinia.

"If they start at 12, 13, imagine how good they can be by the time they are their age!"

HEALTH NOTES

How about a health-care flash mob?

STEVE BOBO

The New Learning Flash Crowds speak to the health of the community. The aggregation of youngsters — and many, not so young — coalescing in various locations all about the country; having little direction except that they are concerned, most speaking American English, and needing 'to do something' is at minimum, healthy. These folks, mostly orderly, conversational, sensing a vacuum of leadership, are wanting to, at least, identify the problem or problems.

Applied to Health Care —'Maddock Douglas' wrote 'The Agency of Innovation' quoted in part below:

'The first flash mob was organized by Will Wasik in 2003 using social media, text messaging and email to organize about a hundred people to gather around an expensive rug on the ninth floor of Macy's in New York telling sales and management they all lived together in a warehouse and were choosing a "love rug" for their room. It spawned a movement.

Flash mobs aren't promotional, nor sponsored. Grass-roots driven; with organizers but no command and control. Participation is optional. By definition, they're local; assembled for no other purpose than to scratch some collective social itch. They happen; then fade instantly out of public view.

Flash Mobs may form a pattern to fix much that's not working in health care. Tools to build powerful solutions based on these premises are already there.

The Social Itch That Needs Scratching —No one seems happy about health care. Policy makers all say how broke and broken the system is. Patients and doctors can't spend the time they want with each other. There's too much information on the Internet but few health care professionals to interpret and organize it; no accountability on best procedures, drugs and technologies to use, and no connection between the prices we pay and the actual costs of providing services. We wonder how the system would work without health insurance companies; or with call physicians who actually answer phones. Email, Facebook or Twitter are powerful tools. Could they be used for more important things? Perhaps connecting health care to our day-to-day community — a big itch we're all desperate to scratch may be a fruitful use of such tools.

Envision the Mob — Imagine 1,500-2,000 people getting together to build a new health care model unencumbered by the current system. Each has some characteristic in common; a university attended, a business they share, a common gym, or golf club, whatever. All share the same health care resources and, so by definition, are clustered within a relatively small geography. You, as a member of the group, know some (but not necessarily all) of the members of this group. You're connected by several different social media tools. You follow each other on Twitter. You have an invite-only Facebook or LinkedIn page. You occasionally run into members at the grocery store, at entertainments or coffee shops. This group is your mob.

Perhaps, an established physician in your area unhappy with too much oversight; paperwork; government, state and insurance company in his primary task: healing; he decides to go "concierge." He limits his total patient base to no more than 2,000. He charges an annual upfront subscription fee and guarantees high-touch, responsive, primary health care. He charges a fixed price for each office visit and only accepts cash. He approaches your mob and proposes a 'flash'. He proposes being your mob's exclusive provider of primary care medical support. His principal role will be to assure your mob access when and where they need it (yes, he will do house calls). He will be your mob's health advisor and coach, sending emails to individuals; posting advice within your group's private social network spaces. He'll tweet only to your mob on relevant items, forwarding articles and offer collective advice on how to health by measurable means. He will cheer successes and encourage change within a strict privacy framework you all agree upon.

Flash: The mob starts to opt in. The doc sets up a private social network that is relatively secure with a cloud-based electronic medical record that your mob can access through a portal meeting all security standards. Someone blogs on getting care for catastrophic events (car accidents, cancer, etc.) and finds a high-deductible plan accepted by your local hospital. Someone else mentions a great experience with an alternative medicine practice in town which when vetted, adds another benefit to your mob's "plan." Also, a local gym hears what you're doing.

Things start to get serious. Your mob starts chatting about upping the annual subscription price but including more options in your plan — still local, still driven through social media, still managed by your primary care provider and health coach. Your physician organizer finds specialist peers who like physical therapists to add value to your mob's unique health profile.

A few of your mob's members work together at a large insurer and offer to help on pricing the next year's subscription price. They add up everything your mob spent the previous year and carefully calculate what your entire group will likely spend next year. They pay a small fee to their employer for their actuarial data and propose that the mob buy reinsurance in case their model's in error. Everyone looks it over (on their network page) and agrees to use it as the basis for next year's subscription.

Change Your Flash to a Sparkle: A funny thing starts to happen. Comments get posted. People encourage each other through the private social network. Tweets start about good classes at the gym; success stories at checkups. People share Groupon coupons for healthy alternative dining options. No one picks on anyone else online. No one gets called fat or chided for bad behavior that could affect the group's aggregate health. It turns into something local, real and positive. People like their physician and connect what they do to how they feel. Outcomes improve. All are accountable. The group is running as every HMO wishes, but at a micro level.

Now the punch line... Douglas tells a story: 'In 1933, a newly graduated medical student from USC, moved to a small western community. Signing a contract with a local construction group to take care of 5,000 workers on the federally funded aqueduct project. His contract stipulated that, for a fixed 17.5 percent of their wages, he would coordinate the workers' general health care, assure them access to high acuity care when and where needed, and stabilize their injuries in the event they were hurt until they could be transported elsewhere. He charged an incremental $1.50 per day for add-on services not related to their construction jobs. Thus was founded a major health insurance company.'

Our health care flash mob need not strive toward big and bulky. Lessons are simple: local, specific health care needs of small populations can be managed effectively through ongoing health care management programs. Separate primary from catastrophic care. Partnership is critical for the right care on time in the right place without dependence on existing health care infrastructure.

We don't need huge systems to deliver effective care or millions of covered lives to appropriately spread insurance risk. The possibility of a micro-HMO is feasible and a clear need in the market. Our challenge is where, how and what we, as established stakeholders, want to play in such a system. Douglas asks 'Do we want to be part of the mob or watch from the sidelines?"

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

POLITICAL NOTES

Honoring Democrats of the Year

The eight towns and cities of the South Shore Democratic Caucus will host the Democrat of the Year Banquet at South Shore Country Club in Hingham from 6 to 10 p.m., on Friday, Oct 28. All South Shore area Democrats and their families and friends are invited to come and enjoy the evening. This biennial gathering of South Shore Democratic Party members will honor Democrats of the Year from each of the South Shore Caucus towns.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee voted unanimously to nominate Edward Lappen as this year's honoree. Lappen was also Cohasset's Citizen of the Year for 2011.

The evening will include cocktails, dinner and the awards ceremony. Local, state and federal Democratic officeholders are invited and often participate in the award presentations and make brief comments to the attendees.

Advance reservations are required. Cost is $40 per person. Call Kevin McCarthy to make a reservation at 781-534-0509.

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department would like to thank Shaw's Supermarkets of Cohasset and the Pepsi-Frito Lay Company for their generous donation of $342.40 as part of Phase 2 of the "Working Together to Support Our Community Program".

Shaw's of Cohasset teamed up with Pepsi and Frito Lay to support the Cohasset Skippers Athletic Program.

As part of the "Working Together To Support Our Community Program", Shaws chose the Cohasset Athletic Department to be the recipent of Phase 2 of this promotion ran from July 17 through August 4, 2011.

CHS Athletics would like to thank Shaw's, Pepsi/Frito-Lay and all those in the community for their continued support of our program.

CROSS COUNTRY

Final dual meet

The Cohasset/Hull boys and girls cross country teams trekked to Carver Tuesday for their final dual meet of the season.

The girls' squad, which came out on the short end of an 18-38 decision, was led by captain Christina Secatore, who ran to a third place finish. She was followed by Lady Skipper/Lady Pirate teammates captain Corin Postell and Stephanie Brierly.

On the boys' side, captain Harry Hellboch paced his teammates with an eighth place effort. He was followed by teammates Matt Menice and Tom Saide.

Both the boys snd girls squads will compete in the all-league meet Tuesday at the Strawberry Valley course in Abington.

YOUTH WINTER LACROSSE

Liv2Lax registration

Cohasset Club Lacrosse is once again hosting a series of Liv2Lax winter skills programs at the Cohasset SportsPlex for youth boys and girls of all grade and skill levels.

These 1-hour weekly sessions will be held right after-school as a way to burn off some extra energy, to polish your skills for next spring, or just to work on a game that we just can't get enough of especially after the snow starts to fly.

The 16-week Liv2Lax program will be run by experienced high school, club, and college coaches and players providing progressive, age appropriate skill development for the beginner thru to the advanced player with groups divided by skill, gender, and grades with equal parts development, game play, and fun. Sessions run weekly from early November thru to late Feb. (excl holidays/vacation weeks).

For more info, schedules, and on-line registration please visit www.cohassetclublax.com or call 781/383-6074. These programs were a sell out last year and space will be limited to insure the quality of instruction so if you are looking for some great off-season lax at a convenient time and location, sign up today for our after-school Liv2LAX .

Open to all area laxers - See you out on the fields.

FOOTBALL

Trying to capture some swagger

Rockland victory a good start

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team had a much needed bye week this week.

After an emotional win at Rockland, the Skippers needed a short break to gather their thoughts and figure out just what kind of team they'd be during the most important stretch of games this season.

It looks like they're going to be a good one.

After the first six games, the Skippers are 3-3, but could just as easily be 5-1 or even 6-0.

"We're still in a good situation," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We could just as easily be 5-1 instead of 3-3. Take away one return against Hingham, two plays against Scituate and we're right there."

The biggest thing Afanasiw hoped to take from the win at Rockland was some confidence and a little bit of swagger.

Cohasset wins South Shore League title

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset golf team finished it's season on Wednesday in impressive fashion, winning the South Shore League Tournament at Quashnet Vally in Mashpee.

"We brought home the trophy," Cohasset co-coach Ann Thomae said. "We had a 240 aggregate score."

Carver was second with a 253 score. Mashpee and Harwich tied for third at 266 in the 18-hole competition.

Individually, Connor O'Brien was Cohasset's top golfer, with a 78 that was good for a third medalist.

Sam Asnault was right behind with a 79. Austin Sloane was next at 85 and Warren Hill fired a 91.Hill and Asnault were both named South Shore League All-Stars.

Cohasset finished a terrific seson with a 14-0 record in South Shore League play.

"We were favorites going in," Thomae said. "But it's never over until the boys play. They did a good job."

Cohasset didn't fare as well in Sectionals on Monday.

"We shot well, but didn't play well enough to advance," Thomae explained. "If you want to advance at that level, you have to have at least two players shoot in the 70's. Our low was 81. Still, it wasn't that bad. The lowest score was a 310. We were at 344. The high was a 409."

Thomae was pleased with the season.

"This was a fabulous season," she said. "It's been a long season. One of my players told me now he can go home and spend eight hours on his homework. It's been fun."

SWIMMING

Local swimmers are the fastest in New England

The Weymouth Waves Swim team had many outstanding performances this past summer in the 2011 Long Course Season. The team competed all over New England, and USA Swimming compiles a list of times from all meets.

In the age group 8-and under, Mary Kate Kelley of Hingham, Leigh Spicer of Cohasset, and Brian Doherty of Braintree all had top 16 times. Mary Kate and Leigh both had amazing firsts in New England.

Mary-Kate was the fastest swimmer in the 50m Butterfly in New England and Leigh in the 400m freestyle in New England. In the 10&U's Will Barao of Hingham, Dean Spicer of Cohasset and Eric Barros all placing in the top 16.

These young swimmers, coached by Jack Focarelli, had an incredible season and are already swimming faster times this fall.

Grass doesn't slow down Skippers

Cohasset downs Hingham 3-1

By William Wassersug
Wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset field hockey team has played well all season, working their way to an 8-1-1 South Shore League record (9-1-3 overall) with a 3-1 win over Hingham on the grass in Hingham.

Caty Gilman scored Cohasset's first goal in the win.

Christina Tedeschi and Sarah Campedelli notched the third of the day.

Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano feels her team is close to where they want to be.

"Our only loss is to Harwich and we tied Harwich," she said. "We're neck and neck with them. Our goal this year is geared toward being more successful in the tournament."

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

Cohasset field hockey assist leaders Sage Stebbins and Angela Cipolla

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

The Cohasset field hockey team has had an outstanding season and part of that comes down to a complete team effort. Cohasset's Sage Stebbins and Angela Cipolla have been a big factor as the team's leaders in assists.
Sage and Angela took a moment to answer a few questions.

Q: What do you enjoy about getting assists?
Sage: I like to be the one to set up goals. It's harder for me to score because I stay back. I love getting the ball to my teammates so they can finish.
Angela: I like scoring. It's a big part of what we do. Helping my teammates score is great Q: Favorite TV show?
Sage: Jersey Shore
Angela: Desperate Housewives
Q: Favorite Movie?
Sage: Notebook
Angela: Stepbrothers
Q: Favorite music?
Sage: Chase Stebbins. He's 19 and he's a rapper. He's on tour right now.
Angela: Wiz Khalifa
Q: Favorite sport?
Sage: Field hockey, basketball and lacrosse
Angela: Field hockey and lacrosse
Q: Who do you think gets it done on the field?
Sage: Everyone. Each and every girl on the team works their hardest and therefore our success has been a team effort. They do a great job.
Angela: Sage and Caitlin DeAngelis. Angela also mentioned the team as a whole.

SOUTH SHORE CROSS-COUNTRY POLL

W-H, PHS are No. 1s

Girls Top 5

1. Whitman-Hanson (7-0; 1st)
2. Weymouth (10-0; 2nd)
3. Pembroke (5-2, 3rd)
4. Hingham (7-0, 4th)
5. Notre Dame Academy (5-0; 5th)

Boys Top 5

1. Pembroke (7-0; 1st)
2. Whitman-Hanson (6-1; 2nd)
3. Marshfield (4-1; 3rd)
4. Weymouth (7-3; 4th)
5. Hingham (6-1; 5th)

5 To Watch

Derrick Noland, Silver Lake: Nolan led the Lakers to a 22-34 win over Patriot League rival Scituate, finishing the 2.8 mile road course in 15:30, 6 seconds ahead of teammate Jim Nickerson. Silver Lake has been quietly fighting to a 6-2 record in the Patriot League, and although powerhouse Pembroke awaits, this can only be considered a successful campaign for the Lakers in 2011.

Jason Angell, Duxbury: Just when I was asking myself where the promising Dragon senior had been hiding all season, he goes and drops a big bomb at the MSTCA Twilight Invitational this weekend in Barnstable. True harriers know the end of the season is where it counts, and Angell is proving that he is poised to make some noise. He ran 16:41 in the varsity race, good enough for 18th place amongst some tall trees from Brookline and Bishop Feehan alike.

Lauren Bittrich, Duxbury: This week, TWO DRAGONS! Another Duxbury senior, Bittrich blasted off to a 29th place finish at the MSTCA Twilight meet, running a season best 20:24 time. She was the best local harrier running that night, helping her team to a 16th place finish in the brand new event, the brainchild of MSTCA leaders from the past and present. They say you run faster at night, and these two Dragons surely proved the adage true.

Lauren Wiessmeyer and Abby Sheehan, Weymouth: Resting several Wildcats after a long week of racing at Brookline and Brown, Weymouth called on two seniors to lead them past Walpole and Braintree. With Bridget Jakiitsch and Morgan Fitzgibbon leading the way, the Wildcats clung to a 27-28 lead at the 2 mile mark over Walpole, until Wiessmeyer (17:56) and Sheehan (18:01) blasted off to a 4th and 6th place finish, securing the meet at 22-34 and a 10-0 season to this point for Weymouth.

Liz Morgan, Abington: The senior led the way for the Green Wave in a narrow 25-30 win over Hull/ Cohasset, running 22:34 for a decisive individual win. However, Abington trailed at the 2 mile mark, and called on a pack of freshman Anna Fischer and Maddie Herbert and senior Donna Creighton to carry the way. They turned an 8-9-10 effort into a 6-7-8 finish, sealing the win. Those of you not new to the Poll, you know I've been touting that 5th runner for years. Way to go, Abington!

Meet to Watch

Whitman-Hanson at Hingham: It's rivalry week in the Patriot League, with this being the marquee matchup on the girls side, featuring two 7-0 teams looking for a shot at a Patriot League title. On paper, this one is a bit lopsided, as the #1 team in DI Mass. Travels to a solid, but youthful Hingham team. Hingham's girls have climbed to 4th in the poll, but they will have their hands full with the Baker twins, Cacciatore, and Dimascio-Donohue. Expect W-H to continue their unbeaten streak in the Patriot League, a league they have never lost in.

The weekly poll and report is compiled by Mike Miller, head coach of the reigning Div. 1 champion Weymouth High School girls' varsity.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week Seven: Boys on the bubble

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The seventh week of high school soccer really showcased the rivalry within the teams Inside the 6. On the boys' side, Weymouth battled Silver Lake and came out with a victory, handing the Lakers their first loss of the season. The win propelled the Wildcats back to the No. 1 spot. For the girls, Scituate jumpes up one spot after defeating Hingham. The top four remain the same. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 23.

Boys

1. Weymouth – The Wildcats had quite an impressive week, ending it Saturday by handing Silver Lake, last week's No. 1 team Inside the 6, its first loss of the season. It was only the second time this season Silver Lake had been held the scoreless (the other came in a 0-0 tie with Scituate). Weymouth started last week off with a 2-0 win over Milton before hitting a slight bump in the road two days later, losing 1-0 to Needham.

2. Silver Lake – What started out as a great week quickly turned to an impressive run that abruptly came to an end. The Lakers blanked Whitman-Hanson, 2-0, and Pembroke, 4-0, but lost, 1-0, to Weymouth. It was Silver Lake's first defeat after going 14 straight games without a loss.

3. Hingham – Beginning the week off with a 4-0 win over Everett seemed promising for the Harbormen, but they soon ran into a Scituate side that had won five of six coming into the match. Hingham couldn't get past the Sailors, but they didn't falter either. The two teams played to a 1-1 draw. Hingham slipped to end the week, dropping a 2-0 decision to Duxbury.

4. Duxbury – The Dragons had a pair of games on their schedule last week. They took care of business by beating North Quincy, 2-0, to keep them in third place in the Patriot League Keenan and then delivered a huge victory, beating Hingham, 2-0.

5. Hanover – The Indians remain on a tear and have all but wrapped up the Patriot League Fisher Division title. A 2-1 win over Scituate to end the week distanced themselves from the second-place Sailors. A 4-1 win over Pembroke followed by a 3-1 victory over Middleboro made for a perfect week for Hanover.

6. Norwell – The South Shore League has some parity this year. After seven weeks of soccer, five of the league's nine teams have winning records. One of those teams is Carver, which stunned Norwell with a 1-0 win last week. The first-place Clippers, who ended the week with a 1-0 win over East Bridgewater, had scored in every game of the season up until that Carver loss. They still have a relatively comfortable lead in the SSL.

On the bubble: Scituate, Carver, Cohasset

Week Six Rankings: 1. Silver Lake, 2. Weymouth, 3. Hingham, 4. Norwell, 5. Duxbury, 6. Hanover

Girls

1. Marshfield – Two more Atlantic Coast League games resulted in two more Atlantic Coast League wins for the top-ranked Lady Rams. The week began with a dramatic, late-game win over second-place Plymouth North, followed up with a commanding, 6-1 victory over Dennis-Yarmouth. Those two wins kept Marshfield in first place in the ACL.

2. Plymouth North – The Lady Eagles didn't exactly have the best of weeks, going 1-2, but only one of those losses came within the ACL. However, it came against first-place Marshfield. After that 2-1 loss, North lost to its toughest non-league opponent of the season – Brockton. Following that 1-0 loss, the girls bounced back with a 6-0 win over ACL foe Nauset to remain in second place.

3. Duxbury – After a 3-0 win over North Quincy to start the week, the Lady Dragons and Patriot League rivals Hingham played to a 1-1 draw. This was the second meeting of the season between the two teams. The first time around, they tied, 3-3. Duxbury remains in first place in the Patriot League Keenan.

4. Weymouth – A slow week for the Lady Wildcats, but in their one match, they beat a winless Milton, 4-1, to remain in first place in the Bay State Carey Division.

5. Scituate – A massive win over Hingham proved that Scituate is for real. Despite a week-ending, 2-1 loss to Hanover, the Lady Sailors still hold onto first place in the Patriot League Fisher.

6. Hingham – A great ending to the week for the Harborwomen. They tied first-place Duxbury, 1-1, on a late equalizer after Duxbury took a 1-0 lead early in the second half. The week didn't start as planned for Hingham. The Scituate Lady Sailors took a 3-1 win in Hingham.

On the bubble: Norwell, Hanover, Plymouth South

Week Six Rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Plymouth North, 3. Duxbury, 4. Weymouth, 5. Hingham, 6. Scituate

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

Giuliano said she's been pleased with the team atmosphere.

"To me, the greatest thing with this team is that our scoring is spread out. It's wide open. Everybody is stepping up and spreading it out."

It hasn't been an easy run though.

Last week, Cohasset tied Hanover 1-1and had a stretch of low scoring games.

Gilman, a talented freshman who leads the team in goals has been a big help this season.

"Caty is a very talented freshmen," Giuliano said. "She's been a big help."

For the Skippers, the toughest part of the season has been waiting through weather.

"We've had so many cancellations so we haven't had a lot of practice. It's hard to tweak things in the middle of a game."

For the Skippers, there have been a number of heroes, including Sage Stebbins, Caitlin DeAngelis and Angela Cipolla.

"I can't say enough about Sage as a center midfielder," Giuliano said. "Angela, well when you step off the field and refs tell you how good someone is, that's Angela. It's nice."

In other recent action, Cipolla notched a hat trick in a 4-0 win at Mashpee last week, and then Cohasset also beat East Bridgewater 6-0 Oct. 4.

Cohasset met Carver for a second time this season and won that game 7-2.

Cohasset has already qualified for the MIAA Tournament and is now playing for seedings and home playoff games.

There's still a shot at a South Shore League crown with a little help as well.

"If we can play with the intensity that we played against Rockland, we can do well," Afanasiw said. "Mashpee is a very good team. Last year they beat us by one point (at Mashpee). They're pretty much the same team this year.

"Last year's loss was uncharacteristic," Afanasiw said. "We made a lot of mistakes and penalties. That's not the way we play."

Afanasiw said Mashpee will bring familiar faces and planning,

"They have a good staff, good coaches and a good group of players," Afanasiw said. "They have a big strong line and some speed in the backfield."

Mashpee is 7-0, and most of their games have not been particularly close.

They beat Carver 47-15 and blanked Old Rochester 28-0.

Closer to home however, the numbers have been more promising for Cohasset fans.

Mashpee beat Rockland 24-14, while the Skippers beat Rockland 17-12 at Rockland.

Other common opponents this season have been Carver, who the Skippers dispatched 49-6.

Afanasiw said his team has done some game-planning for the game.

"Mashpee isn't putting 45-50 points on the board every game like East Bridgewater has, but they're in the high 20's and 300 yards rushing every game. They're scary."

Afanasiw explained that the Mashpee running game starts up front.

"They're very big up front," he said. "We hope to use our overall team speed as an advantage. We don't want to get into a pushing match with them."

Afanasiw said the win at Rockland was a big emotional boost.

With football and all the time between games, especially this week with the off-week between Rockland and Mashpee, a loss in Rockland could have made things difficult against Mashpee.

Instead, Cohasset had a week to build off a solid victory over a good team.

"I think we're in a good situation," Afanasiw said. "I can tell you what a difference confidence-wise it is. Right now our confidence is not shaken. We beat a quality team in Rockland. That will help. If we get a big win on Friday night we're right back in it."

Cohasset's lone South Shore League loss is to East Bridgewater. Mashpee and East Bridgewater still play this season.

Game time is 7 p.m., dress warm.

LIFE AT CHS

Early college applications are due

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Speaking of helping out senior citizens, everybody remember to sign up for Make a Difference Day on November 5th or 6th to help seniors with their fall cleanup!

October has flown by, and it is already almost November – can you believe it? The beginning of November means one thing for seniors: that early applications are due! I am sure a lot of procrastinators will be spending this weekend at home, scrambling to complete everything for their November 1st deadlines. Some of us are more lucky, and don't have to submit anything until November 15th, or until Regular Decision deadlines in the winter.

The first issue of the Spinnaker came out today, and it is better than ever! The newspaper is filled with a variety of news articles, editorials, features, sport reports and photographs, all written and compiled by CHS students. I'd say it's a pretty good deal for only one buck a paper.

The Volunteer Club threw a Halloween dinner at the Senior Center one Monday. Great job and thank you to everybody who participated! Speaking of helping out senior citizens, everybody remember to sign up for Make a Difference Day on November 5th or 6th to help seniors with their fall cleanup!

On the fields, Cohasset sports are finishing up their regular season schedules. Field hockey is still going strong, regardless of the random power outage during their night game this Monday. The girls and boys cross country team ran on the toughest course of the year this Tuesday. This 5K in Carver included running around a variety of fields, up sand hills, through the woods, and around a cranberry bog. The teams' South Shore League Meet is next Tuesday. The golf team participated in their League Championship on Wednesday. The girls' soccer team is finishing their season off strong with a bunch of wins, while the boys' soccer team is gearing up for tournament. The boys of fall will be kicking off tonight against Mashpee at 7 pm. I expect to see you all there!

Unfortunately, the high school didn't have two half days this week like the elementary schools did...and maybe that's why the week seemed to drag on forever...But don't worry — this year's first half day is November 10th, followed by a day of November 11th. Get psyched!

I wish everybody a happy Halloween weekend! Make sure to stop by the ASP Pumpkin Patch before it closes to buy a pumpkin to carve or pain, eat some festive candy and get into the Halloween spirit by dressing up. Have a great time on Monday, Cohasset!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High School. Her column appears weekly during the school year.

SEPAC HOSTS SPEAKER

Reading comprehension is focus of talk

The presentation will cover how the stimulation of imagery, and its application to decoding and comprehension, is necessary for all individuals to read and comprehend.

The Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Counsel (SEPAC) is pleased to host "Imagery and its Effect on Language Comprehension and Reading" presented by Christina Seremetis. Seremetis is the South Shore Center Director for Lindamood-Bell Learning Centers.

The presentation will be held at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, Nov. 1st, at 7pm. Seremetis will begin at 7:30 pm. The presentation will cover how the stimulation of imagery, and its application to decoding and comprehension, is necessary for all individuals to read and comprehend. It will also define how instructional programs aligned to a theory of cognition have successfully improved the language processing skills of a wide variety of students.

Seremetis will share results from the use of specific instructional techniques that have successfully used in learning centers.

"The Lindamood-Bell programs have been assisting children for over 25 years and reading skills are necessary for all students to be successful. This topic is beneficial for all families in Cohasset," says Claudia Russell, Treasurer of Cohasset SEPAC.

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit our website at www.cohassetsepac.com.

Light refreshments will be available. The meeting is free and open to the public.

Sweet Relief to host open house Nov. 5

Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, a private early education learning center at 38 Summer Street in Cohasset, will host an open house for prospective families from 10a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 5. This event is free of charge and open to the public.

Parents and caregivers that attend the open house will receive additional information regarding Sweet Relief programs, a tour of the schoolhouse and an opportunity to meet with director, Lyn Congdon Previte, her staff and current Sweet Relief parents.

Sweet Relief, a home-based preschool environment, is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care. In addition to its EEC accreditation, Sweet Relief is insured and occupies a new schoolhouse, a large fenced-in secure play yard and has a consistent emergent curriculum, which follows the Massachusetts Department of Education Curriculum guidelines.

Previte, director and owner of Sweet Relief, has more than 20 years experience in early childhood education, holds licenses in CPR and first aid, regularly attends continuing education courses in early childhood development and recently studied American Sign Language.

The teacher-to-child ratio at Sweet Relief is one to five. The morning Toddler Program begins at 8:30 a.m. and concludes at noon, daily. The Toddler Program is designed for children ages 20 months to 2 years, 9 months and includes snack and lunch.

The afternoon Nursery Program, also including snack and lunch, begins at noon and concludes at 3:30 p.m., daily. Children 2 years, 9 months to 4 years old are eligible for the Nursery Program. Sweet Relief also boasts an Enrichment Program, open to all Nursery Program students. The Enrichment Program includes specialized Reading Enrichment, Music Enrichment with Music Together instructor Jana Kahn, and Physical Education Enrichment with yoga instructor Kim Spires.

For more information regarding the open house or to have an information brochure sent, call Previte at 781-383-9723, email sweetrelief143@aol.com or visit the website at www.sweetreliefcohasset.com.

Dazzling night at FOCUS Gallery

Event supports STEP's mission

FOCUS Gallery was buzzing last Thursday night as guests enjoyed the sold-out STEP OUT Party. Good food, good wine and good tunes were enjoyed by everyone and all for a good cause. A martini luge, creative eats and the beautiful photography artwork set a backdrop for a dazzling night.

Over 120 guests were in attendance to support STEP's mission to help inner city high school students see the relevance of their education and to inspire them to reach further in their future goals.

The STEP team was elated by the support they received from their friends and colleagues and are thrilled to report that they exceeded their fundraising goal for the evening! For more information regarding STEP www.stepinspire.org.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 7, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A work-related situation that started last month takes on increasing importance this week. The choice is still yours as to how it will evolve. Be careful not to make quick judgments.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) "Careful" is the watchword for the prudent Bovine this week. Don't let your emotions overwhelm your logic. Try for balance as you maneuver through a touchy situation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your energy levels rise to meet the challenges that will mark much of this month. New opportunities beckon. Look them over, but proceed cautiously before making any kind of decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your private life can be a problem this week, as a partner becomes more difficult. Resist a reaction you might regret. Instead of walking away, try to talk things out.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You should be your usual sunny self these days, as you bask in the admiration you adore. Enjoy it as you move into a new arena to confront an exciting upcoming challenge.

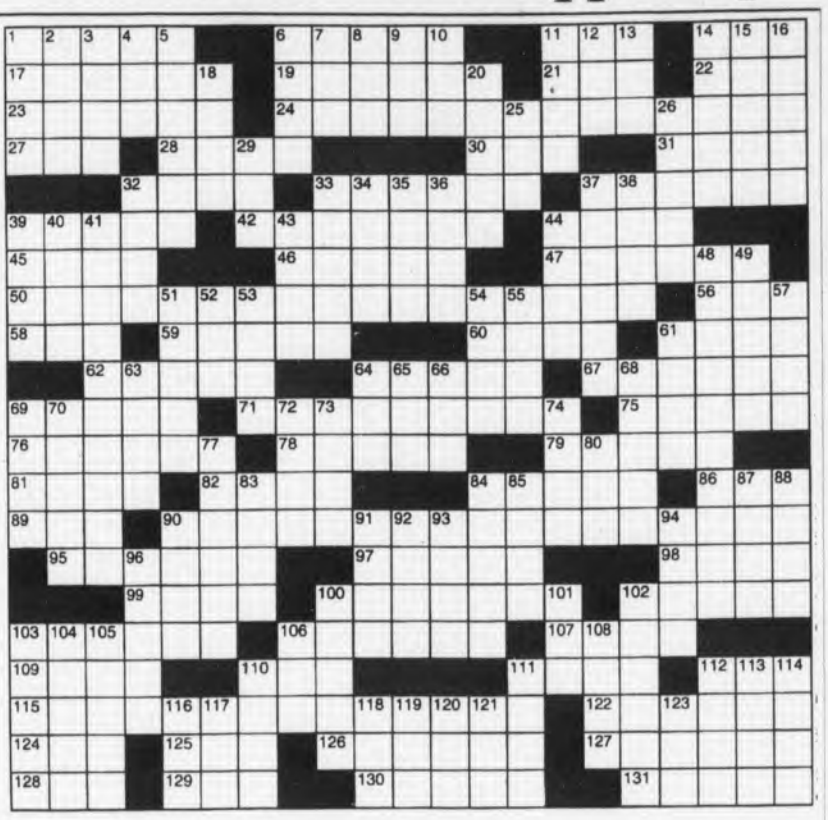
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your perseverance reserves will be tapped frequently this week as you deal with the problems involved in making a new situation work for you. But it'll all be worth it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You'll find fewer roadblocks turning up as you continue to move ahead with your plans. Expect some important news to come your way by mid-November.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Good news — you finally get to the bottom of that pesky mystery you've been trying to solve for weeks by using some gentle persuasion to get someone to break his or her silence.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The best time to take on that important task is now. Move forward one step at a time so you can assess your progress and, if need be, change direction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The new opportunities you hoped to find this month are beginning to open up. Study them carefully to be sure you make the choice that's best for you.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Turn a disappointment into a learning experience. Check out possible weaknesses in your approach and strengthen them. A loyal colleague offers good advice.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your new situation offers opportunities to help you get the skills you'll need in order to stop swimming in circles and finally move straight toward your goals. Go for it.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a sharp, logical mind and a quick intellect. You would make an excellent mystery writer.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

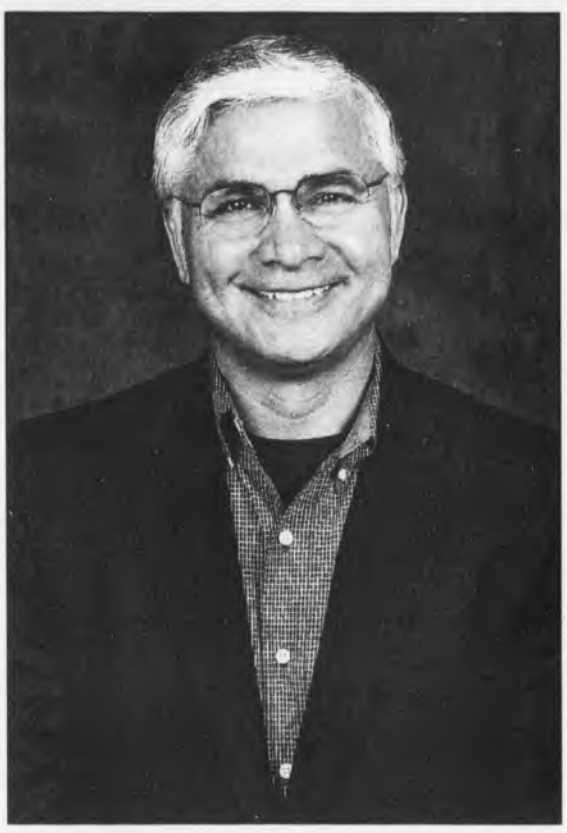
Speaker to focus on faith journey

Bob Frappier is a fitness advocate, a former soccer coach and an avid Harley Davidson rider. He and his wife, Andrea, have three children.



Hingham Committee on Faith announced that Bob Frappier, vice president of quality assurance for Ahold USA, the owner of Stop & Shop, will be one of the speakers at Exploring the Adventure of Faith retreat on Friday evening, Nov. 4, and Saturday, Nov. 5, at New North Church.

Frappier will share his faith journey as the oldest of 10 children raised in a devout Roman Catholic family. His father served as a master sergeant in the U.S. Army, which meant Frappier and his siblings traveled from Asia to Europe and across the United States as his father was dispatched to new postings. Frappier is currently active in his own parish, St. John The Evangelist in Attleboro as a lector and Eucharistic minister.

He is a graduate of George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., where he majored in biology. His career with Ahold began as a cashier for Giant Food in the 70s. He is a fitness advocate, a former soccer coach and an avid Harley Davidson rider. He and his wife, Andrea, have three children.

Bill Turpie, pastor of New North Church said, "Bob brings an intriguing perspective to the faith journey because he has been through some difficult waters and found his way to a vibrant faith, which is alive in both his family and work situations. This retreat is about bringing men from both a Roman Catholic and Protestant perspective together to share their faith struggles and successes – and Bob has a unique way of telling his story."

Hingham Committee on Faith is made up of Roman Catholic and Protestant layman including Rod Andrews, Pat McGeoghegan, Bob Murray, Craig Nobel, Jack Rayburn, Bill Turpie and Larry Wetzel. The event will take place at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., downtown Hingham, and will start Friday evening with dinner, and will be from 7 to 10 p.m. It continues on Saturday at 8 a.m. with breakfast and concludes at 4 pm. Cost is $20 including meals. Call 781-760-2098 for more information or to register.

REGISTER OF DEEDS

Mortgage loan information available

Registry land records date back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 and are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell, with the assistance of Attorney General Martha Coakley, is providing resource information to all resident's of Norfolk County who may have questions regarding their mortgage loans.

This resource information form answers a variety of questions regarding who services the mortgage, who owns the mortgage, was a document relating to the property robo-signed and what can be done. The form also provides information and resources for individual's struggling to pay or who cannot pay the mortgage and where to get help.

O'Donnell said, "I sincerely appreciate Attorney General Coakley's efforts in working with the Registers of Deeds of the Commonwealth. The Registers have expressed to her their many concerns regarding the various mortgage loan situations and I am grateful to her and her staff for providing us with this important information."

The informational form is available on the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds website: www.norfolkdeeds.org, under our Registry Guide link. The form is also available at the Registry's of Deeds Customer Service Center. To contact our Customer Service Center, please call: 781-461-6101.

Registry land records date back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 and are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. Complementing the Registry's efforts to expand and increase the accessibility of land records the Registry now accepts electronically transmitted documents. E-filing allows a real estate professional from not only Norfolk County but from across the country to send and record documents within minutes at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. Expiring license, MV registration

In a necessary effort to manage their cost, the Registry of Motor Vehicles may not notify drivers by mail of pending license or registration expiration. Police ask that you be diligent in regard to paying attention to expiration dates on your license and registration.

Should you discover either has expired simply go onto the Registry's website www.massdot.state.ma.us/rmv/ and you may renew either with a credit card. You will receive a confirmation number immediately while you await the mailing of your renewal.

Feel free to contact the Cohasset Police Department if you need assistance.

Before- and after-school activities

Rec. sponsors popular program

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We were very excited to have the opportunity to work with the schools, become a part of the school system, get to know and work with parents who are in need of the extended hours and to run a good quality and affordable program."
Rec. Department Director Ted Carroll

Third grader Maia Waldron said her favorite part of the day is "arts and crafts." Fellow third grader Lindsay Arruda likes "playing outside," while kindergartner Demitri Peters likes "recess." The students were not talking about the activities in a typical school day, but rather what they do after dismissal.

The Cohasset Recreation Department's RISE program, which stands for "Recreation, Imagination, Socialization and Education," provides before- and after-school activities for students of John Osgood and Deer Hill schools. The program began this past summer as part of the Rec. Department's day camp; RISE replaced the school department's before- and after-school programming, Compass.

"We thought of the Rec. Department and felt it was a better fit for parents' needs," said school business manager Dave DeGennaro. A recreational focus, he explained, is "more of what the parents are looking for."

"We were very excited to have the opportunity to work with the schools, become a part of the school system, get to know and work with parents who are in need of the extended hours and to run a good quality and affordable program," said Rec. Department Director Ted Carroll.

Carroll added that the new program is easier on parents. For one thing, the department upgraded its software this fall and now offers registration online.

Having the Rec. Department oversee the program from their office "makes it easier for parents to communicate with us throughout the day," said Carroll.

The new program is also less expensive than the last.

Structure

RISE is held from 7 to 9 a.m. in the mornings and 3 to 6 p.m. in the afternoons. Students begin with a nutritious snack, followed by a chance to work on any homework assignments they might have, and receive assistance from staff members if needed. The rest of the time is spent on "enrichment activities," including games, sports, arts and crafts, team-building exercises, guest speakers, story time and even seasonal lesson plans that often coincide with what students are studying in school.

What do they mean for Cohasset schools?

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During a recent school committee meeting, Louise Demas, Curriculum Coordinator for Cohasset schools, explained the MCAS (Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System) on a high level, how it works, and where the Cohasset school district stands compared to other state schools and districts, according to the standards the district set for itself.

While certain subgroups out of the aggregate failed to make Annual Yearly Progress (AYP) toward annual proficiency targets in English Language Arts (ELA) and mathematics, Cohasset is "on target; we're doing ok," said Demas.

"76 students scored advanced in MCAS subgroups," the curriculum coordinator continued. "It didn't necessarily bring us down if the whole thing didn't make it."

The MCAS measures student performance by monitoring cohorts, or the same group of test-takers over time.

"We look at kids who stayed together throughout grade — how are they doing?" explained Demas. "Overall, they continue to do well [in Cohasset]."

According to the Boston Globe, 82 percent of the state's schools and 91 percent of the districts missed the AYP targets. In the areas where Cohasset failed to meet the standards, "We're in good company," said Demas.

Data pulled from the Mass. School and District Profiles report shows that the Cohasset district struggled to

Weymouth man charged with OUI (drugs) after crash

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 26-year-old Weymouth man is facing the charge of operating under the influence of drugs following a four-car accident Monday (Oct. 31) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Stop & Shop.

Police said John P. Keefe IV of 16 Arcadia St., Weymouth, who was driving a 2011 Nissan Rogue, was headed south and had just gone through the light at Stop & Shop when he crossed over the double yellow line at about 2:45 p.m., hitting a 2011 Honda Pilot. The Nissan then went up on two wheels, continuing south, striking a 2011 4Runner and a 2007 Jeep Grand Cherokee before rolling over, police said.

Police said the three vehicles that Keefe hit were headed north and waiting in line to proceed through the light.

When police arrived they found the Nissan on its side with Keefe trapped inside. Cohasset police and firefighters were able to remove Keefe from the car without using the Jaws of Life. Police said Keefe admitted at the scene to having just smoked marijuana and taking prescription pills. Due to his admission, observations at the scene and physical evidence inside the vehicle, police placed Keefe under arrest. He faces charges of OUI (drugs) and operating a motor vehicle negligently. Keefe was transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries.

All four vehicles were towed. The operator of the 4Runner, a 30-year-old Scituate man, was transported to the hospital by Scituate ambulance with non-life-threatening injuries.

Route 3A was shut down for about an hour following the accident.

Pedestrian hit

On Thursday (Oct. 27) at about 8:55 p.m., police responded to a pedestrian accident on South Main Street near the Scituate town line. Callers reported that a Jeep had just struck a man who had been walking in the street.

On arrival, officers found the victim, a 51-year-old Cohasset man, on the side of the road. He was treated on scene the Cohasset Fire Department and transported to South Shore Hospital with serious but non-life threatening injuries.

The driver of the vehicle that struck the male is from Cohasset also. He is 70 years of age and was operating a 2000 Jeep Cherokee. Witnesses on scene stated that the victim was walking in the roadway, from Scituate toward Cohasset Village, when he was clipped by the Jeep and thrown.

There was heavy rain at the time of the accident and there is a sidewalk in this area for pedestrian use. The accident is under investigation.

Parents called

At 11:45 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 30), police responded to a 911 call about a young man walking in the middle of roadway along Route 3A between Pond and Beechwood streets.

Police said the 17-year-old Scituate teen, who was dressed as Jesus Christ, was intoxicated and had apparently been attending a Halloween party. Police transported the teen to the police station where his parents were contacted to pick him up.

Lockout

A 32-year-old Weymouth woman called her husband to report that their three children, all under the age of 6, were locked inside their 2009 Dodge Caravan outside the library on Tuesday (Oct. 25). The husband immediately called police at 12:05 p.m. Police responded, a wrecker was called and minivan was unlocked. Police said today locked cars require a professional car expert to gain access.

Summons

A 49-year-old Cohasset man is being summoned to court for operating with a revoked license. An officer on patrol at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 25) on Jerusalem Road saw the 2000 Ford Expedition pass by his location and knew, from roll call that morning that the operator's license had been revoked for nonpayment of a Connecticut traffic ticket.

The Registry of Motor Vehicles provides police with regular updates on local drivers who have lost their license or lost their insurance. The Cohasset man's car did not have to be towed because his passenger was properly licensed and could drive the vehicle, police said.

Summons

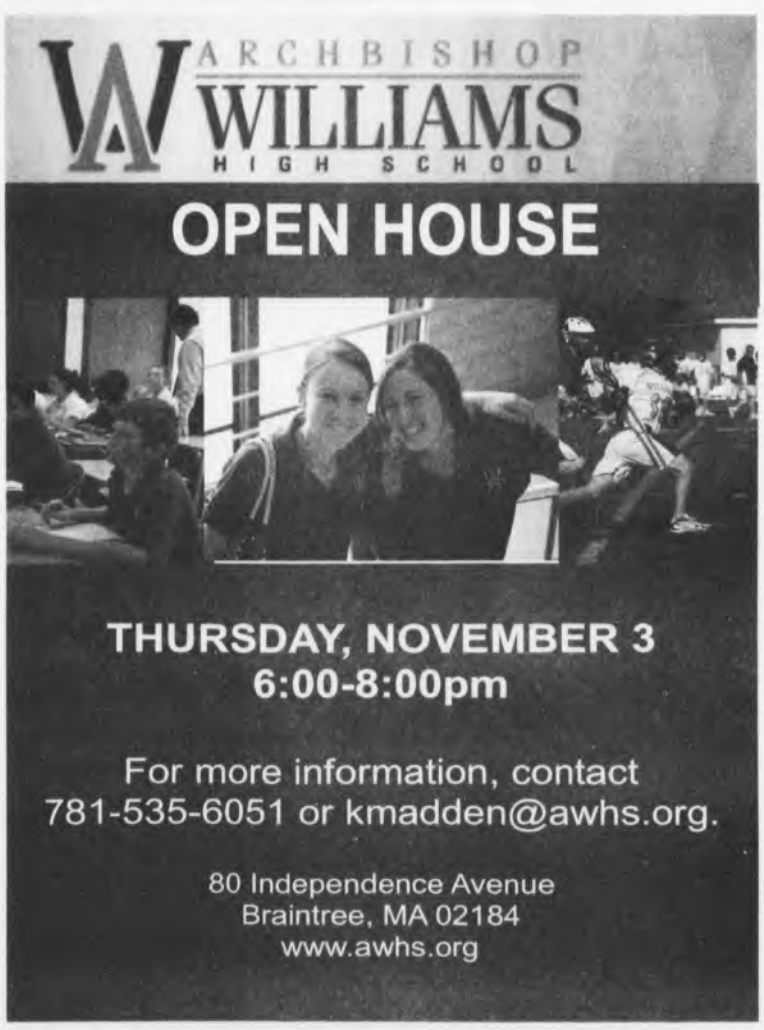
At 9:07 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 26), an officer was on patrol on Forest Avenue when he observed a 2006 Jeep Liberty pass by his location headed toward Hull that was traveling 47 mph in a 30 mph zone. The officer stopped the vehicle and a computer check of the 42-year-old Hull woman, who was driving, showed her license had been suspended for failure to pay a traffic ticket. Her car was towed and she is being summoned to court for operating after license suspension and speeding.

Lawn

A 51-year-old Beechwood Street man notified police at 11:50 a.m. on Thursday (Oct.27) about a van that was tearing up his front lawn. Investigation revealed the operator of the 2005 Chevrolet work van, a 51-year-old Brookline man, was trying to do a U-turn and sank in the mud. The van had to be towed out. Police said about $500 in damage was done to the lawn, which should be covered by the van's insurance.

MV accident

A 42-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2003 Toyota Sequoia had pulled over on Sohier Street near Ripley Road when a 2001 Chevrolet pickup truck, operated by a 27-year-old Quincy man, made a left from Ripley onto Sohier and clipped the back of her car, police said. The incident was reported at 3:27 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 28). The pickup had to be towed and the operator was cited for failure to use caution.



Car stuck

At 8:04 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 30), police responded to a report about a 1994 Buick LeSabre parked behind a house on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Mendel Road. Police contacted the owner of the car that had been stuck in the mud from the night before to have it towed out.

Move Over Law in effect

When an emergency or maintenance vehicle is stopped on the side of the road, move over to the next lane, or slow down if changing lanes is not possible. Under the Move over Law, failure to do so could result in a fine of up to $100.For information visit: www.mass.gov/safety/moveover

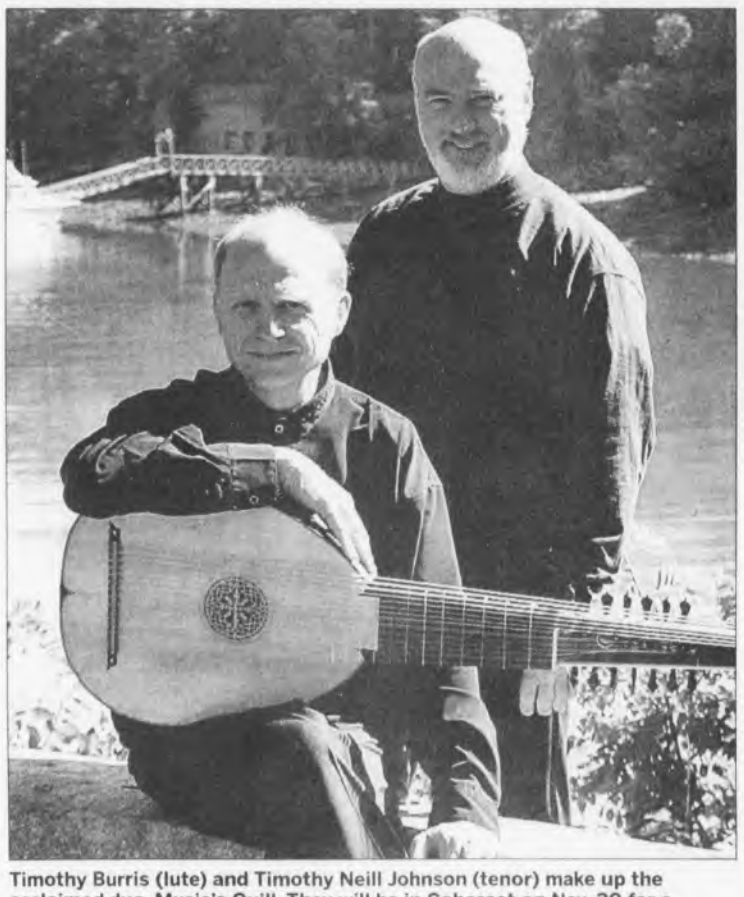
EVENT PREVIEW



Music's Quill to perform at First Parish

What
Music's Quill, an acclaimed tenor and lute duo from Portland, Maine, will be performing in the Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset. Their enchanting program is called "Of Ayres and Airs: Lute Songs from England and France." The concert will be Sunday, Nov. 20 at 3 pm. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. For more information about the concert, please contact Allegra Martin at (617) 872-0461.

More about the program
Music's Quill is presenting a program of intimate English airs and romantic French airs de cour ("songs of the heart"). The English portion of the program is from the Age of Shakespeare, and features three composers' renditions of the popular poem "Beauty Sat Bathing" by Anthony Munday. Munday is best known for his contribution to the Elizabethan play "Sir Thomas More", to which Shakespeare supposedly contributed a few pages. While airs de cour as a genre had a profound impact on the development of the English air, they are very different in style, as demonstrated by songs by Antoine Boësset, François Richard, and others. Lute solos by Dowland and François Dufaut fill out the program. Come and hear the music Shakespeare would have heard during his lifetime.

More about the ensemble:
Since its formation in 2000, Music's Quill has communicated the beauty of the lute song and its companion art, the rich tradition of 17th-century poetry, with concert audiences and master classes throughout the Northeast. Timothy Burris uses the lute's intimate voice to provide an artful harmonic foundation for the vocal line. Timothy Neill Johnson's exceptional tenor beautifully reveals poetic subtleties, introducing listeners to the cast of characters in these miniature dramas, deeply human tales of love and loss. More information about Music's Quill can be found at their website: http://baroquelute.com/musics_quill.

More about the performers:
■ Tenor Timothy Neill Johnson received a Bachelor of Music Degree from Cal State Los Angeles and continued his studies at the Royal Flemish Conservatory in Antwerp, Belgium. His ensemble repertoire includes the Bach Passions, Mozart's masses, Haydn's Creation, Beethoven's Mass in C, and Britten's Rejoice in the Lamb. He has performed song cycles of Schubert, Schumann, Finzi, Britten and Vaughan Williams, among others.
Johnson has performed and recorded with many ensembles here and abroad, including the Roger Wagner Chorale, Los Angeles Baroque Ensemble, La Petite Bande, Collegium Vocale, Boston Cecilia, Handel Society of Baltimore, Le Concert Spirituel of Paris, Portland Symphony, and Apollo's Fire. He presently is on the faculty of Bowdoin College and the University of Maine in Augusta.
■ Baroque lute expert Timothy Burris has performed throughout Europe and the US, both as a soloist and an accompanist. In addition to solo recordings, he has done CD projects with Jennifer Lane, Tamara Matthews, Timothy Neill Johnson, New York Baroque, and the Koorprojekt Rotterdam, among others. He can be heard playing Bach's c minor Prelude in "Shock Act", the prize-winning short-film DVD by Seth Grossman. He has degrees from the Royal Conservatory at the Hague and Duke University. Mr Burris taught lute for six years at the Royal Flemish Conservatory in Antwerp, and currently teaches at the Portland Conservatory of Music in Maine and Colby College.

Timothy Burris (lute) and Timothy Neill Johnson (tenor) make up the acclaimed duo, Music's Quill. They will be in Cohasset on Nov. 20 for a performance at First Parish. COURTESY PHOTO

"The smaller setting is ideal for specialized training, motivation and supportive one-on-one nutrition," says Brian Cook, President of GISFW. "However, we do not accept everyone into our program. We require a measurable goal with a high level of commitment. You must also be coachable and truly ready to transform your body and your life. If you are willing to do that, then we guarantee results!"

Current client Cathy Phillips fully supports the Get In Shape For Women model. "I have been going to Get In Shape For Women for 13 weeks and I have lost 25 pounds. I am incredibly happy with my results so far, and it has truly changed my life," says Cathy. Her advice to other women? "Make a 100% commitment, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Listen to everything your trainer tells you. If you have doubts about what you are going to eat, you probably shouldn't eat it. Push yourself hard at each Get In Shape for Women session. Did I mention 100%, unrelenting commitment?"

ENTRIES BEING ACCEPTED FOR

Pilgrim Bank Community Board Contest

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Attention Cohasset! Your hometown bank is looking for a hometown touch on its new building.

Cohasset Residents are asked to put on their creative thinking caps and come up with an idea and/or design for the new "Pilgrim Community Point of Interest Board" which is approximately 6 feet high by 7 feet wide and is located on the new Pilgrim Bank building (Elm Street side).

The space will be visible to foot traffic and drivers alike. Pilgrim Bank would like to have something in that space that represents the town.

"We included that space on the building with the idea that we wanted to dedicate this one part of the bank to the community," says Pilgrim's Chief Executive Officer Frank Campbell. "No idea is a bad idea so we hope we receive a lot of entries to choose from."

Contestants must be 18 years or over and must be a Cohasset resident. Deadline for submission is Friday, Dec. 9. Additional information may be found on the Bank's website, www.bankpilgrim.com.

Do you have an idea for the new "Pilgrim Community Point of Interest Board"?

"No idea is a bad idea so we hope we receive a lot of entries to choose from."
Frank Campbell, Pilgrim Bank

"The building has a predominant location in town. We thought it would be appropriate to add a touch of Cohasset to it, utilizing the space," said Campbell. "Some of the ideas might be a map or a compass or directional details that are all unique to the town. We hope to get a lot of entries to choose from."

Please submit your vision with or without a sketch of your idea, along with name, address and contact information. All entries will be returned at owner's request. The Bank Committee will review each submission and select the finalist. The winner's drawing or "vision" will be produced in an appropriate format for that space and a prize will be awarded.

Charles Mann at Sunday AuthorTalks

Join friends and community at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 6, to hear Charles C. Mann talk about his new book, "1493." A study of the globalization of ecology, politics and economies of the last 500 years, "1493" is certain to provoke lively discussion.

Tickets are available at Cohasset Library and Buttonwood Books, or call the library at 781-383-1348, ext. 1, to reserve a spot.

Guests can be home for halftime, if they wish, or stay for the wine and cheese reception that follows Mann's talk. A Taste of Wine and Spirits is providing the library with wines for the occasion. Mann's book will be available for purchase and signing.

Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary Club.

Fire captains honored for 35 years of service

Each captain was invited to the front of the room, along with their family members, and presented with a certificate from the Massachusetts Department of Fire and thanked for their years of service.

Captain Mark Trask and Captain James Runey of the Cohasset Fire Department were each commended by Town Manager Mike Coughlin and Fire Chief Robert Silvia during Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting. Each captain has served on the force for 35 years.

Chief Silvia said that the captains were being honored on their exact anniversary date; both Trask and Rooney began working for the fire department on November 1, 1976.

"Both are very dedicated firefighters," said Silvia. "We as a town are lucky to have them."

AROUND TOWN

Turn clocks back Sunday!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Turn back clocks Sunday

Hello Cohasset and welcome November, 2011! Looks like the upcoming week has some "Indian Summer" type temps, make sure to get outside and enjoy! Don't forget that this Sunday, Nov. 6th (easier to do it when you hit the hay Saturday night) it is time to turn back the clocks for Daylight Saving Time. I cannot believe that we are in November, it doesn't seem possible.

Elves alert!

Calling all Elves! Here is a fun chance for children and families to get ready for the holidays. The South Shore Community Center Jingle Bell Walk Elf Raffle/Tickets are $10 each or 3 for $25/Tickets may be purchased on line at www.southshorecommunitycenter.com or by coming to the main office.

What is the prize you ask? Six lucky children will have the opportunity to: Dress as one of Santa's elves (costume provided by the South Shore Community Center): Ride into Cohasset Harbor on Santa's boat: Lead the Jingle Bell Walk Parade aboard a Clydesdale horse drawn wagon with Santa and friends: Take home special gift from Santa and have photo in the Cohasset Mariner

If you are interested in this raffle and chance for the raffle drawings that The Friends has put together to be held at the 4th annual Cabaret Nov. 4th & 5th, your support would be great appreciated to help us help the seniors of Cohasset. Good luck. We hope you win!! These raffles would not be possible without the support of local vendors. We are grateful for their support and in turn we hope you support them!

Making a difference

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and make a difference at the same time. This year the annual PSO-sponsored Make A Difference Days is the weekend of Nov. 5th & 6th. This event pairs volunteers with seniors to assist with general fall clean-up (i.e. raking and disposing of leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.). This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together while fostering community pride and spirit. Families, students and scout groups welcome! If you have any questions or are interested in volunteering please contact: Kelli Gildea 383-6529 or at ckgildea@verizon.net. If you would like assistance with general fall clean-up please contact: Carol Barrett at Cohasset Elder Affairs at 383-9112.

Animal shelter

Don't miss the "Fresh From Italy" Pre-Game Culinary Event at Orta Restaurant in Pembroke to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter on Sunday, Nov. 6th from 1 to 4pm. Last year's event was a sell-out, so don't miss this delicious afternoon of sensational Italian cuisine and fine wine at acclaimed Orta Restaurant! The "Fresh from Italy" event includes award-winning hors d'oeuvres and fabulous Italian cuisine. Fine wine will be served throughout the event and will be accompanied by a variety of desserts. A silent auction, door prizes, and a raffle will add to the fun. Tickets are just $50 per person and are on sale online and during public hours at the Scituate Animal Shelter, located at 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. For more information please visit us online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org or call 781-544-4533. A limited number of tickets will be sold. All proceeds support the work of the Scituate Animal Shelter, a no-kill shelter serving the greater South Shore region.

On stage!

Get ready to put these dates in your calendar and line up those babysitters NOW! Cohasset Dramatic Club's (CDC) will present Wendy Wasserstein's award-winning comedy The Sisters Rosensweig from Nov. 4 – 13 at the historic Town Hall Theater. Featuring an outstanding cast of CDC veterans and newcomers alike, 'Sisters' offers "a captivating look at three uncommon women and their quest for love, self-definition, and fulfillment" (The New York Times). The Sisters Rosensweig is directed by Bill Gardiner (Weymouth) and features an ensemble cast, which includes Woody Farrick (Dorchester), Andrew Lemieux (Scituate), Jonathan Markella (Duxbury), Paul McCuen (Plymouth), Molly McLellan (Rockland), Lisa Pratt (Cohasset), Sarah Rocca (Weymouth) and Maura Buckley Troiano (Marshfield). The production stage manager is Mark Bono (Milton). Performances are Nov. 4, 5, 11, 12 at 7:30 p.m. and Sundays, Nov. 6 and 13 at 2 p.m

Tickets are $16 general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups and can be purchased at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Cohasset Dramatic Club is delighted to offer a special "Sisters Save $5" discount to patrons attending either of the Friday performances. Put promo code "SAVE5" in at checkout on www.brownpapertickets.com when you purchase two tickets or more. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior at the box office. The Sisters Rosensweig is suggested for audience members 13 and up. For more information go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org

See page 22 for more about the CDC production!

FORMER DPW SUPERINTENDENT

Town says goodbye to Harold Litchfield

Imposing figure, loved by many

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

For many Cohasset "townies" and others who knew him well — not seeing Harold W. Litchfield around town — is going to take a lot of getting used to.

Describing Litchfield as a familiar figure would be an understatement. A large man with a gruff exterior and dry sense of humor, the 76-year-old Cohasset native led the newly created Department of Public Works for seven years until his retirement in 2002. He did not retire from work, however, he pored himself into H. W. Litchfield Contracting Co.; the name later changed to Harold and Jaime Litchfield Contractors, when Litchfield's grandson joined him in the business.

After a period of failing health, Litchfield passed away at home Friday (Oct. 28) surrounded by his family.

Lifelong friend Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane described Litchfield as about the hardest worker he had ever known. He said he met Litchfield for the first time in junior high – Litchfield was a year ahead. He said his friend always had a knack for mechanical things.

"He could be a very gruff person – but everyone who ever knew Harold never had a bad word to say about him," he said.

Litchfield started working at the then Cohasset Highway Department as a laborer back in 1960; he climbed the ladder and was elected as Highway Surveyor in 1978, a position he was elected to six times until his appointment as Superintendent of the newly formed DPW.

Litchfield, whose short, curt way of expressing himself, did not make him the easiest person to talk to, was also kind-hearted and warm with a gentle spirit that was evident to his family and friends.

His daughter, Julie Borland, recalled that one of her sister Peggy's closest friends – who had lost her own Dad — was initially scared to death of Litchfield. But after a time she got to know him and he walked her down the aisle at her wedding.

"He was a father and a grandfather figure to so many young people," Julie said. "He had a gruff exterior but he was actually a big softie."

Cohasset native Tommy Wigmore, now 47, whose father Steve is also a lifelong friend of Litchfield's, said he took care of a lot of youngsters growing up in town. "He was like 40-grit sandpaper but he really cared about a lot of people," Wigmore recalled.

In his years with the DPW (and formerly the highway department), Litchfield was never rattled by what Mother Nature could dish out. He knew every street intimately in Cohasset and could tell you off the top of his head what needed to be done to any stretch of road. He would often quip when people would ask him about what the winter would be like, "Ask me on April 15."

Borland said her Dad knew more about the infrastructure of Cohasset than anyone. He could tell you about every catch basin and where the pipes went. "He loved being DPW superintendent and before that highway surveyor," she recalled.

Back in March of 2002 when he had announced his retirement, Litchfield was standing in his usual spot at the back wall in the high school gymnasium at the annual Town Meeting. Still, it was not hard to find the imposing figure when all 400 attendees jumped to their feet to give him a standing ovation following a Town Meeting resolution honoring his many years of service to Cohasset.

Merle Brown, a former selectman and fellow townie, said what he liked best about Litchfield was his frankness. "It never made any difference to him who he was speaking to, you always knew how he felt.

"Even with his frankness, I think everyone loved him. He could scare the heck out of you but you always knew he was a man of his word and would stand up for what he thought was right," Brown said. "The town was very fortunate to have had him as the first DPW director."

A funeral mass was celebrated Wednesday (Nov. 2) at St. Anthony's. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, Litchfield's family asked that donations be made to the Lewy Body Dementia Association, 912 Killian Hill Road, SW, Liburn, GA 30047 or Norwell Visiting Nurse and Hospice, 91 Longwater Circle, Norwell, MA 02061.For Litchfield's obituary, see page 25.

Jingle Bell Walk Nov. 25

South Shore Community Center, 3 N. Main St., Cohasset, invites everyone to join in the fun at the 17th annual Jingle Bell Walk on Friday, Nov. 25. Festivities will begin at 2 p.m. when Santa and his Elves, along with some special friends, arrive at Cohasset Harbor at Government Island off Border Street via fishing boat. Join the parade and follow Santa's horse-drawn wagon from the Harbor, through Cohasset Village to the Community Center where hot chocolate, coffee, punch and cookies will await.

There will be holiday carols and the Rusty Skippers Band will be there to provide tunes to get everyone into the holiday spirit. Big Ryan the Storyteller will entertain children of all ages and children will be able to create their own holiday ornament to take home. There will also be open bowling for all to enjoy.

Bring cameras because Santa will be available for holiday photos. People can also enjoy their own Holiday Hayride around the Town Common. At dusk there will be a tree lighting on the Common and the holiday season in Cohasset will have officially begun.

Cohasset scouts travel to New Mexico

Members of Boy Scout Troop 28 Cohasset traveled to New Mexico in July to hike the Sangre de Cristo mountain range that runs through Philmont Scout Ranch. Philmont is a 137,500 acre cattle ranch that was donated to the Boy Scouts of America more than 50 years ago. Each summer, the ranch hosts more than 20,000 scouts from all over the globe.

The Troop 28 crew traversed over 75 miles in a matter of 10 days. This crew consisted of scouts Evan Ackley, Derek and Adam Benson, Greg Berube, Andrew Leighton, Levente Haber, Jack O'Brien,crew leader, and Jack Thomae. In addition adults on the trip included Kim Ackley, Bob Benson, Carsten Haber, and Marty Thomae. Jack O'Brien served as crew chief and Kim Ackley was the head adult advisor. While at Philmont the crew participated in numerous activities such as black powder rifle shooting, blacksmithing and gold panning. Additionally, they climbed many peaks such as Baldy Mt., 12,441 feet, and Mt. Phillips, 11,741 feet.

Although the Scouts returned safely their journey was filled with danger. Mountain lions and black bears are native to Philmont. Furthermore, the crew carried backpacks that weighed 40-50 pounds and even used a burro named Whitey to help carry equipment for a few days. This weight combined with constant physical activity led to several minor injuries but the crew persevered; as one of the adults put it "Pain is only a figment of your imagination." Also the crew had to purify almost all the water they drank during their trek, utilizing filters and chlorine tablets. The trip was exhilarating and the troop hopes to return within the next two years.

RISE PROGRAM

But while Compass was more education-focused, according to DeGennaro, RISE has a larger recreational component.

The morning program typically sees 15 to 20 students, said Carroll, while the afternoon usually has 20 to 25.

Staff

Grace Griffiths coordinates the program and was previously involved in the Compass program. Altogether, she has worked as coordinator in Cohasset for the past eight years. Other staff includes Marie Dunkelberger, Emelyn Grande, and Kevin Dykas, the P.E. teacher at Osgood.

Griffiths, who was in the middle of teaching a Native American lesson on Halloween, enjoys seeing the interaction between the students of all different grade levels.

"It's like a one-room schoolhouse," she said.

The older kids act as "peer leaders" to the younger ones, Griffiths explained.

"They are really wonderful children — really well-behaved," she added.

Griffiths also praised RISE's hardworking staff: "We have a wonderful mix of really talented people that each bring something to the table."

Grande, a full-time college student, has been part of RISE since the summer. While she hadn't worked with kids before, she said, "It's so easy — they're perfect."

Dykas also praised the students' good behavior, saying, "The older kids are great with the younger ones... It's neat to see the combination of ages."

Dykas, who has the students play noncompetitive games that focus on helping them learn about the sports, has been teaching the program's P.E. component on and off for the past decade. He said that he was happy to see the program change hands.

"I think it's going well," Dykas said of RISE. "It's nice to see that our [enrollment] numbers are up; they were down the last couple of years." He cited higher fees as the reason for dwindling numbers.

Now, Dykas said, "We're getting close to 20 kids in the mornings every day."

Having the Rec. Department take over the program helps in other avenues as well, explained Carroll.

"To be able to have a dedicated classroom in the school where we run our summer program allows us to share our resources, which is both cost effective and allows us to centrally maintain and control our inventory," he said in an email interview. "This will further permit us to seamlessly offer extended care not only for the school year but also the weeks of our summer program."

Carroll also noted that families who enroll their children in RISE on a regular basis will receive a discount for after-school recreation programs and the Rec. Department's February and April vacation week program.

Parents approve

Cohasset parents are singing RISE's praises.

"The kids are enjoying your program and we are grateful you took it over," Ralph Tulio told Carroll.

Michelle Liem, whose three daughters were enrolled in Compass last year and began attending RISE over the summer, said that having a program like this helps her work schedule.

"I'm working six days a week, so it's perfect for me," Liem said. "The kids are happy; they love it."

Liem added that her girls love all of the arts and crafts projects.

"Grace is fantastic," Liem said of RISE's coordinator. "They do a lot of activities that capture their interest."

"I think it's absolutely wonderful," said John Steinmetz, who enrolled his four children over the summer. "It was really great for the kids; they loved it. They got up and were excited to go."

Steinmetz added that the RISE staff is "really great and reliable."

"There are lots of activities for the kids of all different ages; they always found things for them to do.

"It was a really great experience for them" and helped "build their confidence," Steinmetz continued. "I think overall they really benefited and grew from the activities they did. I highly recommend it to anyone who has children... it worked well for us as a family."

OUR VIEW

Missing Halloween

We live in one of those neighborhoods where parents used to drive to and wait while their young trick-or-treaters would make the loop. During the busiest of Halloweens, we dished out candy to more than 100 little ghosts and goblins.

However, in recent years – our number of Halloween visitors has dwindled leaving us in a quandary. How much candy should we have on hand? We do not need to have extra candy lying around to temp us and expand our waistlines post-Halloween.

This year, we ran out and bought four bags of candy but only had to open one. Even though we put an electrically lit, inflated pumpkin out on our front stoop to be a welcoming signal, we only had one Halloween trick-or-treater. A boy who looked about 10, who was dressed as a pirate and seemed to be on his own, was the only one who stopped by!

We have talked to other people who have come to the Cohasset office this week who still had a bunch of trick-or-treaters at their door Monday. We were happy to hear that because we love Halloween and think it is one of the holidays that children will fondly remember in the years ahead.

According to national statistics – Halloween is as popular as ever when it comes to our pocketbooks. Americans spend $2.12 billion annually on Halloween costumes; $1.19 billion on Halloween candy; $1.65 billion on Halloween decorations and $350 million on Halloween greeting cards. The average American household spends $44 on Halloween candy each year. Each person consumes an average of 24 pounds of candy each year – a large portion of that is eaten around Halloween. The most popular candies are: candy corn, Snickers, Reese's Peanut Butter Cups and Kit Kat.

If you have leftover candy and you would rather not be tempted to consume it yourself – you could donate it to our troops. They always like yummy Halloween treats, bringing a taste and memory of home.

Excess candy can be donated to Operation Gratitude. The Sullivan,Garrity & Donnelly Insurance Ggency is collecting Halloween candy for the troops at 15 Depot Court in Cohasset Village. Office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The last day of the candy drive is Nov. 30.

Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly appreciates everyone's support, as do our servicemen and women halfway around the world.

HEALTH NOTES

The gadgetry of modern life

STEVE BOBO

Cell phones and other portable electronic communication devices; their impact on modern life.

Because of electronics like cell phones, the cursive form of handwriting is being lost.

Never in history have so many elements of our day-to-day life changed so rapidly. Fortunately, personal preference of individuals has kept pace with the practical changes involved in organizing, storing and discarding old inaccurate information and living in general. How have devices like the ubiquitous iPhone changed the way a person can do his job and live his life?

According to authorities on education, many kids no longer understand cursive writing. Because of electronics like cell phones, the cursive form of handwriting is being lost. Some people, those who read checks, for example, may not understand words written in the cursive form.

Wireless phones and health wireless phones including both cell phones and cordless are small two-way radios. They work by using radio frequency waves to transmit and receive the sounds of our voices. Broadcast radios operate on a different radio frequency and are much more powerful. Wireless phones therefore have low-level radio frequency fields around them. From time to time we hear references to radiation from wireless phones, which can be confused with radiation from sources such as medical x-rays. While radio waves from wireless phones and broadcast radio use signals radiated to the receiver, medical x-rays can ionize and damage biological material. Radiation from cell phones is negligible.

A time in life occurs when a diversity of experience becomes important. A person should adapt to technical changes early but not too early. Recent material indicates that children younger than the age of 2 not be allowed to watch TV and since pre-schoolers, aged 2 through 5 spend about 32.5 hours a week watching TV, watching DVDs, DVRs or playing video games, perhaps such practices might better be replaced by more personal time with elders.

Older pre-teens, age 6 through 11, because of school, are still spending 28 hours per week watching their visual communication devices. Since personal electronics provide access to the Internet and TV, the younger part of our population may be experiencing exposure to much in society that their elders only saw much later. An example is the fact that the country has become a true melting pot as many races with different ethnic backgrounds prove themselves in fields once relegated to a select elite; a condition of which many were ignorant until they reached maturity. Now available is broad exposure, early in life, to the ubiquity of mixed lifestyles we live in the U.S.; ways and manners kids of earlier generations only observed when entering military service or even later.

Weather: Fortunately, our new electronics technology has, almost instantly, given us views of the most irregular summer weather since records have been kept, with storms, fires, droughts and floods, etc; the result of an abnormal orientation of the pacific phenomenon La Niña and its counterpart El Niño. Temperature was lower than normal by 3 to 5 degrees C between June and September. The summer is not necessarily a long-term change, precursor to the inevitable facts of climate change and global warming. We can probably expect a continuance of global warming. Meanwhile, our gadgets can provide us with graphic examples and records of our fickle climate.

Nature's march on this planet, the natural progression of things takes a pattern: Over eons, man has taken on a form and an appearance. He has adapted to a variety of conditions. Could it be that his ability to adapt can be used to enrich his life in ways we can only speculate upon? For example will we soon have cell phones that will allow us to call a pet – or feed a goldfish remotely? Think of all the possibilities.

WARRANT ARTICLE

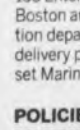
Sewer Commission requests additional funds

The Sewer Commission brought a warrant article for the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting before the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday night. The article requests a capital reserve fund transfer of $165,000 to the sewer department enterprise fund.

The commission is asking the town to share in the costs of paving and work done outside the Little Harbor Sewer District. The additional funds would boost a $2 million paving project the sewer commission undertook a year and a half ago. This project is part of a more extensive $14 million sewering project.

Both the board of selectmen and the Capital Budget Committee were hesitant to support the funds transfer. Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer and committee member Jack Keniley asked to see more official documentation on the project's scope before making any decisions.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr said that they would revisit the item at the next board of selectmen meeting on Nov. 8.



Next week's Mariner will have more on this issue.

MAKING TRACKS

Under the Operations Department umbrella

Meeting House Pond this week.

Cohasset's Operations Department — From time to time we have mentioned Cohasset's new Operations Department. This week we'd like to spend some of our words to fill you in on the need and functions this department is charged with. Actually, Operations is an umbrella that pulls together a series of functions that have been separately performed by the Town into one coordinated unit. Historically, the Town has had the Department of Public Works that consisted of the Highway, Tree & Parks, Cemetery and Transfer Station functions. Also, historically each of these sub-units operated rather autonomously. Only rarely did we see crossover of personnel from one function to another. However, we always have had employees fill in at the Transfer Station if any of the "regulars" were not available, or that Tree and Park personnel would also perform cemetery related duties. Other than that employees stayed pretty much in their respective areas. In addition, the Town established the Facilities Department, under the Operations umbrella, to formalize the function of building upkeep and maintenance. But again, there was little cross-pollination between Facilities and Public Works.

Today, we read in the news that employee cross-training is important toward achieving maximum employee flexibility. The objective is to give the employees the necessary tools so they can be beneficial wherever their efforts are needed most. Municipal government is no different. Flexibility and cross-training is a must to have an efficient organization. The creation of the Operations Department is a major step toward improving employee flexibility. Within the Operations umbrella various skills can be moved to wherever they are needed. The Operations concept can also make individual positions wider in scope, richer in content and more rewarding, benefiting the employer and the taxpayer. That in a nutshell is what the Operations Department is all about.

Now, let's go from big-picture stuff to a few details. Most of you probably have a concept of what the DPW is, but Facilities may be a new concept, so we'd like to elaborate on that for a bit. First of all, if you've seen one of the trucks around Town with the sign on the door shown in the photo, then you've seen the Facilities Department at work. Facilities have a tough job because they have two major clients who share their support services; Cohasset Public School System and the Town. As you might imagine, Facilities has to walk a fine line to properly serve their two constituents. So, what does Facilities do for the schools? First of all they run the custodial operation that performs the daily routine cleaning that is vital. Since the Facilities Department is quite small, they act as the administrator and oversight for outside contractors who perform this work. The also handle routine repair and maintenance tasks. If a repair or a service task requires special skills, Facilities must find a vendor who can perform the work and make sure that the work is done properly.

They are responsible for the security systems you may have noticed at the schools. If you try to gain entrance to any of the school buildings while students are in the building you will find that the doors are kept locked. A security camera allows school personnel to verify the identity of anyone wishing to gain admission. These security systems are the responsibility of the Facilities Department. They are also responsible to oversight of the important environmental control systems in the school buildings.

When it comes to sophisticated systems with specialized technical knowledge, the Facilities Department calls on outside specialists trained to deal with that equipment. In this case, their role is to find a responsible vendor, check their references and monitor their work and their invoices.

This week' activities — This week, the DPW is doing a bit of remedial work on our roads. The Commonwealth grants to each town an amount for general maintenance of roads and sidewalks. As and tight budgets have become the norm in the recent past, this grant amount has become smaller. However when these monies, called Chapter 90 funds, are available, the DPW applies them to the public ways that need reconstruction the most. This week, a small section of North Main Street that could really benefit from reconstruction was ground and repaved. This section of heavily traveled road was from the Forest Avenue / Cedar Street area to the Greenbush Station. In addition, for those of you who have suffered the ride from North Main Street to the Transfer Station will be pleased to know that Cedar Street also is being ground and paved from North Main Street to Route 228. The plan is to grind and pave the southern end of Cedar Street up to the DPW barn on Tuesday, so that the Transfer Station can open Wednesday, as scheduled, without traffic delays. The balance of Cedar Street to Route 228 will be completed on Wednesday. At least that's the plan as we write this. Toward the end of this week you will know whether we were successful. We have included a photo of the DPW doing oversight during a similar road paving project.

Meeting House Pond — Although this project has taken much longer than we expected, the engineers and the contractor have been stalwart in their support. The pond was partially filled with a combination of Town water and rainwater. The engineers are now waiting to see if their new work has finally sealed the slow leaks that caused the water to leave our beautiful pond all by itself.

FOR THE RECORD

Readers share thoughts on religion

GREGORY MATHIS

The response to last week's column was so varied and interesting, I wanted to share some of the comments I received from readers.

While I was trying to play it safe with last week's column, titled "We're losing our religion," it's always a safe bet that any mention of religion will likely prompt a dialogue, spark a debate or even lead to a diatribe.

The response to last week's column was so varied and interesting, I wanted to share some of the comments I received from readers.

Here is an excerpt from a very thoughtful email:

"I don't think it is necessary to have priests, ministers and rabbis write columns. If people are active in their faith, they will seek their spiritual guidance personally. I think a forum where everyday pilgrims of today share their faith stories each week would be a very good feature. How does God move in their lives?

"People could email different stories each week, and you could choose some to feature as a 'Faith in Action' column. I know I would look forward to reading positive stories.

"I think what has been lost in society is just being kind and loving and not ashamed to talk about it. Everyone is so concerned about being politically correct. We need to step outside the box and have the courage of our convictions and focus on the good we can do for each other.

"I think the word 'religion' can sound very divisive and territorial. Faith and love are very inclusive and have no boundary lines."

Another reader wrote:

"I agree with your honest admission that the... religion section is mostly a (tedious?) listing of events, stagnant information. My problem with your suggestion of featuring clergy to write columns is also playing it safe. When clergy write for the general public, it often turns out to whitewashed and painfully 'safe.'

"May I suggest you think 'outside the box'? The box in this case is labeled 'religion,' by which you mean orthodox religious institutions. I would just point out that one's spiritual or religious experience has its own inherent validity quite independent of any religious institution's beliefs/dogmas/teachings, etc. As Buddhists have been saying for 2,500 years, even a belief in a God is not a necessary prerequisite for spiritual experience.

"You could limit the size of each column dedicated to 'church' institutional events and create another section. The title should avoid the word 'religion.' You could solicit aphorisms (three or four sentences) under the rubric 'Life's lessons from our community.' Insist that they not be sectarian. The sayings might be informative, insightful and entertaining. There may be a Mark Twain out there!"

Yet another reader made reference to digging deeper into real issues as they pertain to religion.

"I had to chuckle when I read your article, 'We're losing our religion.' I wholeheartedly agree. There are little to no words coming from the pulpit or printed page about the controversies in our world today. I often submit letters... regarding issues such as abortion and other readers remain eerily silent."

Thanks to the many readers who took the time to respond. I look forward to keeping the dialogue open and exploring the possibility of using some of these wonderful ideas in the future.

SENIOR SCENE

Fun field trip to Mt. Greylock

LOUISE SMULLEN

Hello again. The seasons come and go by so quickly. Just a few days ago the ghosts and goblins, along with some princesses, were out around town gathering treats. In no time we'll be looking forward to family and friends gathering for their Thanksgiving feasts. There are churches and other organizations already making plans for Christmas fairs and bazaars. Autumn seems to be the busiest time of the year.

On a Monday morning in October a group left Cohasset for a day trip to Mt. Greylock in Adams. We were hoping to see the beautiful fall foliage, but many of the deciduous trees had already shed their leaves, though occasionally there was a spot of yellow or red.

When we reached Greylock the bus climbed up, up, up negotiating a few scary hairpin curves. The view from the summit is fantastic. One can look across the valley and see more hills and mountains. In the towns below the houses looked not much larger than sugar cubes.

After lunch at the summit the group continued on to tour the Hancock Shaker Village. Our tour guide was excellent, and we learned about the beginning of the sect and their beliefs and how they lived. It was really most interesting.

The first October seminar was presented by Pat McDonough, S.H.I.N.E director. She gave us an update on Medicare for 2012. As you may know, if you wish to make changes in your medical insurance or need to sign up for a Medicare part D Plan, it must be done by Dec. 7, 2011. If you have questions or need help with this, you may meet with Carol Barrett by calling 781-383-9112.

The following week Donna Selbert, N.P. from Norwell Visiting Nurse Association, talked about managing blood pressure. She told about diet, stress and substances, which can all effect blood pressure. Did you know that the heart pumps about five quarts of blood per minute?

Two weeks ago Sandra Smith of North River Home Care led the seniors on a game of Bingo which is always fun. Five participants won prizes.

We are fortunate to have an Elder Affairs staff here in Cohasset whose activities keep us from getting rusty.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

BRIEFLY

Committee appointments

The board of selectmen made the following appointments on Tuesday night:

- Eleanor Barrett to the Elder Affairs Board of Directors
- Susan Hoadley to the Community Preservation Commission in a citizen at large position
- Alexander Koines as the Conservation Commission Representative to the Community Preservation Committee
- George W. Parks to the Cohasset Harbor Committee as the Yacht Club Representative
- Terese D'Urso to the Board of Registrars
- Diane Benson to the Board of Registrars

Each appointment will last for three years, save for the Harbor Committee position, which is a yearlong appointment.

Fifth-graders honor veterans

The Deer Hill fifth grade class is again honoring Cohasset Veterans. All Cohasset veterans are invited on Wednesday, Nov. 9. Doors open at 9:30 a.m. with light refreshments in the library followed by an assembly in the gymnasium at 10 a.m. Honored guests will include Coleman Nee, Massachusetts Secretary for Veterans' Services as well as an Iraq War Veteran who will be bringing an "assist" dog.

Veterans Day

Cohasset veterans will conduct the traditional observances at 11 a.m. on Friday, Nov. 11 at Veterans Memorial Park at Cohasset Harbor. Keynote speaker this year is Town Manager Mike Coughlin, an Army veteran and former JAG officer.

All welcome to birthday event

All veterans, no matter what branch of the service, and their families are welcome to attend the US Marine Corps birthday celebration on Saturday, Nov. 12 at the Legion Post on Summer Street.

Social hour starts at 5:30 p.m., with dinner at 6:30. Tickets are $10 for the roast beef dinner.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Seeks change to Saturday

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There seems to be a consensus that the Cohasset Triathlon is a good thing; however, the parties involved can't seem to agree on a date.

The triathlon's organizer, Bill Burnett, has been trying to push the event from its usual Sunday date to a Saturday after listening to feedback from local clergy. Burnett proposed the triathlon be held on Saturday, June 23rd, rather than the 24th.

However, Burnett soon realized that the 23rd is the same day the MS Bike Ride comes through Cohasset, utilizing the same roads the triathlon would. Burnett scrapped that date in favor of the following weekend, June 30th.

Burnett presented that date to the Board of Selectmen a few weeks back and won their support for the change to a Saturday, pending approval from the Sandy Beach Association.

This past Tuesday, Burnett came before the selectmen to report that Sandy Beach vetoed June 30th because of its proximity to the 4th of July. Burnett said he spoke to the Association's president, Robin Lawrence, then delivered the news to the clergy.

"I met with them this afternoon, and they are not as pleased with the date," said Burnett. "We wanted to find a Saturday time that would work, but the 30th is not an agreeable time for the Sandy Beach Association."

So far, the triathlon is back to its "normal" time on a Sunday, but Burnett is hoping to move it to a Saturday in 2013. Burnett also said he planned to speak with organizers of the MS Ride about having them change their route so that the Cohasset Triathlon can use the roads on the Saturday that weekend.

"I'm planning to work with them," said Burnett. "We don't get anything from that ride [as a town]," whereas the Cohasset community benefits directly from the triathlon.

Selectman Paul Carlson asked how the MS Ride got permission to use Cohasset roads. Jennifer Oram, assistant to the Town Manager, said that the town has voted on it in the past.

When Selectmen Chair Ted Carr asked, "Have we voted on it for this year?" Oram said, "Not yet."

"Is it too late for them to change their route up a bit?" asked Selectman Diane Kennedy.

Burnett said that in fairness to the MS Ride, he didn't want to ask them to make changes for the 2012 event.

"I love the conversation," Burnett said. "What are we getting back from this? This is a great conversation for 2013."

The MS Ride, said Oram, is "huge."

"They work with the Music Circus," she explained. "They stop here, go to Scituate, and all the way down Route 3A to the Cape. Cohasset is more of a rest stop."

Oram went on to say that there has been a discussion on having an event application for situations like these. Burnett said he would be willing to help draft such an application.

"I'm all for that," Burnett said. "If they use our town streets, it's important to give back to the local community."

The board also discussed approaching the Sandy Beach Association again, asking them to reconsider June 30th.

"I'm nervous about Sunday," said Carr.

"It's always been Sunday," Burnett said. "Because of the clergy, we were going to get away from it... I'm going to try hard to make things better next year."

Selectman Fred Koed asked Burnett what his deadline was to register a date for the triathlon; Burnett responded that he has until December 1, so he is comfortable with waiting another week to confirm.

Carlson said he would like to discuss the date in question with Sandy Beach.

"We want to hear their concerns and find the right date for the town," Kennedy agreed.

Carr said that he would put the item back on the agenda for the Nov. 8th board meeting.

Long-term care insurance: Worth it in the long run?

Seminar held at Paul Pratt Library

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A handful of people braved the rain for a talk on long-term care insurance at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Thursday, Oct. 27. Those who attended the free seminar had their questions and concerns about aging family members or their own care.

Matt Cunningham of the Bulfinch Group, along with Mark Baron of Baron Long Term Care Insurance in Andover, presented some background about what long-term care insurance is, how it can help families caring for an elderly, ill or injured loved one, how much money can be spent and saved by having a plan, and some pros and cons of getting insurance.

Cunningham shared that he experienced long-term insurance firsthand when his grandmother developed dementia seemingly overnight.

"Today, the fact is we're living longer than ever, and along the way, our family members face the consequences of that," said Cunningham. "An important feature of having a policy in place helps the caregiver meet the needs of their parent or spouse.

"But how do we pay for these things?" Cunningham continued. "We have few options outside savings to care for that."

During his presentation, Cunningham shared a startling statistic: there are 65 million unpaid caregivers in the U.S. These are folks who take time out of their work and personal lives to care for an ill or elderly family member and do not receive compensation for it.

Cunningham estimated that the costs of providing such care could be upwards of $1.2 million over the course of four years. The Association for Long Term Care estimates that a woman caregiver will lose $565,000 in lifetime wages (50 percent of primary caregivers are women, according to the Association).

In these economic times, costs like these simply are not feasible to the general population.

"The big question is not who will take care of you... your family will," Cunningham's Power Point presentation explained, "but rather what providing that care will do to your family, finances and retirement plan."

Cunningham, Baron and the audience members present debated whether or not long-term insurance was worth it. It is increasingly being offered by insurance companies to folks in their fifties and sixties. Many people, Cunningham explained, are reluctant to pay for care that they don't think they need.

But Cunningham also said that many people "go bankrupt" when trying to pay for long-term care without insurance (see sidebar). A long-term insurance plan could cost around $5,000 per year.

Cunningham also said that having a long-term care plan in place can help "keep families together" by assisting them with home care, hospice services or placing the affected family member in a facility.

The "con" of long-term care insurance, Cunningham said, is that "if you don't use it, you lose it. But the bottom line is, all insurance is like that."

Baron said that if folks are interested in purchasing a long-term insurance plan, they should act now.

"If you know you want to do it, don't wait," Baron said. "In the current economy, inflation rates are low."

Long-term care insurance: What you need to know

Baron shared the following information in a Power Point:

What is long-term care?
Receiving assistance with the following activities of daily living [if two of these can not be done for 90 days]:
Dressing
Bathing Eating
Toileting
Continence
Transferring
Separate are of need caused by cognitive issues (Alzheimer's, dementia)

Types of long-term care services:
Services in the home: Home health care, chores, home care, personal care
Daytime services outside the home: Social day care, adult foster care, adult day care, health, dementia day care
Specialized services: Respite and hospice
Services in a facility: Assisted living, CCRC (Continuing Care Retirement Community), Nursing Home

Average costs of long-term care in MA:

Home health care	Home health care
At 4 hours/day ($20-$25/hour)	$30K-$36K/year
Assisted living
Base cost	$35K-$60K/year + extra care
Nursing home care	$90K - $120K/year

Mass. 2010 nursing home average daily rate in the Boston area for a private room was around $339 per day; home care was about $24 per hour.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on one roll call from the week of October 24-28. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

RETIREMENT PLAN FOR NONPROFIT EMPLOYEES (H 3754)
House 145-7, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would allow employees of nonprofit organizations to establish a retirement account that would be administered by State Treasurer Steve Grossman's office. Contributions would be made on a pre-tax basis and all earnings would be tax-deferred.

The treasurer already administers the SMART plan, a similar deal with some $5 billion in assets, for 300,000 state and local employees.

Supporters said this would help an estimated 14 percent of the Massachusetts workforce - 460,000 people - who work in the nonprofit sector. They noted that many smaller non-profits are unable to afford the cost of setting up any type of retirement plan. Some noted the lack of retirement benefits at non-profits hurts their ability to attract top notch employees who choose jobs in the public or private sector because they have a retirement plan. Others argued the cost of administering the plan would be minimal since the treasurer's office already administers the SMART plan.

Opponents said this sets a bad precedent and noted the state should not be administering plans for what are essentially private, nongovernmental organizations -- particularly when the state's own pension plans have their own problems. They argued this policy would actually cost taxpayer dollars to administer and might expand to the point where the state is administering retirement plans for companies and individuals in the private sector.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)

CASINO BILL CONFEREES - Senate President Therese Murray and House Speaker Robert DeLeo appointed the members who will serve on a House-Senate casino bill conference committee. Each chamber has approved a different version of the legislation; the conference committee will hammer out a compromise version of the bill that would allow three casinos and one slot parlor in the Bay State. Sens. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst), Jennifer Flanagan (D-Leominster) and Richard Ross (R-Wrentham) will represent the Senate while Reps. Joseph Wagner (D-Chicopee), Brian Dempsey (D-Haverhill) and Paul Frost (R-Auburn) will negotiate for the House.

AUTO INSURANCE BASED ON CREDIT RATING (S 461) - The Financial Services Committee gave a favorable report to a bill that would prohibit insurance companies from basing a customer's insurance rates on his or her credit rating, education or occupation.

REQUIRE DEFIBRILLATORS IN SCHOOLS (S 1123) - The Public Health Committee held a hearing on a bill requiring automatic external defibrillators in all public schools. Emotional testimony was given by Laura Geraghty, who almost died in April 2009 when her heart stopped for 43 minutes while driving a school bus on the grounds of Newton South High School. She said she was saved by several people who administered CPR and the use of a defibrillator.

OTHER HEALTH BILLS - Other measures at the Public Health hearing included prohibiting the use of latex gloves and products by all food handlers (S 1132), banning the use of artificial trans fats, also known as partially hydrogenated vegetable oils, in Massachusetts restaurants (S 1164); requiring the Department of Public Health to study whether it is feasible to require restaurants to use different utensils, working stations and storage for foods that contain peanut oils (H 2337); requiring "take-out" restaurants that do not have a public restroom to install a sink for hand-washing or provide a hand sanitizer for customers and employees (H 2902); and expanding the current law that requires restaurants with more than 25 seats to have on the premises either a device to remove food lodged in persons' throats or an employee trained in the manual Heimlich Maneuver (H 1462). The measure would make the requirements apply to all restaurants regardless of their seating capacity.

ALLOW CONSUMERS TO USE COUPONS AND REBATES TO PURCHASE PRESCRIPTIONS (H 1216) - The Financial Services Committee held a hearing on legislation allowing consumers to use coupons and rebate offers when purchasing prescriptions. In 2010, the House and Senate approved different versions of the bill. They never agreed on a compromise version and the measure died at the end of the session.
Supporters say this would help lower the cost of prescription drugs for seniors and others who otherwise might not be able to afford them. They note the current law banning the use of coupons and rebates was designed to prevent drug companies from trying to induce customers into buying their drugs. Some say the unintended consequence of the law is it now prevents people from saving money on prescriptions.

SENIOR CENTER

Public-nonprofit partnership presents challenges

STM articles debated this week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Social Service League and Elder Affairs are trying to keep the new senior center building project moving forward. Glenn Pratt, a member of the building committee, presented five warrant articles for Special Town Meeting to the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Nov. 1.

The board voted to support four of these articles, while earlier that evening the Advisory Committee only supported one of the five, the one item the selectmen ended up taking off the warrant.

The first two articles, 13 and 15, involved land transfers from the Cohasset Swim Center; the land that the new senior center will be built on is owned by the Swim Center, while the town owns the land adjacent to the Swim Center. To complete the project, the two entities need to swap.

Complicating the construction project is the fact that the Social Service League, a private nonprofit entity, is primarily funding the project and plans to build a municipal building. Unfortunately for the proposed senior center, this creates a host of legal issues that the League will have to overcome.

One major obstacle is obtaining funds that were privately donated by citizens to put toward the building project. Last year, the Social Service League pledged $1 million to fund the project; the construction itself could cost $5 million. The group is fundraising to cover additional costs.

The League is hoping to transfer $20,000 from the public building fund to the private Wilcutt Commons Building Fund. Town Manager Mike Coughlin cautioned that they would run into problems when trying to transfer public funds to a private nonprofit.

"In this stage, this is not a consummated pub-private partnership," Coughlin said in a phone interview on Wednesday. "To do that before there's a consummated project would not be in the best interest of the town.

"That's not to say once the deal is consummated and signed and we go ahead, those monies can't be used to support the town's costs with respect to that project," Coughlin added. "But we have a responsibility to protect the taxpayer dollars."

Capital Budget Committee member Jack Keniley said at the meeting, "You're putting funds up before you've got a deal; I tend to agree with Mike."

Pratt wondered why money that was donated for this purpose could not simply be transferred over to a different account. Earlier that evening, he presented the warrant articles to the Advisory Committee, and they had a different view than Coughlin and the selectmen.

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore said his board felt that the articles involving the land transfers, lease and grant of easements were premature, and better saved for spring Town Meeting. However, he did not see the harm in letting the League access their donated funds in order to boost the project.

"We're in support of the project in general," Pescatore said in a phone call. "But I think it's too early in the game to have all these approvals pass; it essentially seals the deal for the center before anyone sees financials."

The purpose of fall Special Town Meeting, Pescatore explained, has "always traditionally been to clean up problems from last year and make minor corrections in budget — you just don't take big projects to Special Town Meeting."

Despite his disapproval of the other articles, Pescatore still feels it's important to keep the project going, and thought the funds transfer would be one way to do that.

"The way it was explained to us," said Pescatore, "is that private citizens have contributed money to the town for the specific building fund for the senior center. We thought [their request for a funds transfer] was reasonable. We supported the idea of doing it, and recommended they have access to funds because they were donated to support new center. However, we recognized there were technicalities to jump through to get it. But that's the only thing we supported to allow them to keep project moving forward."

Selectman Diane Kennedy, who is one of the selectman liaisons to the Senior Center Planning Group, said that she would like to discuss the matter with the subcommittee before coming to any kind of decision. The group's next meeting was scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 3.

"I'm very reluctant" to support the funds transfer article, said Kennedy. "I think it's premature." Kennedy wondered how folks who donated their money would be affected if the project failed to take off for several more months. "Maybe we'll be further along in May for Town Meeting."

Several board members called the project a "chicken and eggs" situation. Pratt said that he was merely trying to get things in place now to keep the project from stalling over the next several months.

"The reason we don't want to wait," Pratt said in a phone interview, "is if, for some reason, we're in a place to negotiate the lease, know the size of the building, and negotiate the cost, we want to keep [the project] moving. We don't want to sit on our hands for three months."

For now, Pratt said he is glad the other articles will appear on the Special Town Meeting warrant.

"We'll just move on," he said of the funds transfer "glitch." "We'll get the money eventually."

But was this a major setback for the project?

"Not at all," said Pratt. "The first step is to get the articles on the Town Meeting floor so they can be debated by voters. I think we're there; I'm confident the selectmen will put the [other] articles on the warrant."

Selectman Fred Koed said that while he was supportive of the other articles, he felt the funds transfer issue would be a "distraction" on the Special Town Meeting floor.

Ultimately, the selectmen decided to delay voting on the matter until next week's meeting. In the meantime, Capital Budget and the Senior Center Planning group would have a chance to discuss the articles.

Coughlin said during his phone interview that he is a big supporter of the senior center building project.

"In the end, we want this to be a win-win for the town, the Social Service League, and more importantly the seniors of this community," said Coughlin. "I have my concerns, but I believe in the end the people should decide this question, and they'll get that opportunity on Dec. 6."

MCAS RESULTS

make AYP in fourth and seventh grades. These are crucial years for test-takers, Demas explained.

"Grade four has a full essay writing component," the curriculum coordinator said. "It's their first time writing under pressure."

It isn't surprising, Demas explained, that "ELA would take a hit." Grade seven also has a writing component.

Overall, Cohasset did make AYP in ELA. Doing so means that the district will not be identified as "needs improvement" in that area; this only happens when a district fails to make AYP in the same subject area and all grade-spans for students in the aggregate or any sub-group for two consecutive years, according to the district profile report.

If a district makes AYP in the same subject area for at least one grade-span for two consecutive years, it will have a "no accountability" status under NCLB. Currently, Cohasset's NCLB accountability standing reads "no status" for the aggregate and all subgroups.

It's not about how Cohasset stacks up against other districts, Demas stressed. "We are in competition with ourselves."

Demas shared that she learned from Yong Zhao, Presidential Chair and Associate Dean for Global Education, College of Education at the University of Oregon and author of "Catching Up or Leading the Way," that if the schools are only looking at the MCAS scores and are doing well, they are doing something wrong.

"It's just one multiple choice test — it doesn't measure creativity," said Demas. "The philosophy in Cohasset is to look at the whole child.

"We don't want parents to panic," Demas continued. "They need to know we have very bright kids, and they're doing just fine."

For all grades, 83 percent scored proficient or higher in ELA on the district level; 69 percent were proficient or higher at the state level. In math, 80 percent scored proficient or higher in the district, and 58 percent in the state.

Cohasset's CPI (composite performance index) scores appear to be off the charts, with a 93.9 in ELA and 92.3 in math.

Overall, Demas concluded, "Cohasset always does well."

"We don't look at test as something we need to teach; we look at how well we've met the standards we've set for ourselves," said Demas. "We want to look at frameworks and know the common core standards for 21st century. If we do that well, we don't have to worry about a test."

Good news for Cohasset schools:

- Ranked #1 in the state for ELA grade 10 (Boston Magazine)
- #7 reported proficiency on the district proficiency (WCVB-TV)
- Of 86 grade 10 students, 73 scored advanced in Math and 55 scored advanced in ELA
- 25 students attained a perfect score in at least one subject area

MCAS vocabulary:

- AYP = Adequate Yearly Progress
- CPI = Composite Performance Index: Calculation of student performance, used for AYP based on needed progression and years left to 2014
- Cohort = The same group of test-takers over a period of time
- Aggregate = Everyone in the group
- Sub-groups = Specific group with similar population: gender, race, income status, disability status, ELL (English language learner)
- SGP = Student Growth Percentile: Measures student change in achievement over time—individual, classroom, grade, school, and district measurement

GIMME SHELTER

Heather and Mike looking for 'together home'

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring two new kittens, Heather and Mike. These adorable gray-and-white kittens are to be adopted as a pair. They were rescued from the wild and have quickly become domesticated purring little fluff-balls. HSAR also has a litter of six sweet and cuddly little black kittens that are ready and waiting for homes.

If you're planning on giving kittens to your children for holiday gifts, HSAR suggests that it's best to adopt them prior to the holidays. That way, they will be settled in and be part of the family by the time the holidays come around.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

If you're planning on giving kittens to your children for holiday gifts, HSAR suggests that it's best to adopt them prior to the holidays.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

HSAR thanks the many people who generously donate to their cause. They couldn't do it without you!

HSAR's 2012 Kittendales Calendar is now available. Joanne Berman, and her sister, Susan Berman Davis, have donated their time and talent to this collectible and unique calendar. It makes a great holiday gift.

Sign up for Polar Express

On Saturday Dec. 3, the annual Scituate North Pole Express will be sponsored by the Scituate C.O.R.S.E Foundation (Community of Resources for Special Education) and S.H.O.R.E. (Scituate High Opportunities and Resources for Education). This magical event will be held at the Greenbush Commuter Rail Station with four trains departing at 9:45 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2:40p.m and 4:40p.m. Passengers should arrive 30 minutes prior to departure.

Children and adults alike will enjoy this 60-90 minute train ride which replicates the journey to the North Pole as told in the classic story of "The Polar Express." Along the ride the children will be read this holiday story, be served milk and cookies, sing Christmas carols, receive a goody bag and be greeted by holiday characters including Santa and Mrs. Clause. The cost of this event is $20; children under the age of one will ride free on the lap of an adult. Tickets may be purchased with cash or a check at The Front Street Book Shop, 165 Front St, Scituate Harbor.

Additional information, tickets, and sponsorship for this event will be made available on www.scituatenorthpoleexpress.com.

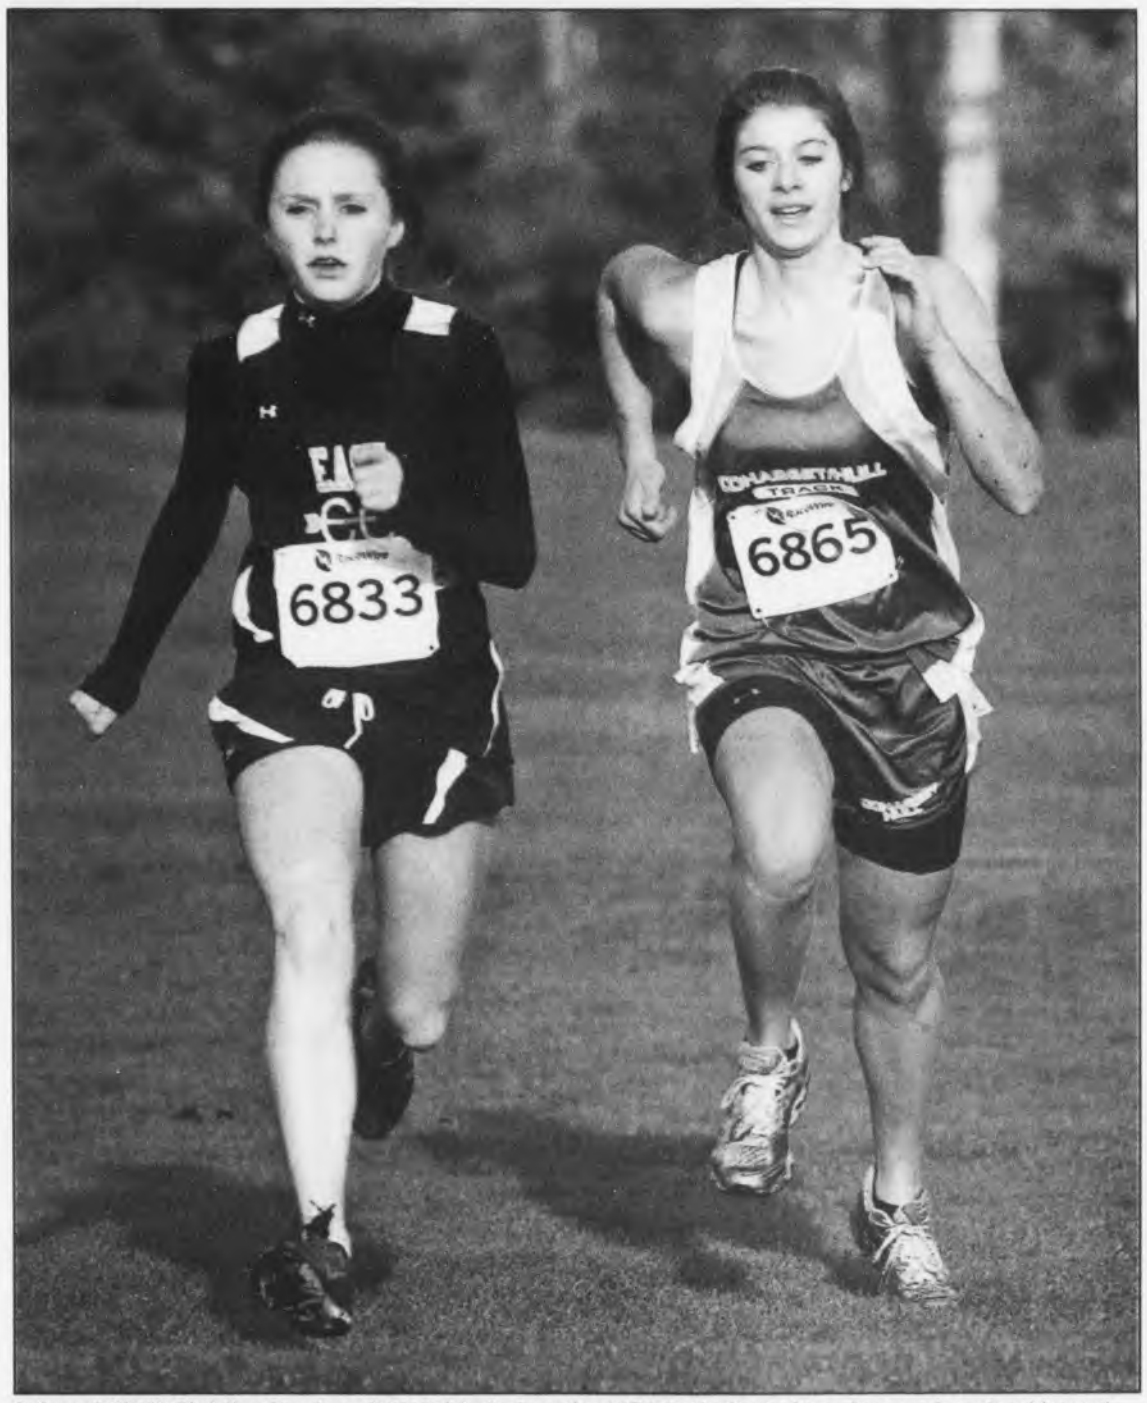
Rough night

Mashpee runs through Skippers

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Heading into their game against Mashpee, Friday night in Cohasset, Skipper coach Pete Afanasiw said his team was planning on playing aggressive defense and looked to play the game on their terms against the undefeated Falcons who improved to 8-0.

Cohasset came out looking to take the game to Mashpee, but in the end, Mashpee had too much for the Skippers in a 27-7 Mashpee victory.



Credit the Mashpee line, or quarterback Zack Orcutt, who had a brilliant game on both sides of the ball.

Cohasset also had no real answer for Jordan Keliinui, who had a 30-yard run on Mashpee's second possession of the day that resulted in a 68-yard touchdown drive that covered 11 plays

Secatore All-League

Star runner first finisher for Cohasset/Hull

The Cohasset/Hull High boys and girls cross country teams competed in the all-league meet of the South Shore League Tuesday afternoon at the Strawberry Hill Country Club course in Abington.

Cohasset High senior and captain Christina Sectatore earned all conference honors with her 15th place finish in the girls' race.

Christina covered the 2.89 mile course in a fast time of 18:45 to earn both a place on the league all star team and a meet ribbon. "Chrissy ran a great race," said CHS/HHS head coach Ted Coyle. "She had been shooting to make the all league team, but had to beat some of the girls who had finished ahead of her during the dual meet season in order to do so. So this was quite an accomplishment and I'm very proud of the effort she turned in."

Fellow captain Corin Postell was the next Lady Skipper/Lady Pirate across the line in a clocking of 20:31. She was followed by teammates Stephanie Brierly in 20:42, Olivia Franklin in 21:22, and Ellie Tedeschi in 21:42. As a team, the CHS/HHS girls' contingent finished in fifth place at the meet.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week Eight: Cohasset boys still on bubble

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The eighth week of high school soccer capped the final week of the regular season for most teams. There was a shake up on the boys' side after Hingham's impressive run last week. The Harbormen went 2-0-1 and jumped two spots to take over the top spot. For the girls, Marshfield cannot be stopped and deservedly held on to its No. 1 ranking. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 30.

Boys

1. Hingham – The Harbormen leapfrog last week's No. 1 Weymouth and No. 2 Silver Lake to take the top spot. This comes after a 6-1 pounding of Silver Lake, followed by a 5-0 win over Sharon, and a 2-2 draw against B.C. High. A well-deserved No. 1 ranking for the Patriot League Keenan champs.

2. Weymouth – The Wildcats suffered a bit of an upset, falling 1-0 to fourth-place Brookline. They did manage to sneak past Braintree, but only by a 1-0 score. The Wildcats finished in second place in the Bay State Carey division.

3. Duxbury – The Dragons kept pace with Hingham in the Keenan division this season, right up until the end, but Hingham finished a couple points ahead to take the crown. Last week, Duxbury beat Whitman-Hanson, 2-0, and tied Franklin, 0-0, which finished second in the Hockomock League.

4. Silver Lake – A bit of a rough patch for the Lakers last week. They did end the week with a 3-1 win over Canton, but suffered a punishing blow from Hingham, falling 6-1.

5. Hanover – The Indians kept up their torrid streak, beating Pembroke, 1-0, and Wareham, 5-1. The Patriot League Fisher champions haven't lost since Sept. 24 at Hingham, putting together a string of nine wins and a tie in their last 10 matches.

6. Scituate – One spot back of Hanover in both the Patriot League Fisher and Inside the 6, Scituate made a statement to end last week. The Sailors shutdown Norwell, 3-0. It was only the second time the South Shore League champions Norwell were held scoreless. Scituate also beat Middleboro last week, 1-0.

On the bubble: Cohasset, Norwell, Marshfield, Plymouth North

Week Seven Rankings: 1. Weymouth, 2. Silver Lake, 3. Hingham, 4. Duxbury, 5. Hanover, 6. Norwell

Girls

1. Marshfield – Not too much changed for the Lady Rams, not their No. 1 ranking, and certainly not their unbeaten streak. Marshfield got a goal 10 minutes into the second half of its game against Whitman-Hanson Sunday to come out with a 1-1 tie. The Atlantic Coast League champs wrapped up their division title last week with 3-1 wins over Falmouth and Nauset, both on the road.

2. Weymouth – The story remains more or less the same for the Lady Wildcats – they simply cannot lose, and this week move up two spots in the rankings. The Bay State Carey champions polished off Brookline last week, 4-1, and will be the team to beat in the Division 1 South Sectionals.

3. Plymouth North – The Lady Eagles had another successful week despite a 1-0 loss to Brockton. Then again, Brockton's only lost once this season. North ended Sacred Heart's six-game winning streak with a 4-1 victory and topped Sandwich, 2-1.

4. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons had a bit of a surprise last week, drawing 0-0 with Scituate. It marked the first time all year that Duxbury was held scoreless. The Lady Dragons started the week with a 3-1 loss to Patriot League Keenan champs Whitman-Hanson and then beat Pembroke, 4-0.

5. Scituate – A 0-0 tie is a victory when it comes against Duxbury. The Lady Sailors, second place in the Patriot League Fisher division, became the only team this season to keep Duxbury off the board.

6. Hingham – The Harborwomen extended their unbeaten streak to three after a 2-1 win at Silver Lake and a 1-1 tie against Plymouth South.

On the bubble: Norwell, Carver, Hanover

Week Seven Rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Plymouth North, 3. Duxbury, 4. Weymouth, 5. Scituate, 6. Hingham

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

(Record; Last Week's Ranking):

5 To Watch

Mike McConville, Hingham: After what could have been considered a slow start by his standards, McConville has been heating up as of late. A Patriot League individual championship now rests atop his trophy case, thanks to a 15:54 run and a furious kick over Whitman-Hanson's Pat Ryan. McConville's jaunt led Hingham to a 3rd place finish, but W-H ruled the day, taking home the crown from a depleted Pembroke team.

Pat Cunningham, Pembroke: Perhaps in an unexpected maneuver, Coach Greg Zopatti sat his top 4 Titans from the Patriot League meet, but that did not deter Cunningham, normally the team's 5th runner, form leading a spirited 2nd place finish for the boys team, behind only Whitman-Hanson. Cunningham struggled two weeks ago at Brown, but came back with a vengeance to run 16:34, the best time a 5th man has run this year in Massachusetts.

Dennis Muldoon, Catholic Memorial and Ian O'Leary, BC High: I normally don't include these schools in the Poll, but when a couple of Weymouth guys take the top two spots at the prestigious Catholic Conference Meet, well, the Poll takes notice. Muldoon, a senior, was able to outmaneuver the Franklin Park field to the tune of a 16:34 victory, but O'Leary was just 8 seconds behind. Neither ace was able to stop the eventual team winner, Xaverian Brothers, from packing 5 into the top 12 and taking the team glory though.

Chelesa Savage, Pembroke: Smashing the field by 30 seconds is never an easy thing to do at a League meet. Doing it with the entire Whitman-Hanson girls team behind you, now that is a feat. Savage was dominant, taking control of the girls race at 2 miles and never looking back, en route to a personal best 18:41 time at the Patriot League Meet on Friday in Middleboro. Savage looks poised to challenge Jordan O'Dea (Dennis-Yarmouth) and others for the DII All State individual race in three weeks.

Julie Tevenan, Weymouth: The senior captain had never broken 20:00 for 5000 meters until Saturday, and she smashed though that barrier with a 3rd place finish at the Bay State Conference Meet in 19:46. Expect Tevenan to help lead a four-headed monster in November along with the usual suspects, Molly Barker and Bridget Jaklitsch, and freshman Ashley Betts, who took the silver in that same race in 19:42.

Meet to Watch

MSTCA Coaches Invitational, Saturday, Nov. 5, Wrentham Developmental Center: While one never knows who will race and who will rest at Wrentham in November, you can usually expect to see some great local talent on display. While teams like Pembroke, Whitman-Hanson, Weymouth, and Marshfield might sit their big guns to rest for EMass, the Poll would expect to see locals Sarah Saccoach (Archbishop Williams), Nicole Borofski (Plymouth North), and the Norwell boys and girls to make an appearance and challenge for the individual awards in their divisions.

The weekly poll and report is compiled by Mike Miller, head coach of the reigning Div. 1 champion Weymouth High School girls' varsity.

and gave Mashpee an 8-0 lead with the two-point conversion run.

Cohasset 3-4, 2-2 South Shore League) countered with a drive into Mashpee territory on their next possession, but turned it over when a fake punt pass went incomplete.

Mashpee capitalized with another long drive that covered nine plays and 60 yards before Orcutt fought his way into the end zone on a one-yard run that gave Mashpee a 14-0 advantage with 2:50 left in the first half.

Cohasset worked for an answer, and drove from their own 45 to the Mashpee 10 before that drive stalled when quarterback Jamie Faber's pass to the back of the end zone was caught just out of bounds in the back.

Despite the score, Afanasiw found positives, and was honest about what happened on the field.

"It was a hard fought game," he said. "The kids didn't execute and when you don't execute it's hard to win games against good teams. They (Mashpee) played a very good game. They're big, fast and strong."

That said, Afanasiw liked the way his team worked.

"The kids kept fighting the whole night," he said. "They wanted to keep fighting to the end. It was a tough loss, but the kids fought hard. I'm proud of them."

Afanasiw said the game was already in the past.

"We'll come back next week," he said.

Cohasset will travel to Norwell to face the Clippers tonight at 7 p.m.

Norwell is 2-6, with their wins against Archbishop Williams (21-20) and Carver (27-7).

Against similar opponents, Norwell lost 31-8 and 41-0 to East Bridgewater.

Cohasset lost 27-7 to Mashpee and 36-12 at East Bridgewater.

Cohasset beat Carver 49-6.

LIFE AT CHS

November promises to be a great month!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Happy November everybody! November is an exciting month for many reasons: the Veteran's Day long weekend, Powderpuff, Thanksgiving, Thanksgiving Break, Black Friday, and the fact that the holiday season is rapidly approaching. Strangely enough, winter weather is already here...even though most of the leaves haven't fallen yet...

There have been a lot of tests and assignments lately as teachers scramble to add more grades before the term ends next week. Stressful! We're already halfway through first semester – where does the time go?

Peer Leaders went into the middle school today for their second workshop. Some played a game of "Would You Rather?" and "Here I Stand," while others made pipe cleaner representations of their unique personalities. Either way, Peer Leaders is definitely off to a great start this year!

High school students, do you ever need to finish your homework before school? Or do your parents drop you off at school super early, and you don't know what to do for a half hour? Well, did you know that there are early morning library hours on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7 am? Stop by to do some research, meet up with friends to do some last-minute studying, curl up in a comfy chair and read, or try out one of the library's new Kindles!

From now until March 29, 2012, the Cohasset Middle-High School has the opportunity to earn cash through the Stop & Shop A+ School Rewards Program. Register online at www.stopandshore.com/aplus using the ID #07154, and earn cash for the school every time you use your Stop & Shop Card! Even if you registered last year, you need to reregister this year. This is a simple, quick way to earn cash for our schools, so sign up today!

The regular sports seasons are wrapping up. Cross country's league meet on Tuesday in Abington was success, despite the cold weather, and muddy course (which resulted in dirt-covered backs and legs and forced a certain "young-at-heart" girl to finish the race shoeless after her sneaker got stuck in the muck). Shout out to Chrissy Secatore for placing 15th in the girls' varsity race! The girls' soccer team finished up their season with games versus Scituate and EB. The boys' soccer team and field hockey team are both gearing up for the playoffs – good luck! The football team is playing tonight in Norwell at 7 pm, so come to cheer them on.

Remember to keep coming to the Homework Help Center on Tuesdays from 5:30 to 7 pm at the library for tutoring by skilled NHS high school seniors, free pizza, and fun with friends. And don't forget that Make a Difference Day is this weekend, so if you have not signed up yet do so immediately! Until next week!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

SCHOOL NEWS

Middle school in anti-smoking program

Cohasset Middle School is again participating in the annual anti-smoking program of the Norfolk South District Medical Society, "Smoking Don't Go There," an effort that brings physicians and adolescents together to talk about the dangers of tobacco and smoking. This is the 13th year of this public service program, to be held in conjunction with the National Great American Smoke-Out on Thursday, Nov. 17. Physicians of the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Norfolk South District Medical Society are volunteering their time to reach out to adolescents in the South Shore communities.

The entire sixth-grade class at Cohasset Middle School will participate in the "Smoking Don't Go There" program at 8:20 a.m., on Thursday, Nov. 17.

Dr. John Walsh, president of the Norfolk South District Medical Society and an emergency room physician at South Shore Hospital, is directing the program. Walsh has been enlisting volunteer physicians who will visit elementary, middle and high schools in the South Shore to discuss the perils of tobacco use.

"The link between tobacco and disease – cancer, heart disease, respiratory illness and a host of other illnesses – is clear and well known, as is the danger of second-hand smoke and chewing tobacco," Walsh said. "If you don't smoke, don't start. If you do, stop. Avoiding tobacco is one of the best things you can do to avoid disease and stay healthy."

Other South Shore schools participating are the Abigail Adams Intermediate School in Weymouth, Weymouth High School and Broad Meadow School and Sterling Middle School, the last two in Quincy.

Medical Society officials say such prevention programs have become increasingly important as the state has cut back on tobacco control and education programs. Physicians cite statistics released by the national Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids that called attention to the declining funding levels for anti-tobacco efforts across the nation and here in Massachusetts, despite the 1998 settlement of $246 billion with tobacco companies.

Tobacco use primarily begins in early adolescence. Each day about 3,500 kids in the United States try their first cigarette and each day 1,000 other kids younger than 18 become new regular daily smokers. Ninety percent of all adult smokers begin while in their teens, or earlier, and two thirds become regular daily smokers by the time they are 19.

In addition, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, youngsters who smoke are three times more likely than nonsmokers to use alcohol, eight times more likely to use marijuana and 22 times more likely to use cocaine. Smoking is also associated with numerous other his risk behaviors, including fighting, engaging in unprotected sex and carrying weapons.

"Smoking – Don't Go There" is a program based on an effort developed by the American College of Chest Physicians Task Force on Women, Tobacco, and Lung Cancer. The presentation is approximately 40 minutes long and includes a question and answer session.

Will the State restore our river?

SAMANTHA WOODS

In 2005 the Weir River Watershed Association successfully petitioned the state to list the Weir River as a "Highly Stressed Basin" due to the over allocation of water resources in this river system.

Find out at the Weir River Watershed Association's Annual Meeting on Thursday Nov. 10 at the Weir River Estuary Center (333 George Washington Blvd., Hull) at 7 p.m.

Special guest speaker will be Julia Blatt of the Massachusetts Rivers Alliance.

. Blatt will speak on the state's ongoing efforts to balance water withdrawals for human use with keeping rivers flowing. The state, river advocates and water suppliers have been negotiating for over a year to come to agreement on how to balance the needs of water for people and wildlife. The state intends to issue a water management policy in the coming weeks. Blatt has been at the forefront of these negotiations speaking on behalf of rivers and those who care about them.

Because we are relatively water rich when compared to other parts of our country it is hard to believe that in some places we have a water shortage. However, in 2005 the Weir River Watershed Association successfully petitioned the state to list the Weir River as a "Highly Stressed Basin" due to the over allocation of water resources in this river system. Stream flow data taken by watershed association volunteers and from state scientists show that parts of the Weir River system are impacted by withdrawing more water than it can sustain. Particularly during the summertime, when demand can rise by 1.5 to 2 times over wintertime demand, there is evidence of these impacts through lower than predicted normal flows and even no flow. This "Highly Stressed Basin" classification has made it very difficult to authorize further withdrawals from the basin but it has not required restoration of those lost flows.

For reference a total of 4.12 million gallons of water per day on average are withdrawn from the Weir River basin serving 38,000 people with drinking water. There are two water supplies that use the Weir River Basin – the largest withdrawal of water (about 85 percent) is Aquarion Water Company who supplies water to the towns of Hingham and Hull and part of Cohasset. The remaining 15 percent of the withdrawals supplies a portion of the town of Norwell and golf courses in Hingham.

In 2006 the USGS installed an automatic stream flow gage near the Leavitt Street Bridge in order to monitor daily stream flows on the Weir River. Unfortunately this stream gage fell to the state's budget ax in 2009. Currently stream flow is not being measured in the Weir River to determine how it is faring.

Our river is not alone in this issue – many eastern Massachusetts rivers are degraded in part due to water withdrawal impacts including the Jones River in Kingston, the First Herring Brook in Scituate, the Neponset River to name a few...but it is also not the only or in some cases the largest issue facing our rivers. Dams, undersized culverts ands stormwater pollution from paved surfaces all are contributing to their degradation from the perspective of the river species that rely upon on them.

However the question of how much water to pump from our rivers — and how much to leave for the fish — has never been more urgent than it is today. The decisions that will be made on this issue will govern water use in our state for at least the next 20 years. Please join us for what is sure to be an education on this issue for all on Thursday Nov. 10 at 7 pm at the Weir River Estuary Center 333 George Washington Bouleveard.

This event is free and open to the public. To find out more visit our website at www.weirriver.org

Samantha Woods is a board member of the Weir River Watershed Association.

You can help the Cohasset Food Pantry

Do you have a garden? Fresh vegetables may be left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m.

Other needs include coffee, juice, clam chowder, corned beef hash, mayonnaise, jelly/jam, canned fruit , spaghetti sauce, applesauce, maple syrup, cereal, dish and laundry detergent, toothpaste/toothbrushes and bar soap.

Donations can be dropped off at the rear entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays, at Stop & Shop or at local churches on Sundays. Donations may also be left at the St. Anthony Parish Center, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3.m.

To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present Wendy Wasserstein's award-winning comedy "The Sisters Rosensweig" from Nov. 4 through 13 at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater. Featuring a cast of CDC veterans and newcomers alike, "Sisters" offers "a look at three women and their quest for love, self-definition and fulfillment."

The 1993 Broadway production was nominated for a Tony Award in the Best Play category and Madeline Kahn won the Best Actress Tony for her role as Gorgeous Teitelbaum, one of the three sisters of the title. The ensemble production features the dialogue Wendy Wasserstein was known for in such plays as her Pulitzer Prize winner, "The Heidi Chronicles."

"The Sisters Rosensweig" is directed by Bill Gardiner of Weymouth and features an ensemble cast that includes Woody Farrick of Dorchester, Andrew Lemieux of Scituate, Jonathan Markella of Duxbury, Paul McCuen of Plymouth, Molly McLellan of Rockland, Lisa Pratt of Cohasset, Sarah Rocca of Weymouth and Maura Buckley Troiano of Marshfield. Production stage manager is Mark Bono of Milton.

Performances will take place Nov. 4, 5, 11 and 12 at 7:30 p.m., and Sundays, Nov. 6 and 13, at 2 p.m., at Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Ave. Tickets are $16 general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups and can be purchased at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books, or via a reservation by calling 617-697-2115. Cohasset Dramatic Club offers a special "Sisters Save $5" discount to patrons attending either of the Friday performances. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior at the box office. "The Sisters Rosensweig" is suggested for audience members 13 and older.

For more information go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

"Who wants new windows in November?"

With the holidays and cold weather approaching, we know that's exactly what you're thinking. So, to bribe you—or let's say persuade you —we're offering a 30 Day Deal. For the first time ever, save $250 on every window and $750 on every Andersen patio door[1]. Match that savings with a monthly payment as low as $104, and suddenly replacement windows are well within your budget this year!

For a strong window that will last, look to the company that has lasted.

Renewal by Andersen is the exclusive start-to-finish replacement window subsidiary of Andersen Windows—a company with a 108 year reputation for quality. Our replacement windows are held to Andersen's same high standard, while some other less reliable windows have been reported to leak and fail after just a few years.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 14, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some changes might seem confusing at first, especially to an Aries whose impatience levels are pretty shaky this week. Take it one step at a time, Lamb, and soon all will be made clear.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That difficult situation you've been dealing with continues to call for careful handling. Avoid quickly made choices that might not stand up when they're finally put to the test.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You still have lots of evaluating to do before you can consider making a commitment. It's better to move cautiously than to risk stumbling into a major misunderstanding.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A previously peevish partner offers to be more helpful with your problems. But remember: The final choice is yours. Be guided by what you feel is the right thing to do.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As the Big Cat, you can sometimes be pretty rough on those you suspect of betrayal. The best advice is to pull in those claws and listen to the explanation. It might surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your inner voice usually guides you well. But a note of caution: This is a period of mixed signals for you, so be careful you don't misunderstand the messages you're getting.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Cupid's call beckons both single Librans looking for a new love, as well as couples hoping to strengthen their relationships. A workplace problem is quickly resolved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's been a hectic time for you, and you might want to take a break to restore both body and soul. You'll then be set to face new challenges later this month.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's a good idea to take a more conservative approach to your financial situation right now. Some plans made earlier this year might need readjusting.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a fine time to move boldly into those new opportunities I promised would open up for you. Check them over, and then choose the best one for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Congratulations. Your self-assurance is growing stronger, and you should now feel more confident about making that long-deferred decision about a possible commitment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're very close to reaching your goal. But be wary of distractions that can lure you off-course and leave you stranded far away from where you really want to be.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an inner sight that helps you see into people's hearts. You would be an excellent psychologist or social worker.

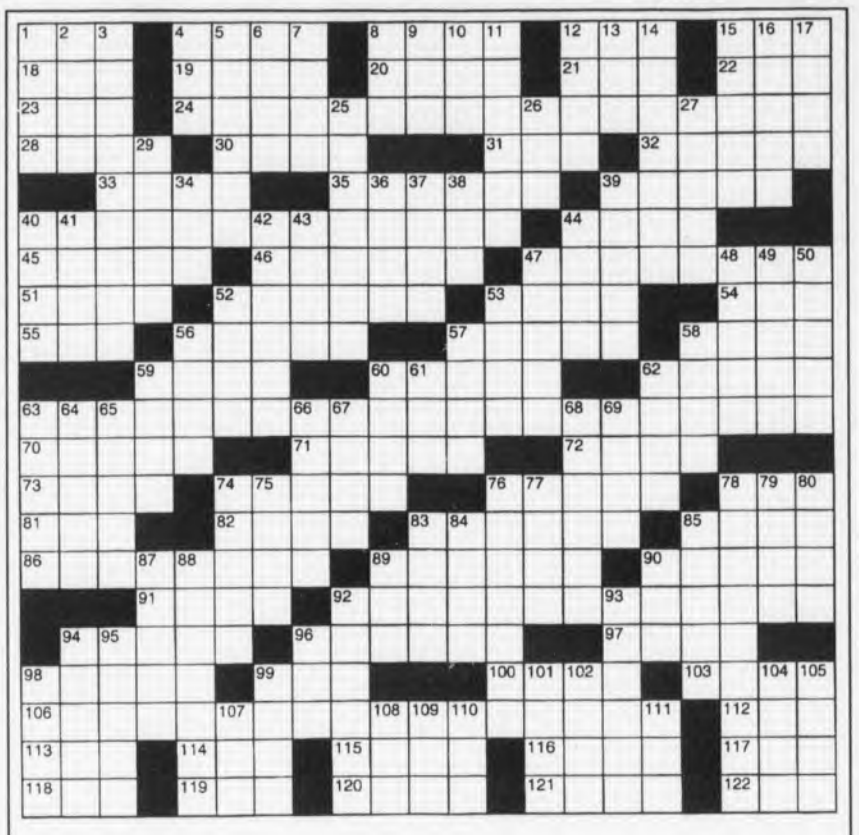
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

Hebrew School announces signups

Registration is now open at Hingham Quincy Chabad for a season of Torah studies in Hingham. At Chabad, the richness of the tradition and the wisdom it offers can be exciting. The Torah Studies program, developed by the Jewish Learning Institute, brings the tradition of classical Jewish learning in a series of weekly classes. Lessons probe the depths of contemporary Torah thought, with a special focus on issues surrounding spirituality, the human psyche, love and relationships. Every experience offers lessons – from the most timeless of texts. Students will walk away surprised, inspired, and knowing more about who they are as Jews and as individuals.

People are invited to join others for a weekly dose of Jewish study. The class is free and each class is stand alone, so if one is missed students can jump right back on board the next week. Fresh pastries and a coffee bar accompanies each class.

Torah Studies welcomes all, regardless of religious background or level of observance. For more information, call Rabbi Shmuel Bronstein at 617 850 5935 or email Rabbi@HQChabad.com.

John F. Howe

John F. Howe

NEW LONDON, NH – John Farwell Howe, of New London, New Hampshire, formerly of Cohasset, passed away comfortably at New London Hospital on Oct. 24, 2011, four days after suffering a stroke at his home.

Known as "Jeff" to his family and friends, he was born Nov. 27, 1922, in Brookline, Massachusetts, the son of John Farwell Howe and Jessie Lawrence Cordingly Howe.

In 1949, he married Hester Hyde Pychon of Damariscotta, Maine. Their three children John F. Howe III of East Sandwich, Massachusetts, Peter S. Howe of Framingham, and Mary Howe of Wilmot New Hampshire, survive him. In 1966, Jeff married Katharine Binnian Whittemore and happily expanded his family to include her three boys: Anthony D. Whittemore, James M. Whittemore and Peter G. Whittemore. Jeff and "Kiffy" were married for forty-five years, until her death on Sept. 8 of this year. It was less than a week following her burial that Jeff suffered his stroke.

He was educated at Belmont Hill School, Exeter Academy and Stanford University. During World War II, he served as a radio operator in the Army Air Corps delivering combat troops of the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions, including in support of the Normandy invasion in June 1944. In the summer of his 89th year, he still looked sharp in his old uniform. After the war, he finished his degree at Stanford and went to work for the S. D. Warren paper company where he spent his entire career. Jeff grew with the company serving as vice-president and as director of the sales training program for many years.

In 1962, Jeff was elected to the Board of Trustees of the Forsyth Institute (then known as the Forsyth Dental Infirmary for Children). In 1974, he was elected to serve as president of the Trustees. In 1998, he stepped down from active service and was appointed an Honorary Trustee for life.

Jeff traveled widely and was physically active all his life, rowing, running, dancing and practicing Tai Chi. He played tennis at least twice weekly, including on Oct. 20, when he returned from his match and pronounced it the best tennis he had played in months. He embraced holistic medicine, homeopathy and Reiki.

A warm and loving husband, parent, grandparent and friend, he is survived by two sisters, Rosemary McCracken of North Borough, and Joan McIntosh of Bethal Conn, by two step siblings, Naomi Warren Doan and Donald Warren Jr., by his three children and three stepchildren, and by eighteen grandchildren including Heidi Howe Ragone, David A. and Jonathan D. Rose, Timothy H. Howe, Leah A. and Samuel A. Howe, Alexander B. and Hannah D. Eaton, Andrew J., Daniel L. and Hester E. Merzi, Anthony R. and Joshua S. Whittemore, Sarah B. Mendes, Timothy J. and Samuel E. Whittemore, Lincoln B. and Caitlin A. Erhard.

A memorial service will be held at Pike Brook Rd. in New London, NH on Lake Sunapee on Nov. 11 at 11 with a reception to follow at the New London Inn.

In lieu of flowers, and in keeping with Jeff's belief in "paying it forward," the family suggests donations in his name to any organization or cause dedicated to making a positive difference in this world.

Your written stories would be welcomed. Please send them to PO Box 147, Wilmot, NH 03287.

Harold W. Litchfield

COHASSET – Harold W. Litchfield, age 76, of Cohasset, passed away with family by his side on Oct. 28, 2011.

Harold was the loving husband of the late Patricia "Cissy" (Ford) Litchfield and the devoted father of Margaret "Peggy" Litchfield and Julie A. Borland and her husband Stephen, both of Cohasset. Devoted grandfather of Harold J "Jaime" Litchfield and Patricia "Tricia" Litchfield. Brother of Allen G. Litchfield of Cohasset, Edith Patch of Rhode Island, predeceased by sisters Marjorie E. Litchfield and Helen M. Litchfield, and his parents Harold W. and Margaret E (Gildea) Litchfield. Also survived by many nieces and nephews, countless close friends and his "furry" Grandchildren as well as his wonderful caregivers from Claddagh Homecare, Siobhan Lynch, Derrick Keane, Kelly Beale Swanson, Meredith Shaw, Virginia Mulkern, Dolores Lobo, Susan Kernan, Imelda Reid, Joni Bassett, and Michael Courtney.

Harold was an employee of the Town of Cohasset for 42 years, starting as a laborer in 1960 and working his way up the ladder to his election as Highway Surveyor in 1978. Harold was appointed Head of the Department of Public Works in 1995, a position he held until his retirement in 2002. At his retirement, the DPW facility was named in his honor. Harold was the founder and owner of H. W. Litchfield Contracting Co., later known as Harold and Jaime Litchfield Contractors when his grandson, Jaime, joined the business which was founded in 1960.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated on Wednesday, Nov. 2, 2011 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours were on Tuesday, Nov. 1 from 2 - 4 p.m. and 6 - 8 p.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. Interment Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, please make donations to the Lewy Body Dementia Association, 912 Killian Hill Rd. SW, Lilburn, GA 30047 or Norwell Visiting Nurse and Hospice, 91 Longwater Cir., Norwell MA 02061.

100 YEARS OF CHEVROLET

The Heartbeat of America

Chevrolet and the USA have been inextricably linked for 100 years

BY GREG ZYLA
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Few automobile nameplates have impacted our society like the "bowtie" of the Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors. With November the month of the brand's 100th anniversary, it is fitting to take a look back at how Chevrolet came to be and, more importantly, how it became synonymous with American culture thanks to the comradeship of two special individuals.

Louis Chevrolet, born in Switzerland in 1878, was the automotive engineer who would evolve into the nucleus of the Chevrolet brand. Like many noted engineers of the day, Chevrolet found his way to America, where the automobile was the "new" mode of transportation.

William "Billy" Durant, born in 1861 and the marketing genius who founded General Motors in 1908, met up with Chevrolet along the way, and the two quickly became friends.

Chevrolet was a well-known auto racing daredevil who had driven to a land speed record of 111 mph in 1905. Durant, thus, chose Chevrolet to drive his special racing Buicks in auto races, and the Chevy marquee began its "prenatal development." (For you historians, the very first GM vehicle was a horseless carriage Buick in 1908.)

Durant encouraged and financed Chevrolet's high-speed driving as a catalyst to introduce the Chevy brand. The very first Chevy hit the streets in 1911 as a prototype called the Series C Classic Six. It was more costly and three years later than Ford's Model T. Still, the car's reputation grew as Chevrolet drove the 300 cubic-inch 6-cylinder to speeds up to 70 mph in "street trim."

Noteworthy is this initial 300-inch engine, which would continue as the largest Chevy engine ever built until the 348-inch V-8 appeared in 1958.

Durant, however, realized that a lower-priced Chevy would assure its long-term success. In addition to performance cars, he then initiated a "low cost" Chevy 4-cylinder to better compete against Mr. Ford and his 4-cylinder Model T. The marketing plan worked, and the Chevy bowtie badge, introduced in 1913, appeared on thousands of happy Chevy owners' cars.

Chevrolet's iconic bowtie logo, as it appeared in 1940s and early 1950s (top to bottom), the 1957-59 edition, the 2000-01 version and today celebrating Chevrolet's 100 years.

Additionally, the Chevy bowtie history is worthy of note. It is said that Durant saw the logo on some wallpaper in a Paris hotel and liked it. Others point to a newspaper ad Durant saw in the Atlanta Constitution in 1913 promoting a coal company that used a bowtie badge. Regardless of which story is true, the Chevy bowtie remains an iconic symbol that spans two centuries.

Part of our culture

It is not by coincidence that Chevrolet's evolution includes family passenger, truck and performance vehicles. A look back at Chevy's history in motor racing finds the bowtie still at the head of the pack, be it in sanctioned bodies like NASCAR, NHRA, IHRA, ALMS or USAC, or at the hundreds of independent small ovals and drag strips. If you run a bracket drag car or late model stock car these days and your engine is not a Chevrolet, you are in the minority.

Notable is Chevy's introduction of its Zora Arkus-Duntov-developed 265 cubic-inch V-8 in 1955, which is the same basic engine design still used by millions of racers and daily drivers.

Chevy's quality and affordability also received excellent marketing through the years. Baby boomers will surely recall early television's "The Dinah Shore Show" and her "See the USA in your Chevrolet," The Beach Boys' hit single "She's Real Fine My 409," "Like a Rock" lingo truck ads, "Mr. Goodwrench" service promos and the still popular "Baseball, Hot Dogs, Apple Pie and Chevrolet" jargon. Add countless racing stars like Dale Earnhardt, Bill Jenkins and "Smokey" Yunick, who delivered the "win on Sunday sell on Monday" marketing theories, and the message of performance and value was instilled on millions of Chevy owners.

Thus, be it a sports car like Chevy's Corvette or a family hauler in full-size Suburban dress, Chevrolet has been at the head of the pack for 100 years offering quality, value and driving adventure to its countless customers.

A sad epilogue

As an epilogue, it is sad that Durant and Chevrolet both died broke. Durant, who left GM in 1920 to become a Wall Street investor, died in 1947 after losing his fortune in the Great Depression of 1929. Chevrolet similarly lost his fortune to the Great Depression, ending up working at Chevrolet's engineering plant until his death in 1941.

Still, this cooperative between the founders is regarded as one of the most significant associations in motoring history and a true success story for General Motors.

Congrats to Chevrolet on 100 memorable years.

Billing discussion gets heated

Expect more sparks at next meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After two weeks of being last on a long list of agenda items, a water billing discussion finally made its way to the floor during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting (the discussion was postponed last week because selectman Leland Jenkins was unable to attend the Nov. 1 meeting).

Steve Gaumer and Jack Keniley of the Capital Budget Committee, along with Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore and Michael Milanoski of the newly-charged governance committee all stayed in the audience for the water discussion between Water Commissioners Peter DeCaprio and Leonora "Lee" Jenkins with the selectmen and Town Manager Michael Coughlin, which began after other agenda items wrapped up around 10:15 p.m.

The relatively routine topic, which Keniley called a matter of "simple accounting" and DeCaprio insisted was "not rocket science," quickly spiraled into a heated debate between the Water Commission chairman and Town Manager. Accusations flew, and as the time neared midnight, few of the major issues seemed to be resolved. Once again, the discussion will find its way onto the next Selectmen agenda.

As voices were raised and fingers pointed, it became clear that getting to the crux of the issue would require

Senior Center articles deferred

By Erin Dale

Social Service League President Marita Carpenter appeared before the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday to recommend the board defer consideration of Articles 10, 11, 12 and 13, all dealing with the new Senior Center building project, from the Special Town Meeting warrant.

The Social Service League, along with Cohasset Elder Affairs, together formed a Senior Center Planning Group to push the project along. The committee was hoping to have articles discussed during Special Town Meeting.

However, after listening to concerns voiced by the Selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget committees, the Senior Center planners decided to give the project more time to develop.

The Selectmen and Capital Budget had been especially reluctant to approve an article asking for a funds transfer from a public town account holding donations for the project to the Social Service League's private account. Meanwhile, the Ad-

Fundraisers, activities, programs offered

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The American Legion began its long and proud tradition of serving the nation's veterans back in 1919 after a charter by Congress. A decade and a half later, Cohasset established a chapter of its own.

The Cohasset American Legion, the George H. Mealy Post 118, provides services to local veterans and their families through fundraisers, food drives and scholarship programs. Post 118, chartered in 1935, was named for Army Sergeant George Mealy, a Cohasset resident who gave his life during World War I.

Members of the Cohasset post refer to it as a family affair, and they aren't kidding — Steve Wigmore serves as commander, and has done so for over 20 years. His son, Tom Wigmore, oversees the Sons of the American Legion, while Tom's wife Deirdre presides over the women's Auxiliary.

The Wigmores are committed to keeping the patriotic tradition alive and well in Cohasset, and are

WHAT IS THE PCLB?

Police Community Liaison Board

WHAT
The Police Community Liaison Board (PCLB) was formed in August 2010, by Police Chief Mark DeLuca, in an effort to involve our residents in identifying public safety priorities within our community as well as solutions.

MISSION STATEMENT

- The mission of the PCLB is to form, maintain and continuously improve communication between the Cohasset Police Department and the community to enhance trust and cooperation with an overall goal of superior police service to the residents of Cohasset.
- The group meets once a month at police headquarters with the overall goal of being an assessment of police service. Simply put, how can we do it better?
- There are five community members on the board, along with three police officers, and a representative from elder affairs. The group is looking to add a person to represent Cohasset students/teens in the coming months.
- Residents or merchants that have a question or would like to know about any aspects of Cohasset Police operations are encouraged to contact any of the members of the PCLB via email.

MEMBERS:
- Melissa Browne, Chairperson (mbrowne@cohassetpolice.com)
- Merle Brown (merleb@cohassetpolice.com)

BRIEFLY

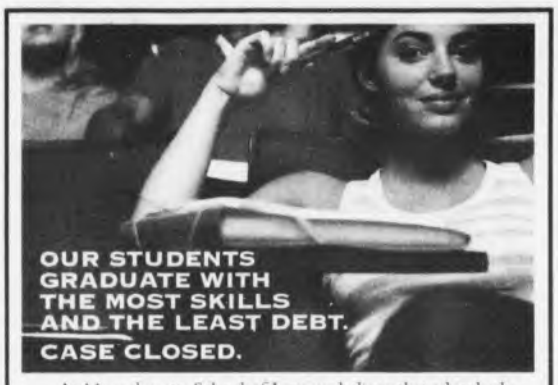
Flu clinic set for Nov. 15

A town-wide flu clinic for all Cohasset residents, presented by the Board of Health, will take place from 5 to 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Nov. 15, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road.

This flu clinic is open to all citizens of Cohasset older than 9 years. People are reminded to wear a short-sleeve shirt and bring health insurance cards.

For more information, call registered nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's



The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Clothing collection

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation has placed a clothing donation drop-off box in the Aubuchon Hardware parking lot at 823 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

Fundraising projects like the clothing collection program are crucial in helping Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies match more children with adult mentors. For more information, visit the website at www.bbbs-foundation.org or call 800-483-5503.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Agreement reached on 2012 date

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The board voted to approve the date Burnett originally proposed, Sunday, June 24th, 2012 with Burnett voicing his hope that the following year, the triathlon will move to a Saturday.

Cohasset Triathlon organizer Bill Burnett, along with Robin Lawrence, President of the Sandy Beach Association, came before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday to decide on a date for the 2012 triathlon.

Burnett has been working with local clergy to move the event, traditionally held on a Sunday in June, to a Saturday so as not to conflict with morning services.

Burnett proposed June 30th, 2012 as a possible date, but the Sandy Beach Association said it was too close to the July 4th holiday.

The Association is hoping to negotiate with Burnett to change the event date to either the second weekend of June or second weekend of September, so that the triathlon will be held outside of the beach's summer season.

The triathlon ties up the beach for Cohasset residents who are not competing in the event, Lawrence explained.

Burnett is reluctant to hold the event in early June, saying that the water is simply too cold. Since the event has always been held in late June, Burnett would like to keep it that way rather than pushing it until September.

Burnett pointed out how the event gives back to Cohasset, including making donations to the Sandy Beach Association. There seemed to be a consensus from the selectmen that the event is good for the town.

The board voted to approve the date Burnett originally proposed, Sunday, June 24th, 2012 with Burnett voicing his hope that the following year, the triathlon will move to a Saturday.

At the suggestion of Selectman Paul Carlson, the event will have an earlier start time of 7:30 a.m. to better accommodate downtown Sunday morning traffic. Carlson said he hoped most of the bikers would be out of downtown by 9 a.m.

Registration for the Cohasset Triathlon opens up online on December 1.

Dishwasher fire in Doane St. home

At 3:48 pm Sunday (Nov. 6) the Emergency Communications Center was notified by the alarm company of a smoke detector activation at 121 Doane St.

Upon arrival (3:56 pm – 8 minutes response time) the units found that the 2-1/2 story structure was fully charged with smoke that was caused by a fire in the kitchen area (flames were visible through the kitchen window).

The house was locked and no one was at home. Personnel made entry through the front door (forced entry through the locked door) and extinguished the fire that they discovered in the kitchen. The fire was discovered in the area of the dishwasher. What caused the dishwasher fire has yet to be determined.

The building was ventilated and the kitchen area was checked to ensure that the fire had not extended outside the area of origin. No extension was discovered.

With the home vacant at the time of the fire, the early notification provided by the smoke detectors and the monitored alarm system allowed for a rapid response and a quick knock down of the fire, Fire Chief Bob Silvia said. The fire damage was contained to the immediate vicinity of the area of origin. The entire home sustained smoke damage, though most of it was minor.

Scituate Fire provided mutual aid station coverage while the Cohasset Units were tied up. All units were clear at 5:09 pm.

Town Manager reaches milestone

Michael Coughlin reached a milestone on Tuesday, Nov. 8 — his 100th day as Cohasset's new Town Manager.

Coughlin presented comprehensive quarterly reports from each department to the Board of Selectmen. Of particular note was an update on the restructuring of the finance department. Coughlin reported, along with consultants Eric Kinsherf and Dan Sullivan acting as interim finance director and treasurer/collector, respectively, that the financial team fully expects to meet the Nov. 22 deadline to submit the town's balance sheet to the Department of Revenue and get free cash certified in time for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting.

Coughlin also shared that the permanent position for finance director has been posted in the Beacon. He expects a candidate will be chosen by Nov. 29 in order to start the position by January.

Gov. Committee charge is topic

The Selectmen voted to approve the charge, pending a few changes, for the newly formed Governance Committee, which will investigate town boards and committees and their actions. Selectmen chairman Ted Carr drafted the charge.

Currently, the committee has nine members consisting of the Town Manager Screening Committee. Committee member Michael Milanoski suggested the group be increased to 13 members. The charge includes adding up to four citizens at large.

Associate members and term limits were also discussed. Ultimately, the board decided to give the committee a sunset of December 31, 2012.

Carr plans to revise the charge and hold another discussion during next Monday's meeting.

POLICE BEAT

Alert store manager averts potential larceny

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The manager of Stop & Shop called police at around 4:10 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 6) about three people inside the store that he recognized as shoplifters, police said. Officers responded. One of the three was allegedly serving as a lookout in the U-Haul they had rented. Police believe that suspect may have sent a text message to the other two who abandoned their carriage with about $300 worth of merchandise including lobsters and expensive steaks, and exited the store.

Police reviewed the surveillance tape and interviewed the trio who did not have any money with them. Further investigation revealed the rented U-Haul was two days overdue. The 33-year-old Hingham woman, who rented the U-Haul and was in the U-Haul when police arrived, is being summonsed to court for using a motor vehicle without authority.

Shortly after this incident, the trio approached a home on Chief Justice Cushing Highway where they asked the resident to call a cab. The resident called police and the group was sent on its way.

MV B&E

A 25-year-old man from Woodland Drive reported at 11:29 a.m. on Saturday (Nov. 5) that his 2005 Chevrolet sedan had been broken into the night before. The passenger-side window was smashed. Missing were a $170 iPod Nano and a $100 GPS unit, police said. Police have canvassed the neighborhood but so far have no suspects.

OUI arrest

An off-duty officer observed a red Ford pickup truck on Route 3A riding on the rim of one of its tires that had blown out. The off-duty officer contacted the station and police pulled the truck over at about 11:43 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 6). The operator, a 33-year-old Scituate man, who was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication, was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol.

Accidents

• At 2:23 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 31), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) and Crocker Lane. Police said a 2004 Ford Taurus, operated by a 64-year-old East Bridgewater man, was signaling to turn right onto Crocker Lane toward the medical building, when a 2002 VW Jetta tried to pass him on the right. Both cars were headed north, police said. The cars collided and the 21-year-old East Bridgewater woman driving the Jetta was cited for passing on the right. There were no reported injuries and neither car had to be towed.

• At 11:25 a.m. on Friday (Nov. 4), a 67-year-old Brooklyn, N.Y. man, who walked into the police station reported that the driver's side door to his 2011 Lexus that had been parked near the Red Lion Inn was damaged overnight by another vehicle that apparently took off. The car did not have to be towed and there are no suspects at this time.

Yard waste

Police responded to a complaint at 7:07 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 31) from a Brewster Road resident about a neighbor putting yard waste in the middle of the road and wanted to speak to an officer. Police said there was not much debris and the neighbor agreed to blow the leaves in another direction toward his fence.

Eggs thrown

Police, who had put on extra patrols, said there was only one complaint on Halloween (Oct. 31) about a group of kids throwing eggs and toilet paper all over houses and the road. The complaint came from Black Rock Road, otherwise it was a quiet night.

eBay purchase

A 47-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last week that the $516, 2008 Felt Triathlon bicycle, he had purchase on eBay from a Hudson, N.Y. man on Sept. 1 had never arrived. The Cohasset man paid through PayPal, an online payment service. Police provided him with a report number so he could try to get reimbursed through PayPal..

Running in street

Police responded to a call that came in at 7:34 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 3) from Beechwood Street about two small children running down the street toward Route 3A. Police could not find any small kids but did find two teens, a boy and girl, who were small in stature and thought perhaps the caller thought they were young children.

Dog attacked

The owner of a Shih Tzu terrier reported to police last Friday that his dog had been attacked by another dog. The dog was off its leash and may have wandered in a yard with three Dobermans where there may have been a skirmish, police said. The Shih Tzu had to go to the Hingham Animal Clinic for sutures. There were no witnesses and the animal control officer is investigating the incident.

"Convenience" Foods Are Harming You

By Elizabeth Johnson
Have you ever stopped to flip over a packaged food item, look at the label, and then - realizing you don't know what the ingredients mean anyway - proceed to eat it?
STOP THE MADNESS!
Nutrition is a major factor in overall health, and we need to make it a priority. As busy Americans we have been trained that effective multi-tasking and "to-do list" completion are ultimate markers of success. Healthy eating should not be a task that gets bumped to the bottom of the list.
Clean, healthy foods-in other words, the ones not found in convenient, ready-to-go packages, provide so much more nourishment for the body. Would it take training and practice to eat this way? Definitely. Would there be a learning curve with small behavior changes over time? Absolutely. Would there be missteps and challenges to learn from? Of course.
Therefore, the only reasonable path out of the packaged-food pandemonium that is jamming your digestive tract and adding unnecessary sugars and cholesterol to your bloodstream is to get educated in the company of like-minded people. Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff trains you how to choose healthy, clean foods that support a strong, youthful body. Our program is rounded out with cardiovascular training, strength training and accountability to help you meet your goal. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com. Each franchise is independently owned & operated. Get In Shape For Women gives back to the community. For every pound you lose between November 14th and December 11th, we will donate $1 to the United States Marine Corps Toys for Tots. Drop off a toy donation at participating Get In Shape For Women studios.

Client Barbara Walsh believes Get In Shape for Women has transformed her entire life. "I am a busy, married, mother of two, working as an ER physician in a large inner city trauma center with a crazy schedule. Over time my eating habits became horrible because of convenience. I joined GISFW to lose weight and become healthier. It was the most amazing investment that I have made in myself. I have learned an entire new way of thinking about eating. I have found that it has helped me feel better, have more energy, and focus on my health on many important levels. The best thing about GISFW...it is an absolute BLAST! This is the single best commitment I have made for my mental and physical health. I have been a member for over 3 years and will continue to be for many more to come!"

REDISTRICTING

Congressional boundaries changing

Cohasset slated to be part of 8th District

By Steve Adams
GateHouse News Service

Democrats Stephen Lynch and William Keating won't have to battle each other for a seat in Congress next year. Keating says he will run in the newly created 9th Congressional District from his summer home in Bourne on Cape Cod.

A redrawn congressional district map released Monday will move Quincy, where Keating has rented a house since beginning his campaign for Congress last year, to the new 8th Congressional District.

The new 8th will include much of what is now the 9th District, the seat currently held by Lynch, and pick up Quincy, Weymouth, Abington, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Hull from what is now the 10th District.

If the Legislature and governor approve the redrawn districts, they will be in effect for the next election cycle in 2012 and Massachusetts will send nine people to the U.S. House in 2013, rather than the current 10.

In a statement issued Monday night, Keating said that he would run in the newly created 9th District, "where we have owned a home for 17 years."

The new 9th would include all of the Cape and much of the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts.

The new 8th District would jump across the Neponset River, adding communities down the coast to Scituate that were once part of the soon-to-be-defunct 10th District, the seat now held by Keating.

Keating told WCVB-TV that he did not see the new map until he saw it posted on Bostonchannel.com Monday. He said, "I never saw such secrecy around anything," comparing it to a CIA operation.

Keating is no stranger to changing his residence for political purposes. Until he jumped into the race for the 10th District, the former state legislator and Norfolk County District Attorney was a lifelong resident of Sharon, which is in the 4th Congressional District represented by Barney Frank. Keating set up residence in Quincy, the most populous community in the 10th District and the home of his predecessor, William Delahunt, to run last year.

Keating could face a tough battle in a general election for the new 9th District seat, said Paul Watanabe, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

The South Shore and the Cape contain fewer registered Democrats than most regions in the state and are considered potentially fertile territory for a strong Republican candidate.

Republican nominee Jeff Perry made a fairly good showing in many South Shore towns in 2010, despite allegations that he was involved in a cover-up of a strip search of a teenage girl by a fellow officer while he was a Wareham police officer in the early 1990s. He denied the allegations.

Perry's showing last year could encourage more GOP candidates to seek the new 9th District seat, Watanabe said. Perry, a former state representative from Sandwich, received 42 percent of the vote in the 2010 race.

"This new 9th District gives the Republicans a real shot," said Michael Kryzanek, a professor at Bridgewater State University. "Keating is only there for two years, and it's a rule of electoral politics you go after a person after that first (term)."

In a prepared statement Monday, Lynch said he was glad that nearly 80 percent of his district is unchanged under the plan.

"As for the newer areas, a big part of my family moved to Quincy and to Weymouth many years ago so I have a deep respect for those communities and it would be an honor for me to represent them," Lynch said.

Massachusetts' congressional delegation will shrink from 10 to nine as a result of the latest U.S. Census figures, in which Massachusetts trailed other states in population growth.

The new district lines were drawn up by a joint committee of state legislators.

Because of the consolidation, the remaining nine Congressional districts each needed to pick up, on average, roughly 70,000 people.

The 7th District, a seat currently held by U.S. Rep. Michael Capuano, D-Somerville, would extend south to add Randolph and western sections of Milton. The district's minority population would grow under the proposal from 52 percent minority to 56.6 percent.

Kevin Peterson, executive director of the Massachusetts Black Empowerment Coalition, said he was "pleased" with the outcome, suggesting the committee listened to advocacy groups' recommendation that minority communities in Boston and to the south be linked with the existing majority-minority district.

"We are looking forward to a situation in the next five years when a person of color will be elected to the House of Representatives for the first time in state history, adding an important voice and much-needed diversity to the delegation," Peterson said.

Andrew Azer, president of the Randolph Town Council, said he hopes the town's needs don't get overshadowed being included in a district dominated by larger cities such as Boston, Cambridge and Somerville.

"We're a small suburb but we have urban issues that are similar to those communities that are in the district," Azer said. "We have special needs that hopefully don't get drowned out in a large district."

State Rep. Michael Moran, D-Boston, said the redistricting committee plans to accept public comment on the proposal until 2 p.m. Thursday when the full committee will vote on the plan. He said the House and Senate expect to take up the bill next Tuesday.

Material from the Statehouse News Service was included in this report.

BUSINESS NOTES

Lewis certified in Webster Technique

Dr. Lisa Lewis, chiropractor and owner of Cohasset Family Chiropractic, recently received certification in the Webster Technique from the International Chiropractic Pediatric Association.

The Webster Technique is a specific chiropractic sacral analysis and adjustment used for pregnant women. The goal of this protocol is to address neuro-biomechanical function of the pelvis. It is proposed that sacral misalignment may cause the tightening and torsion of specific pelvic muscles and ligaments that can contribute to intra-uterine constraint.

Clinical experience among those trained and certified in the Webster Technique indicate that, in addition to relieving the discomforts of low back pain during pregnancy, the technique may be efficacious in relieving the causes of intra-uterine constraint thereby allowing the baby to assume the optimal position for birth. Obstetric literature has determined that correct positioning of the baby in-utero affects birth outcome and decreases the potential for undue stress to the baby's developing spine and nerve system. Obstetric literature has also determined the importance of pelvic neuro-biomechanics for the prevention of dystocia. Chiropractic literature has determined the significance of sacral adjusting in normalizing pelvic neuro-biomechanics.

DeRensis named Super Lawyer

Paul DeRensis, Cohasset Town Counsel, was named in November as one of 2011's New England Super Lawyers along with two other members of his firm, Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, PC.

DeRensis' practice is concentrated in the area of municipal law, and he was one of only 13 lawyers given recognition as a Super Lawyer in the government/cities/municipalities law area throughout the entire six state New England region. DeRensis has achieved recognition as a government/cities/municipalities "Super Lawyer" seven times, in 2004, 2005, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010 and now 2011.

DeRensis is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, and is admitted to practice in New York and Massachusetts and in various federal courts including the United States Supreme Court. He serves as Town Counsel to a number of Massachusetts municipalities. DeRensis has served as Cohasset's Town Counsel for 15 years.

All New England Super Lawyers are listed in November's issue of Boston magazine. The list of 2011 Super Lawyers is assembled by Thomson Reuters in conjunction with Boston magazine based on peer nominations by attorneys, independent research conducted by the Thomson Reuters research staff, and peer evaluations by practice area across the six New England states aimed at selecting as Super Lawyers the top 5 percent of New England attorneys in more than 60 practice areas and reflects both peer recognition and professional achievement verified through careful selection process to determine New England's best.

Veterans

Hello Cohasset and how is everyone? Make sure to take the time to remember and honor our Veterans and their families on this Veterans Day. What they gave and continue to give to our country is amazing. A lot to share this week with all of you so here we go!

ASP trip

Here is a great piece of news to share with our teens and adults who are interested in taking part in the 2012 Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (ASP)to the Appalachian region to participate in a nine-day home repair project. The registration for 9th through 12 grade teens has been extended and increased. They would love more teens to sign on to go on the ASP trip this year. ASP registration forms are available in the main office of the high school and you can go on-line. The ASP 2012 trip will be from June 23rd to July 1st. Teens are welcome — bring a friend. A trip of a lifetime!

Colgate

Alexander Joseph Kinnealey of Cohasset, son of Joseph and Andrea M. Kinnealey, is among the 765 students who entered Colgate University this fall as a member of the Class of 2015.

Alexander is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School. Wishing you all the best for a great college year, Alexander!

Documentary

The acclaimed filmmaker, Charles Furgeson has created one of his best documentaries, "Inside Job," featuring many of the principle players connected with the '08 Wall Street meltdown. Furgeson recounts this financial disaster beginning with the deregulation of the financial services industry in the 80s and 90s to the usage of derivatives, to the real estate bubble followed by the explosion of subprime lending and the usage of credit-default swaps. With dozens of interviews and archival footage which includes some key players such as Henry Paulson, Alan Greenspan, Larry Summers and George Bush, Ferguson crafts a horrifying picture of the causes of the '08 Recession.

The film may leave you angry, but with a better understanding of the '08 financial meltdown that so painfully and adversely affected so many. If you're game for a horror movie, please join in the viewing of this award winning documentary on Friday, Nov. 18 at 7 p.m.in the Meeting room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Gallery talk

South Shore Art Center will offer a Gallery Talk by Kim Bernard on Sunday, Nov. 13 at 1 pm. The talk is offered to the public at no charge.

Bernard shows her sculpture, installations and encaustic works nationally and has been featured in many exhibitions, some of which include the Art Complex Museum, Saco Museum, Currier Museum of Art, and this years' Biennial at the Portland Museum of Art. Her work has been reviewed in the Boston Globe and Art News and is featured in the recent publication 100 Artists of New England. Bernard will discuss Wax-Inc, a national show currently on display at the Art Center through December. Her piece "Swing Time" is included in the show. The juror for the exhibition was Brian T. Allen, Director of the Addison Gallery of American Art. Allen selected 44 pieces by 31 artists from across the country. The selection includes work in 2 and 3 dimensions incorporating wax and/or the "encaustic process."

Gallery Hours are Monday through Saturday, 10-4 and Sunday, 12-4. www.ssac.org 781-383-2787

GIMME SHELTER

Johnny is a gentle, laid-back guy

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Johnny, a young blue-eyed chap. He's quite handsome, with his soft fluffy fur. He's tiger-striped with an extremely large white bib. Johnny is gentle, and laid back and patiently waiting for someone to share his or her home with him. Johnny is a very special cat and there must be someone out there who would like to adopt him, so please stop by. Once you meet him, you'll want to this wonderful, furry feline, home with you.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats and kittens, including 6 adorable black baby kittens. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

If you're planning on giving kittens to your children for holiday gifts, HSAR suggests that it's best to adopt them prior to the holidays. That way, they will be settled in and be part of the family by the time the holidays come around.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

HSAR thanks the many people who generously donate to their cause. They couldn't do it without you!

HSAR's 2012 Kittendales Calendar is now available. Joanne Berman, and her sister, Susan Berman Davis, have donated their time and talent to this collectible and unique calendar. It makes a great holiday gift.

'1493' author draws a record crowd

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Charles C. Mann, author of "New York Times" best-selling book, "1493," spoke to a record crowd of 175 people at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's "Sunday AuthorTalks" on Nov. 6.

At a lively wine and cheese reception following the event, Mr. Mann signed copies of his book and spoke at length with guests. "What an amazing depth of knowledge he has about everything," said Marie Gormley. "I didn't know much about the Columbian Exchange, so I found his presentation to be quite enriching. And then to be a part of this reception afterwards and chat with people I haven't seen in a long time — very special. Very, very nice."

Mann's talk was the second event in a series of 10 visits by both fiction and nonfiction writers scheduled on the first Sunday of the month through May 2012. For more information, visit: cohassetlibrary.org.

Internationally known author and foreign correspondent Tony Horwitz will be "Sunday AuthorTalks" next speaker on Dec. 4, at 4 p.m. Horwitz will speak about his newly released book, "Midnight Rising."

Tickets to "Sunday AuthorTalks" are free and available at Buttonwood Books, Cohasset Historical Society, and the Cohasset Library, or call the library at 383-1348, ext 1, to make a reservation. Plan to come early — both parking and seats are limited and anyone arriving after 4 o'clock cannot be assured of either.

Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club; wine at the reception is donated by A Taste of Wine and Spirits.

HOT WATER

wading into rather murky waters.

DeCaprio delved right in with facts and figures presented to him by former finance director John Stanbrook, who recently left his post in Cohasset after nine months on the job.

Stanbrook reported that the total indirect cost to the Water Commission was $121,750.96.

DeCaprio was outraged by the town's allocating 100 percent of those costs to the Water Department, claiming it was unfair for his department to pay for certain expenditures that had nothing to do with water.

Coughlin asked DeCaprio to save the questions for Eric Kinsherf, the financial consultant who is acting as interim finance director, a position he also held last year before Stanbrook started. Kinsherf left earlier in the meeting. Coughlin said the fact that DeCaprio refused to ask questions while Kinsherf was present was unfair to the financial department.

DeCaprio responded that Coughlin is the department's "CFO," and therefore his questions were for Coughlin alone.

"I want to talk to you (Coughlin)," he said staring at the Town Manager.

DeCaprio went on to say that he asked Kinsherf a question earlier in the board meeting and received a response that the consultant would get back to him. Coughlin further defended the financial team, explaining their massive workload with respect to reconciling the balance sheet in time for the Department of Revenue (DOR) deadline.

Selectman Diane Kennedy added that Kinsherf only works onsite in Cohasset a few days a week.

Interdepartmental billing

One of the major problems with the Water Department's finances has to do with a $274,130 deficit (which DeCaprio said is not a deficit but a subsidy from the department to the town) for Fiscal Year 2012 and the fact that the department is no longer allowed to charge other town departments for water usage.

This sets a bad precedent, warned Selectman Fred Koed, because it then becomes much more difficult to regulate water usage and monitor conserving water. Koed suggested the Water Department put a meter on water usage and charge accordingly. The selectman also felt that they should approach the state legislature to change the law so that the Town of Cohasset, which has more than one water district, could conduct interdepartmental billing for water.

Koed also felt that they should approach the state legislature to change the law so that Cohasset, which has more than one water district, could conduct interdepartmental billing for water.

DeCaprio claimed that if the town departments, particularly the school, would pay their water bills, the Water Department would not have a deficit.

Water Commissioner Leonora Jenkins wondered how the school department had insufficient funds to pay for water, yet continually reported surpluses in their budget. She said the school owes Water $104K and have not paid their bills over the years, despite school business manager Dave DeGennaro's claim that they had.

Coughlin contended that the departments would have to pay for FY '12. But DeCaprio wanted to know what that would mean for FY '13.

"We're on the hook for fiscal year 12," said Coughlin. "We will be dealing with fiscal year 12 not only at Special Town Meeting but also Town Meeting in April. We will be dealing with this until we close the books."

The town manager that he hoped available funds would take care of these issues.

Financial review

Coughlin has pushed for a financial management review to be conducted by the Department of Revenue (DOR), which would come at no cost to the town. The town manager also suggested hiring an independent consultant just to deal with the water deficit.

Various selectmen, along with the Water Commissioners and Jack Keniley, were reluctant to have the DOR come in or hire an outside consultant, but felt that members of Advisory, Capital Budget Committee and the Water Commission could sit down with the financial consultants and figure it out.

Keniley said they would only need 10 minutes of the finance department's time.

Coughlin said he believed it would take more than 10 minutes, but was told again that the matter was "simple accounting."

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr said he was in favor of having an informal group, a subset of the various departments, take a closer look at the numbers.

Tabling the discussion

The issues are out there, but little has been resolved. As such, the board will continue the water billing discussion during the next selectmen's meeting.

Look for more in next week's issue of the Mariner.

visory Committee approved the funds article but disapproved of the group's request for leases.

Each of the boards that reviewed the articles had been reluctant to offer support "before a deal is consummated," said Town Manger Michael Coughlin.

After careful consideration, the Social Service League agreed.

"It's not a signal we're not committed to the project," said Carpenter. "We're very much committed and believe the town will embrace it. We look forward to working with you and the Capital Budget Committee to move the project forward in a timely manner."

Selectman Fred Koed said it was simply a matter of timing.

"We're not going away," Carpenter said.

Coughlin suggested hiring an outside consultant to do a needs assessment of the project, and was willing to approve the donated funds to pay for that. Such work could cost upwards of $15,000, which is around what the Senior Center fund has left.

After a brief debate between the parties involved, Coughlin offered to have the town pay for the consultant with free cash, much like the town plans to pay for plans for the Public Safety complex.

The board voted to remove the current article warrants and add an article to authorize Town Meeting to pay for the needs assessment with available funds.

Selectman Diane Kennedy, a member of the Senior Center Planning Group, said, "It feels like a little step backward [for the project], but I believe it will be a huge leap forward."

Dementia support groups offered in Cohasset

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset will host monthly support groups for family members who are coping with a loved one afflicted by dementia. James Barber, director of community relations said "these support groups are being implemented at our community to educate families on techniques and approaches that will greatly assist with caring for a loved one who is suffering from dementia."

Dementia affects many senior residents on the South Shore. Through the support of trained professionals in the field and with the sharing of best practices from families currently dealing with the care giving of a loved one affected by the disease, this support group's main objective will be to give the proper tools and approaches to family members to help alleviate some of the emotions of frustration and sadness that comes with the job of caregiver.

The support group will meet monthly on the first Wednesday of every month. Bonnie Haley, a licensed social worker, will conduct the meetings and educate family members on Alzheimer's disease and related types of dementias and how they impact individuals with memory loss as well as their caregivers.

This monthly support group is open to the public and will take place at Sunrise of Cohasset, 125 King St., Route 3A. For more information, call 781-383-6300.

Explore Graduate Studies at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Of the University of Massachusetts Boston's nearly 16,000 students, approximately one-fourth are enrolled in graduate programs, obtaining their doctoral degrees, master's degrees, or graduate certificates. Graduate enrollment has grown by 24 percent since fall 2006. Word is getting out that our university is a fantastic choice for engaging in postgraduate study and earning advanced degrees.

I invite prospective graduate students and their guests to join us on campus on Wednesday, November 16, for our Graduate Studies Showcase, from 4 to 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Ballroom.

If you're looking for information about a UMass Boston graduate program, this is your opportunity to meet faculty, students, staff, and financial aid representatives, and get your questions answered. We will also be offering workshops on the graduate admissions process to help you understand application requirements.

Other workshop subjects will include College of Management degree programs, master's programs for students who wish to teach, and information on degrees in counseling and school psychology. You will also have the opportunity to find out about several new graduate programs that are planning to admit their first classes in fall 2012, such as the master's in Applied Economics, and PhDs in Counseling and School Psychology and Developmental and Brain Sciences.

To register, please visit www.umb.edu, email bos.gadm@umb.edu, or call Graduate Admissions at 617.287.6400.

UMass Boston has a lot to offer prospective graduate students: 14 doctoral programs, with more soon to be approved; more than 50 master's degree programs; and nearly 20 graduate certificate programs.

Our competitive MS in Nursing Program in our College of Nursing and Health Sciences is ranked 50th in the nation by U.S. News & World Report. The same publication ranks our MS in Rehabilitation Counseling Program, run by the College of Education and Human Development, as 56th in the country. Our College of Management was named an outstanding business school by the Princeton Review; the ranking appears in the 2012 edition of The Best 294 Business Schools.

Of course, our programs are about more than statistics. Our graduate students attend small seminars and lectures, conduct research with real-world applications, and work closely with some of the most recognizable names in their field as advisors and instructors.

Asha Kadam, a PhD student in green chemistry, is working with her professor, Wei Zhang, on research funded by some of the world's largest pharmaceutical companies.

Julia Kennedy, an English MA student, spends her after-class time mentoring preteen girls in library reading clubs in low-income neighborhoods, thanks to program director Cheryl Nixon's partnership with the Boston Public Library.

And Stephanie Hartwell's students in the Applied Sociology graduate program are still talking about their field work last year conducting an evaluation of one of Boston's best known nonprofits, the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute.

Visit our Graduate Studies Showcase and find out for yourself how we can help you take the next step in your career or simply indulge a passion for learning.

OUR VIEW

Community policing

In editing the police/fire log every week and in talking with our police, it is evident that our fellow motorists are helping to get drunken, or otherwise impaired, drivers off the road.

Community policing came into vogue in the 1990s and represented a policy-thinking shift among police departments. Police officers became more involved in the community in more positive ways – whether those be bicycle patrols, K-9 demonstrations, installing child restraints or hosting a barbecue for senior citizens.

Over the years, we have seen another form of community policing evolve – one that is of critical help to our police officers and helps keep all of us a little safer.

In editing the police/fire log every week and in talking with our police, it is evident that our fellow motorists are helping to get drunken, or otherwise impaired, drivers off the road. By calling 9-1-1, cell callers report erratically operated cars and provide police with details about the type of car, direction of travel and often the plate number.

Another way citizens are helping police is when they report seeing some "suspicious" activity in the neighborhood. It is no secret that Cohasset has become a magnet for car break-ins. Good information provided right away to police can be invaluable.

For example, on Monday afternoon in Hingham, a concerned resident in that town called 9-1-1 after talking with a man who had stopped her to ask directions to Cohasset and appeared to be intoxicated.

Hingham police responded right away and caught up with the man, who was driving a Toyota with N.H. plates, at the Gulf Station on Lincoln Street at Downer Avenue, which is a short distance from Foster Elementary School where parents and buses were coming and going. The man failed field sobriety tests and was arrested on the spot for drunken driving.

At the top of most people's list would be a safe neighborhood and safe streets. While we urge cell callers to be careful when using their phone to call police while driving – they should be commended for their assistance. (A 9-1-1-cell call automatically goes to the State Police which transfers the call to Cohasset.)

We all need to remember to lock our cars at night and to lock our houses. Unfortunately thieves often just break in through a door to gain access to a house – but they often just test a car door and if it is locked they move on. However, if valuables are in plain sight, such as left on the passenger seat – they might do a "smash and grab" and take off.

We are not sure there was ever a time when leaving our doors unlocked was OK but many of us like to recall those days. Times have changed but practicing common sense about locking our houses and cars and being on the lookout for drunken or impaired drivers – is a way we can all take a bite out of crime.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Pumpkin Patch a Hit!

This is just a note to say thank you to the Town of Cohasset for your support of the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project's 9th annual PUMPKIN PATCH! Thanks to all of you who volunteered (some for MANY shifts!), to those who stopped by with their groups (track team, Newcomers, engagement party, and others), and to all shoppers — you helped make it our second best year ever!

Finally, a very special thanks to Phil & Jo Lehr and their team for pulling it all together! Hoping to see all of you next year!

Next up: The Secret Room (for children to buy holiday presents for their families) at the Village Fair (Dec. 3rd).

For Cohasset ASP,

WILLCUTT CORNER

Providing outreach for Cohasset seniors

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

Carol Barrett works with a vast network of agencies to provide aid to seniors with the goal of keeping elders active and in their homes for as long as possible.

The Cohasset Elder Affairs Outreach Program provides a personal link between Cohasset senior citizens, their families, and the benefits, services and programs available to the senior community.

From a small, 5-foot by 8-foot office she shares with the Volunteer Coordinator — Carol Barrett, Outreach Coordinator, provides advocacy and support for the many complex issues relating to aging. Four days a week, Barrett conducts confidential conversations with seniors and family members to assist them in unraveling complex issues relating to physical wellbeing, health care and economic concerns. Since the only other available space is a shared conference room situated in the main traffic flow, the sensitive nature of the subject matter means her office partner must leave her desk while Barrett meets with Elder Affairs clients.

As a SHINE (Serving Health Insurance Needs for Elders) certified associate Barrett assists seniors in wading through intricate paperwork as they interpret and choose Medicare Health Plans during open enrollment. She is available throughout the year to review health insurance questions, including medical bills.

Often family members call Elder Affairs with concerns relating to an aging relative. Barrett works with a vast network of agencies to provide aid to seniors with the goal of keeping elders active and in their homes for as long as possible. She consults with the individual, their family, and caregivers to design a plan to provide appropriate care. When necessary, Barrett conducts in-person visits to seniors homes, before recommending supportive services, ranging from aid with daily activities such as laundry, grocery shopping and housekeeping, to Meals-on-Wheels and fuel assistance. "We work with people regardless of their socioeconomic status." Barrett says.

Even when events dictate a senior must leave his or her home, the Outreach program provides support throughout the process. Director of Elder Affairs, Coral Grande says: "We assist seniors and their families through independent living, through transitions to care givers, supportive housing, assisted living and nursing homes. We stay with them through life. Carol refers family members to the resources they need pertaining to Medicaid, maintaining assets, and estate management, as well."

Upon her retirement after 40 years in acute-care nursing, Carol Barrett completed a geriatric certificate course at UMass Boston. "I wasn't a person to stay around the house," she says. She interviewed for positions in Scituate and Cohasset before deciding to join Cohasset Elder Affairs, so she could help people in her own town. "Even I didn't know about the wealth of services available at Cohasset Elder Affairs, other than weekly lunches and a few classes. The services we offer are wide-ranging."

"I get a good feeling about helping people in my own community," she says. People are accustomed to thinking they need to find resources outside of our community. They are grateful when they discover what we can do for them."

From the tiny office in the corner of Cohasset Elder Affairs, the Outreach program continues to help make critical connections for those who have chosen to call Cohasset home.

Liza Carens Salerno, who is a freelance writer, is also a volunteer and staffer at Cohasset Elder Affairs. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

MAKING TRACKS

An inside look at paving projects

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As you know North Main Street is truly a main artery for traffic out of and into Cohasset. The traffic on this segment is quite high. It was imperative that this road segment be paved in such a way that it will hold up under the traffic.

What a difference a week makes —We mentioned briefly in last week's Mariner article that were going to pave North Main St. and Cedar Street. Clearly, North Main Street from Forest Avenue to the Greenbush Station has been vastly improved by the paving that took place last week. You may be interested to know that there is a bit more behind paving than meets the eye. For a variety of reasons, each of these two roads was treated differently. We'll explain why.

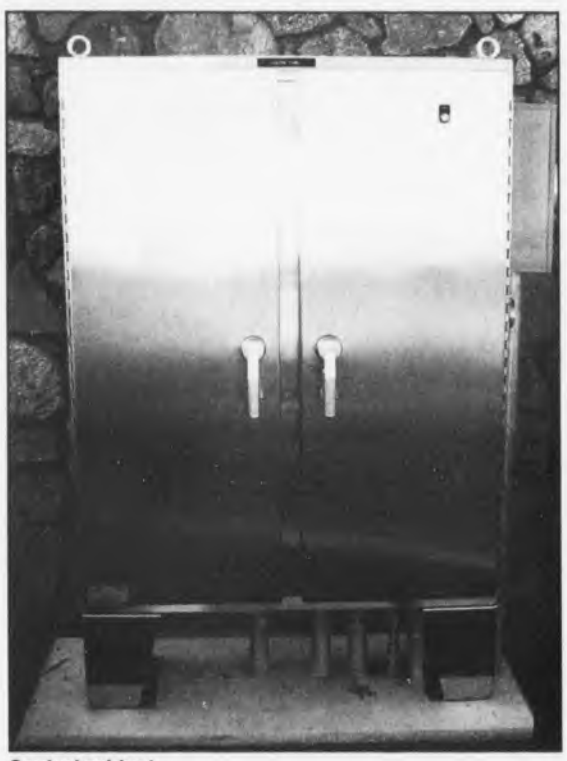
As you know North Main Street is truly a main artery for traffic out of and into Cohasset. The traffic on this segment is quite high. It was imperative that this road segment be paved in such a way that it will hold up under the traffic. North Main Street was ground, removing the amount of asphalt that was going to be put back when the road was paved. Then a base coat was laid and the road was top coated. This built a very robust restored roadway suitable for its use.

Cedar Street was another matter. Last week we mentioned that we used our Chapter 90 funds to re-do these two roads. However, these funds from the state are quite limited. In fact, with the available funds, we could not do the same treatment to Cedar Street that was done on North Main Street. Recognizing that Cedar Street is not quite as heavily traveled as North Main Street, we chose a method that was appropriate, but within our budget. We ground the surface the entire length of Cedar Street. Then we paved it with "modified binder" coat of asphalt. This modified binder is a slightly different mixture that can be used to level the road and still provide a surface that will sustain itself for an extended time period of use. This will allow us to come back in the future and add a topcoat when funds permit. So, Cedar Street has been significantly improved, but may need attention within the next several years.

Update on the Jacobs Meadow automated tide gate — If you have driven down to the harbor area and looked at the parking lot behind the Veterans Memorial, there is a new shiny new stainless steel cabinet that houses the controls for the new tide gate, as shown in the photo.

So, what's inside of this new box? Well, we thought we'd lift the veil of secrecy and show you what's inside. If you look at the photo that shows the inside of the cabinet, the cabinet is divided down the middle into two separate functional compartments.

The right side of the cabinet holds all of the power related equipment. The incoming 240 volt power comes into the cabinet from underground lines, through an electric meter, mounted on the outside of the cabinet, and into the cabinet in the upper right hand corner. Below that is a circuit breaker box, similar to the one you may have in your home. These circuit breakers protect all of the other electrical components in the entire system from electrical faults.



If you look carefully at the top portion of the power side of the cabinet there is a rather tall, vertically oriented component near the middle of the cabinet. This is a very interesting component, called a transfer switch. A transfer switch is used to transfer the whole control system from the power coming from the utility on the street to an independent source of power in the event of emergency. The town has a diesel driven emergency generator mounted on a trailer that can be towed to the site, plugged into the cabinet and used to power the gate while the "street power" is unavailable. The transfer switch switches the whole tide gate system between the two sources of power.

The left side of the cabinet houses the control system components that make the gate operate and do what it does. We will spend time detailing these components in another article. Stay tuned for the next chapter.

LIVING WELL

Antibiotics are not a cure all

JOAN F. WRIGHT, CMC

According to the CDC, antibiotic resistance is one of the world's most pressing public health problems.

November can be a transitional month and a bit uncomfortable while we try to ease our bodies into the colder weather, refresh our driving skills for stormy conditions, and dig out our boots, gloves, and outdoor gear to meet the elements. It's also when we might start feeling the scratchy throat, or blocked ear, or the runny or stuffed nose. Oh, oh, we think, this may develop into an infection so we better get on antibiotics, right? Not so fast . . . antibiotics won't kill a cold, the flu or other viral infection. So unless it's a bacterial infection, antibiotics just won't work.

The misuse of antibiotics has prompted the "Get Smart: Know When Antibiotics Work" campaign, celebrated Nov. 14-20. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) has a great website (http://www.cdc.gov/getsmart/antibiotic-use/know-and-do) that outlines what works for what symptom, and as importantly, what doesn't work! The bottom line is that antibiotics only cure bacteria, not viruses. So, here are some quick facts:

A cold, including a chest cold in otherwise healthy children and adults is viral – antibiotics won't work, won't protect others from catching it, and won't make one feel better.

Same deal with the flu, which is also a viral infection.

Unless the sore throat is strep, antibiotics won't work to cure it.

Fluid in the middle ear is also viral, thus an antibiotic won't work.

So what's the problem with taking antibiotics when you really don't need them? They increase your risk of getting an infection later that resists antibiotic treatment. If you've had common infections that were once treatable with antibiotics, this resistance can lead to significant danger and suffering. According to the CDC, antibiotic resistance is one of the world's most pressing public health problems. In the last decade, the number of bacteria resistant to antibiotics has increased dramatically.

It's important to discuss what to use for what symptoms with your doctor. We all want a quick fix but why take something that won't really help? Colds typically run two weeks, regardless of what you take. Symptoms such as pain or fever can be treated with acetaminophen, ibuprofen or naproxen (check with your child's doctor before giving). Over-the-counter decongestants and saline nasal sprays may also relieve symptoms but they won't shorten the length of time you're sick. Cool mist vaporizers or humidifiers help with cold symptoms as well as sore throats, which also benefit from ice chips. Hot steam from the shower or a bowl of hot water helps with sinus pain and pressure. (A good bowl of hot chicken soup can also produce relieving steam as well!) Neti pots or saline rinses also help. Ear pain can often be relieved by a warm moist cloth placed over the ear.

If you do have a bacterial infection and are prescribed antibiotics, take it exactly as ordered. Complete the full prescription even if you feel better. This is particularly important for children so parents should make sure they complete their full course. Stopping before the medication is done can cause the infection to come back.

Employ preventative measures to cut your risk for illness by washing your hands, looking into getting a flu shot and ensuring that those around you who are sick cover mouths and noses when coughing and sneezing. Let's hope for a healthy winter!

FOR THE RECORD

More than words for veterans

GREGORY MATHIS

With President Barack Obama's recent announcement that the war in Iraq has ended and the remaining troops will soon be coming home, more men and women will be joining the ranks of veterans.

The 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. This year, it also falls in an 11th year — 11/11/11, 11 a.m.

Veterans Day was first known as Armistice Day and honored veterans of World War I. Congress made it a legal holiday in 1938, but after World War II and Korea, legislators replaced the word "Armistice" with "Veterans." In June 1954, Nov. 11 became a day to honor American veterans of all wars.

While many federal holidays are celebrated on Monday to ensure three-day weekends, Veterans Day is one of the holidays celebrated on its original date, although Congress did change that for a decade with a vote in 1968 that moved the federal holiday to a Monday. Many did not agree with the decision and continued to celebrate the holiday on its original date, forcing then-President Gerald Ford to sign a law in September 1975 returning the annual observance of Veterans Day to its original date of Nov. 11, beginning in 1978.

To this day, Veterans Day continues to be observed on Nov. 11, regardless of the day it falls.

This year it falls on a Friday, and this year — and in years to come — we honor veterans young and old.

With President Barack Obama's recent announcement that the war in Iraq has ended and the remaining troops will soon be coming home, more men and women will be joining the ranks of veterans. As the war winds down and the men and women return home and complete their military commitments, we'll need to make sure we turn those words of support into action.

It's unknown whether these new veterans will boost membership in the various military service organizations in the area, but one thing we do know is these returning troops will need assistance easing back into civilian life. With unemployment still at an alarming level, they'll need help transitioning back into the job market or resuming their educational opportunities.

It won't be easy. Towns have consolidated veterans services departments and have had to deal with budget cuts, like many other departments in town. Obama and Gov. Deval Patrick, however, have promised to expand and fund services in anticipation of a growing veterans corps. The president has promised to build a Department of Veterans Affairs for the 21st century that will not only help deal with physical and psychological issues, but will assist those pursuing a college degree or in need of job training and placement programs.

According to a statement issued last week by the governor's office, Patrick has declared November as "Hire a Veteran Month" and announced new initiatives and resources to support the hiring of Massachusetts veterans while increasing access to health care, transportation, education and housing services.

Support for the troops has been a rallying cry for many Americans over the past 10 years. Regardless of one's opinion on the United States' involvement in Iraq and Afghanistan, there has been much more of a united front with regards to those serving their country.

Obama said, "Part of ending a war responsibly is meeting our responsibility to the men and women who have fought it."

That's a message worth keeping in mind as we observe Veterans Day this Friday, Nov. 11.

Reducing stormwater application fees

ConCom to hold public hearing Nov. 16

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The hearing on Changes to Cohasset stormwater bylaw and regulations is at 7 p.m. on Wed. Nov. 16.

Next week, the Conservation Commission will hold a public hearing on the new rules and regulations on stormwater applications. Conservation Commission agent Paul Shea has been working on reducing stormwater fees for both the review and application process.

Associate member Michael Milanoski said the Commission is looking to reduce the fees to the residents and still provide the necessary protections under the bylaws and review process.

"The outcome we're hoping for is to reduce the impact to homeowners, cut down 50 percent of their expenses, and at the end of the day have a better product," Milanoski said.

Both Commission chairman David Farrag and Commissioner Jack Creighton pointed out that these regulations were reviewed by the ConCom a year ago, and it was something the "old committee" (prior to this past summer's unexpected ousting of three longstanding Commissioners by the Board of Selectmen) intended to revisit.

"There's always a balance," said Farrag. "How do you make it balanced with the regulations while improving what we had?

"We wanted to look over stormwater with some tweaks anyway and were going to do that in the fall," Farrag continued. "It's a new marketplace... it was time to look at the regulations."

Creighton was in tune with Farrag, also explaining that the "old commission" was looking to retool the bylaw, "to see where it works, see where the problems are, then move to fine tune it, strengthen it where it needs to be strengthened, and modify it.

"I support the bylaw," Creighton added. "It's a good idea."

Also, Creighton said, "I'm impressed with some of the new energy coming into the Conservation Commission."

While the ConCom has also looked into establishing better compliance and governance practices in the wake of the Cat Dam hearings, along with weathering the storm caused by the former commissioners' unseating, reworking the stormwater regulations is another important step forward.

"We're trying to have the same protections while keeping the intent in the spirit of the bylaw," said Farrag.

The hearing on Changes to Cohasset stormwater bylaw and regulations is at 7 p.m. on Wed. Nov. 16.

UPDATE

AEC seeking green incentives

The Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee will be competing against other municipalities in the Greater Boston area to receive government incentives for going green.

The committee met Monday, Nov. 7 and discussed applying to the MAPC (Metropolitan Area Planning Council) Local Energy Action Program. Their letter of interest was due by Thursday, Nov. 10 in order to be considered.

The MAPC's program helps sustainable communities access grants and technical assistance to implement energy-efficient programs.

"Cohasset is already considered a green community," said committee secretary Marie Caristi MacDonald.

The committee is also in the process of preparing an RFP (request for proposals) for its solar array project to be placed on the landfill at 81 Cedar Street. Next week, the group plans to present two warrant articles to the Board of Selectmen for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting.

In the meantime, MacDonald planned to ask for Town Manager Mike Coughlin's signature on the MAPC letter of interest and to send that off before Nov. 10.

Sewer article seeks town funds for paving

Special Town Meeting to vote on issue

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The commission is asking for $165,000 to help pay for a $2 million paving project that the commissioners believe the town should contribute to because the paving falls outside the original scope of the project in the Little Harbor district.

The Sewer Commission chairman Wayne Sawchuk and vice chairman Bryan Taylor Baldwin first presented a warrant article for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting to the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Nov. 1 requesting a capital reserve fund transfer to the Sewer Commission enterprise fund.

They came back before the board on Tuesday, Nov. 8 to clarify what, exactly, the funds are for, and won approval from Selectmen.

The commission is asking for $165,000 to help pay for a $2 million paving project that the commissioners believe the town should contribute to because the paving falls outside the original scope of the project in the Little Harbor district.

"450 people in the Little Harbor sewer district are paying 100 percent of the costs," said Sawchuk.

Both the Board of Selectmen and the Capital Budget Committee were initially hesitant to approve the article asking for these additional funds.

But this week, enough questions were addressed to win Selectmen's support for the warrant article.

Sawchuk and Baldwin came Tuesday armed with figures, along with the department's engineer Dan Coughlin.

Coughlin explained that the Sewer Commission approached the town a year ago about reimbursing sewer $250,000 for the work that was done. The number has since been broken down to the current request for $165,000.

One reason that number was reduced, said Coughlin, was due to Mark Brennan, town engineer and special assistant to the Town Manager, filing a claim with the gas company and getting them to pay back around $30,000 to sewer.

The Sewer Commission put together a packet for the Capital Budget Committee to satisfy their request for invoices. Coughlin said $165,000 could be bonded over a 10-year period.

Selectman Koed agreed that "the responsibility for some of that pavement is the Town's," and that the burden should not be placed on the 450 users in Little Harbor.

When Selectman Leland Jenkins asked about paying it over a 20-year bond, Sawchuk responded, "You could pay the whole thing off now with free cash and not worry about the accounting part of it."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin expressed his concern that "the use of reserve funds is something lawyers like to split hairs over." He agreed that the issue could be resolved by instead using free cash.

"In an effort to move forward, I believe the best way to respond is to just pay it off," the town manager said.

The Capital Budget Committee members present Tuesday continued their side of the debate, with CBC Chairman Steve Gaumer calling the issue "a matter of principle." He said while the committee agrees with the request on principle, they need to see more documentation – invoices, work orders – showing that the project fell outside of the original scope. Gaumer said he would like to know why the commission needs an additional $165,000 for a $14 million total project.

"If the payment falls outside the scope of work, it should be paid by the Town," he said. But Gaumer wanted to dig into what exactly lies outside and within the district.

Town manager Coughlin once again recommended the expenditure come by free cash, acknowledging that while "it doesn't answer the question [on the scope of work] in any way, shape or form... I think to solve the issue, Capital Budget can write a report some time outlining lessons learned from this project, but it's time to make peace and move on."

The town manager suggested the language be changed on the warrant from "capital reserve funds" to "available funds," meaning free cash. He asked if the Sewer Commissioners had a problem with the revision, to which they all responded, "No."

The selectmen voted to approve the article warrant for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting.

Volume 37- Report No. 44 Oct. 31-Nov. 4, 2011

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on seven roll calls and local senators on two roll calls from the week of October 31-November 4.

HOUSE AND SENATE REDISTRICTING (H 3770 A, S 2045)

House 151-3, approved the plan redrawing the 160 House districts, and the Senate 36-0, approved the plan doing the same for the Senate's 40 districts. Gov. Deval Patrick signed both plans into law. States are required to redraw legislative boundaries every 10 years to correspond with population changes compiled by U.S. Census reports.

Supporters said the districts were drawn following a very transparent process including many public hearings and extensive input from many interested groups. They argued the plan is a fair one that hikes the number of majority-minority districts and increases the likelihood of a more diverse Legislature being elected in 2012.

Opponents offered no arguments.

(A "Yes" vote is for the plan. A "No" vote is against it.)

PENSION SYSTEM CHANGES (S 2018)

House 151-0, approved a bill making changes in the pension and retirement systems for employees of the state and cities and towns. The proposal reduces pensions by raising the minimum retirement age for most public employees by two years, from 55 to 57.

Other provisions include increasing from three years to five years the period for averaging earnings to calculate a member's retirement allowance to more accurately reflect his or her career earnings; prorating the retirement allowance of future employees who serve in more than one group by taking into account the number of years of service in each group; requiring that current employees serve at least one year in a group at the end of their career to retire from that group; and establishing a minimum pension of $15,000 for state workers who have spent 25 years in state government. Currently, many retirees are struggling with annual pensions of $12,000 to $13,000.

Supporters said the state and local pension systems are in dire shape and must be reformed. They argued the reforms would save the Commonwealth $5 billion over 30 years.

The Senate has approved a different version of the measure. A House-Senate conference committee has been appointed and will try to hammer out a compromise version.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill making changes in the pension system.)

STUDY AND DELAY SALES TAX CUT FROM 6.25 PERCENT TO 5 PERCENT (H 3781)

House 122-34, voted mostly along party lines and approved a Democratic leadership-sponsored amendment that would replace a proposal to reduce the sales tax from 6.25 percent back to the 2009 level of 5 percent with an amendment to study the proposal instead. All Democrats except one supported the study while every GOP member opposed it and instead favored the cut itself.

The study amendment would require the Patrick administration to study and report back to the Legislature by April 1, 2012 on the impact the reduction would have on the state.

Some supporters of the study said the state cannot afford the loss of revenue and predicted that this tax cut would result in reductions to local aid, education, health care and human service programs. Others argued they were open to a tax cut but not without first studying its impact.

Opponents of the study said it is a tried-and-true method that enables legislators to avoid a direct vote on the proposal itself. They said the study would never be conducted and the tax reduction would never see the light of day. They noted this increased sales tax is hurting consumers and retail operations, especially those on the state's borders. They argued that you can't tax your way out of a recession and urged the state to live within its means.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the tax cuts. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the tax cut. A "No" vote is against the study and favors the tax cut.)

STUDY AND DELAY $344 MILLION INCREASE IN LOCAL AID (H 3781)

House 121-34, voted mostly along party lines and approved a Democratic leadership-sponsored amendment that would replace a proposal to provide $344 million in additional local aid with an amendment to study the proposal instead. All Democrats except one supported the study while every GOP member opposed it and instead favored the $344 million increase.

The study amendment would require the Patrick administration to study and report back to the Legislature by April 1, 2012 on the feasibility of the increase.

Some supporters of the study said the state cannot afford the increase and warned the hike would result in reductions to important human service programs. Others argued they were open to the increase but not without first studying its feasibility.

Opponents of the study said it is a clever way for legislators to avoid a direct vote on the proposal itself. They said the study would never take place and that the local aid increase would never happen. They said cities and towns were hit with a $65 million local aid reduction this year and a $400 million cut since 2006. They noted this would make good use of millions of dollars of expected surplus state funds to help communities that are struggling and have been forced to make cuts.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the $344 million increase. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the $344 million local aid increase. A "No" vote is against the study and favors the $344 million local aid increase.)

ALLOW STATE TO BUY HOMES IN FORECLOSURE (H 3781)

House 38-116, voted mostly along party lines and rejected a Republican leadership-sponsored amendment that would require the state to look into the feasibility and possible advantages of purchasing homes that are part of a short sale or foreclosure. All Republicans voted for the amendment while all but four Democrats opposed it.

Amendment supporters said this will look at the question of whether the state should spend money to house people in hotels or instead buy the homes that are part of a foreclosure or a short sale and allow people to stay in them. Amendment opponents offered no arguments.

(A "Yes" vote is for the state looking into the feasibility and possible advantages of purchasing homes that are part of a short sale or foreclosure. A "No" vote is against allowing it.)

STUDY AND DELAY ASKING IMMIGRANTS FOR ID (H 3781)

House 110-43, approved a Democratic leadership-sponsored amendment that would replace a proposal to require the state to verify that anyone over 18 who applies for state benefits is legally in Massachusetts with an amendment to launch an investigation about whether the state should study the proposal instead. The amendment would require the House Committee on Post Audit and Oversight to investigate whether the state should "authorize a study of the services provided by the commonwealth to residents and non-residents of the commonwealth and the monetary distinction between such residents." The amendment also requires the committee to consider "any potential civil rights violations that could occur if a study was conducted."

Some supporters of the investigation on whether to study said the original proposal is mean-spirited and anti-immigrant and noted many illegal immigrants are hardworking people who perform jobs most Americans would not do. Others said the House should gather information before making a rash decision and noted this problem really should be solved on the federal level. Some argued there are many legal immigrants who would find it difficult to produce the necessary documentation.

Opponents of the study said it is simply another example of a way for legislators to avoid a direct vote on the proposal itself. They said the study would never be conducted and the measure would never be implemented. They noted state services, with some emergency exceptions, should not be provided to people who broke the law and are here illegally. They emphasized the legislation would only apply to illegal immigrants and includes many safeguards to protect individual rights. Some argued the state should not be spending money on illegal immigrants during this recession when people are losing their jobs and homes and there are drastic cuts in many state services.

(A "Yes" vote is for investigating whether to study the amendment. A "No" vote is against the investigation and favors the verification policy.)

CAP PENSIONS AT $100,000 (S 2018)

House 38-114, rejected an amendment changing a current formula in order to cap the pension of any state or local public employee who enters the retirement system after January 1, 2011, at roughly $100,000 instead of the current $125,000. The formula is indexed so the maximum retirement benefit would likely increase annually.

Amendment supporters, noting the average state pension is currently $24,000, said this would cap all pensions at a very generous $100,000. They argued it would finally rid the state of several outrageously high pensions that are an insult to thousands of taxpayers who have lost their homes and jobs.

Some amendment opponents said the current cap is sufficient. Others said a cap would discourage talented and highly qualified people from taking state jobs.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment capping an individual's pension benefit at $100,000. A "No" vote is against the $100,000 cap.)

$10 MILLION FOR HEATING FUEL ASSISTANCE (H 3788)

Senate 34-0, approved an amendment that would use $10 million from the state's Rainy Day Fund for heating fuel assistance for Massachusetts residents if federal funding is not available by November 7. The money would be returned to the Rainy Day Fund when the federal funding is received.

Supporters said this will ensure that many seniors and low-income families and individuals will be warm this winter regardless of when the federal funds become available. (A "Yes" vote is for the $10 million.)

passionate about paying tribute to the town's veterans. While the current economic climate has impacted just how much the Legion is able to give to charitable causes, according to the Wigmores, Post 118 remains active on the fundraising front.

"We do what we can here," said Tom. "Everyone here works as a team; we help each other out."

Both sides of the Legion raise money for student scholarships; Deirdre estimated that they give around $5,000 annually. According to Post 118's commander, they used to donate upward of $20,000.

One reason the local Legion has fewer funds available — Post 118 is no longer able to hold its annual clambake, which turned out to be a greater expense than fundraiser, according to Steve and Deirdre.

But the Post has found other means to fundraise. The Sons and Auxiliary have also been filling up their schedules with food drives. The Auxiliary recently held one at Stop & Shop, during which Deirdre reported the group filled up seven boxes of groceries to send to troops overseas. They also routinely collect coupons for the families, and ask members to bring canned goods to meetings to be donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The women's group also offers Monday night yoga classes at a $10 rate, taught by certified yoga instructor Heather Reardon of BodyScapes in Hingham.

The Sons, meanwhile, have their weekly Friday night meat raffle. Raffle tickets can be purchased at the Legion for three for $5 or seven for $10, and participants do not have to be present to be in the drawing to win steaks, roasts or chicken wings. This month, the group is, of course, having a turkey raffle.

"We're raffling off 20-plus turkeys this year," said Tom.

The Legion has a few holiday events on the horizon, including the Marine Corp's birthday celebration on Saturday, Nov. 12. The party is a roast beef dinner that costs $10 and is put on by both the Sons and the Auxiliary. This has been a tradition of the post for the past four to five years, according to the Wigmores.

Deirdre said that they often see 50 or more veterans in attendance.

"We usually have the youngest and oldest vet cut the cake," she said. And when that happens, the partygoers' quiet their whoops and hollers, Deirdre said, and "you can hear a pin drop."

Closely on the heels of that event is an Auxiliary craft fair on Nov. 15, which raises money for Children and Youth Services, along with Boys State and Girls State.

Following this event is the Thanksgiving Day breakfast from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m., which costs $7, after which many folks form groups and depart for the Cohasset High football game.

On Dec. 3, the Legion will host a holiday dinner for the elderly. Keeping with the Christmas spirit, the Auxiliary also collects gifts to bring to hospitalized veterans. Another beneficiary of Post 118's support is the Fisher House Boston, located in West Roxbury, which offers family members a place to stay while their veteran is being treated at a military hospital or medical center.

But two of the Legions' proudest events occur on Memorial and Veterans' Day.

For Tom, Memorial Day weekend is "his Christmas," said Deirdre.

"It's not just a Monday parade," Tom said. "Now it's a whole weekend of tributes. It gets bigger and bigger every year."

The Legion also holds a brief service on Veterans' Day morning at 11 a.m. at the Veterans Park. This year, new Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who is also an Army veteran, is the keynote speaker.

Coughlin also offered a brief speech during this year's 10th anniversary September 11 service on the common. Tom noted that Coughlin is the only town official to ever speak during Cohasset's event.

The Legion also puts on a major event at the Deer Hill School every year to commemorate Veterans' Day. This year's event fell on Wed., Nov. 9, starting at 9:30 a.m.

Tom credits Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara for approaching him years ago to hold the ceremony in order to bring Veterans' Day to the students. Tom runs the event along with Coleman Nee, Cohasset resident and State Secretary of Veterans' Services.

Tom further credits deChiara as the only school administrator to ever approach him about commemorating Veterans' Day in particular. "She's the only person who's ever taken that initiative," Tom said.

"When I first came to Cohasset, I knew I wanted to begin a tradition of a Veterans' Day ceremony," said deChiara, whose father is a veteran. "It's important that children learn about the sacrifices made by our country's veterans, and it's good to reinforce the values we have at our schools and in the Cohasset community, which is service to others."

During the event, the Deer Hill School welcomes several area vets and honored guests, "representing all the branches and all the wars, beginning with World War II," said deChiara.

The schoolchildren gear up for the festivities by creating posters, writing essays, poems, and even original songs that are performed during the event. Essay contest winners get a prize from the Legion, said Tom.

Cohasset's Legion commander, Steve Wigmore, will be making his first appearance at the event this year, he said.

"Last year about 20 vets were there," he said. "The kids like to talk to them."

In terms of outreach, the Legion is always looking for new members to join.

"Just joining is helpful," said Deirdre, as the Legion does collect membership dues to put toward scholarships and donations. Deirdre said that even those who dislike attending meetings are welcome to become members.

"I ask if they'll cook a turkey," Deirdre said. "They say, 'absolutely.'"

Ways to contribute to Post 118 and its causes:

- If eligible, join the Legion
- Volunteer to help during events
- Purchase raffle tickets
- Attend Legion dinners, breakfasts and other events
- Knit or donate hats, scarves and blankets for servicemen and women overseas

Coastal Stars hockey roundup

Coastal Stars U14B Girls

The Stars began their weekend hockey games Saturday afternoon against a tough South Boston.

Although out shot 27 – 11 Stars goalie Alexa Henriksen (of Marshfield) kept South Boston scoreless keeping the game even 0-0.

Star's Defensive players Kathy Moore, Megan Powers and Maddy Welch (all of Marshfield) and Lindsey Beiche (Cohasset) moved the puck well into South Boston's zone allowing forwards Emma Bourdreau, Erin Murray, Sydnee Reardon (all of Marshfield) & Allie Siroonian (Abington) shooting opportunities. Short on player's, Star's Megan Powers switched from defense to forward to help lead offensive attacks against South Boston defense.

With little rest, the girls played an early game Sunday morning against Weymouth.

The first period was full of action. The Stars dominated by constantly taking possession of the puck. Emily Stockless (Marshfield) set the tempo with a rush on net that energized the team. Emma Boudreau (Marshfield) beat out Weymouth to avoid an icing call against the Stars setting up a great offensive opportunity. With 4 minutes left in the period, Erin Murray (Marshfield), stuck in a pile of Weymouth players in front of the net,

Cohasset wins 3 consecutive 1-0 games to make finals

Gatehouse News Service

When fans look back at some of the best Cohasset field hockey teams in the school's history, the past two seasons have definitely given themselves an argument.

Last year, the Skippers were undefeated in the regular season before being upset in the first round.

An upset wasn't happening this year.

With a 1-0 win over South Shore League powerhouse and rival Harwich (16-3-2) on Tuesday afternoon, No. 6 seeded Cohasset (15-1-3) earned a spot in the Division 2 South Sectional Final to face No. 1 sseded Canton (19-0-1) on Saturday at Taunton High School.

News Service

After beating Bourne 1-0 in a barnburner on Saturday night at home, Cohasset boys soccer coach Jim Willis knew his squad was in for a battle in the next round.

The 12th-seeded Skippers (10-6-4) were ousted in overtime by No. 5 Old Rochester (15-2-2), losing on a corner kick as time expired in the first OT.

GateHouse News Service

In a season full of lopsided losses for the Norwell High School football team, last Friday's 35-0 defeat to Cohasset might have been the most disappointing for Norwell, but it was a good win from the other perspective.

Kyle Livingstone ran in all five touchdowns for the Skippers (4-4, 3-2), finishing with 224 yards on 22 carries. Ten of his runs went for 10 yards or more.

The Skippers held Norwell to only 24 total yards and two first downs on 30 plays, including minus-28 rushing on 16 attempts.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Marshfield, Weymouth top list

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The ninth week was a short one and relatively quiet as teams finished their regular season schedules. There really is no movement this week, however a new batch of bubble teams have emerged. Will they crack the top six by season's end? Only time will tell. These rankings reflect games played through Wednesday, Nov. 2, the final day of the 2011 regular season. The next and final rankings of the 2011 soccer season will come out at the conclusion of the postseason.

Boys

1. Weymouth – The Wildcats regain the No. 1 spot after sliding down and surrendering the reign last week to a red-hot Hingham team. The 'Cats, ranked No. 10 in the state, finished the regular season last week with a scoreless draw against B.C. High and a hard-fought, 1-0 win over rivals Braintree.

2. Hingham – In their only match of the week, the Harbormen lost, 2-1, to Sandwich. Not a bad showing in the least. Sandwich is ranked No. 2 in the state and had only one loss this season. Hingham enters the postseason ranked No. 9 in the state.

3. Silver Lake – The Lakers capped a fine season with a 7-0 win over North Quincy, and they enter the postseason as the No. 13 team in the state.

4. Duxbury – The idle Dragons fall one spot to No. 4, but only due to the fact that Silver Lake played and won. If these two teams met in the postseason (they're in different divisions), it would be quite the match.

5. Hanover – The Indians had the Patriot League Fisher Division title in hand heading into the final week of the regular season. The only match they played was a non-league contest against unbeaten Cardinal Spellman. They nearly pulled off an upset, but fell in the end, 2-1.

6. Scituate – The Sailors enter the Division 2 postseason with an impressive 10-3-4 record. They earned that tenth win over the season by defeating rivals Cohasset, 3-0, at home.

On the bubble: Marshfield, Plymouth South, Plymouth North, Norwell, Cohasset, Holbrook, Carver

Week Eight Rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Duxbury, 4. Silver Lake, 5. Hanover, 6. Scituate

Girls

1. Marshfield – The Lady Rams, who were idle last week, finished the season with a 14-2-2 overall record. The Atlantic Coast League champions, ranked No. 11 in the state, enter the postseason as the No. 3 seed in Division 1 South.

2. Weymouth – The Bay State Carey champions also had the week off, having wrapped up their regular season the week prior. The Lady Wildcats open the Division 1 South Sectional tournament as the No. 9 seed.

3. Plymouth North – The Atlantic Coast League runners-up, Plymouth North enters the Division 1 postseason tournament with a 12-4-2 record. The Lady Eagles wrapped their regular season with an impressive 2-0 win over Silver Lake.

4. Hingham – Finishing second in the Patriot League Keenan Division, the Harborwomen beat North Quincy, 2-1, to wrap up their regular season at 13-3-3. They open the Division 2 South Sectional tournament as the No. 4 seed.

5. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons, ranked No. 14 in the state, come into the Division 2 South Sectional tournament as the No. 8 seed.

6. Norwell – Appearing for the first time in several weeks in the top six, the Norwell girls ended their season in impressive fashion. In so doing, the Lady Clippers earned the No. 2 seed in the Division 3 South Sectional tournament. They beat Carver, 2-0, and Notre Dame Academy, 3-0, last week to cap a fine regular season.

On the bubble: Scituate, Plymouth South, Braintree, Carver, Hanover, Abington

Week Eight Rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Weymouth, 3. Plymouth North, 4. Duxbury, 5. Scituate, 6. Hingham

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

Sharks attack in Scituate

Sharks 6th grade team advances to Superbowl

By Coach Dan Varney
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

The SciCoh Sharks, led by the sharp bite of their defense, held Marshfield scoreless for the four quarters of regulation play. The Marshfield Rams were equal to the task holding the Sharks number one offense scoreless for the first four quarters. And then the fun began....

First overtime

Things stayed the same for the first overtime with the Sharks' defensive line of Will Schwartz, Sean McNeil, Will Thomas, Andrew Blanchard and Alex Defreitas holding Marshfield scoreless. Again, Marshfield matched the Sharks by forcing a fumble and double overtime.

Second overtime - Sharks ball

This time the Sharks started from the Rams ten yard line with four downs to score a touchdown. Liam Maguire gutted out a tough run down the middle of the Rams defense and a six-yard gain. Cal Osten was given the ball for the next down and immediately stuffed at the line of scrimmage. Osten has been one of the hardest guys to tackle this year so he was given the ball again, this time with different results—Touchdown Sharks! The key play of the game came next, a two-point conversion and eight point lead. Quarterback Deven Varney gave the handoff to Maguire who immediately handed the ball off to Tight End Will Greer. Greer took the handoff and ran the reverse with perfection and a successful conversion. The game was not over yet as the Rams had the ball at SciCoh's ten yard line and four downs to score a touchdown; they would also have to convert the two point conversion to force a third overtime.

Second overtime- Rams ball

The Rams tried, as they had all day, to run against the Sharks defensive line. As in the prior four quarters and the first overtime, the Sharks would not give up the yardage that the Rams needed. The undaunted Rams offense decided to try a pass and scored.

The SciCoh crowd was on their feet chanting D-Fence along with the fantastic Cheerleaders who support the team every game of the season. The ball was snapped and the play (for those there it seemed to be in slow motion) was a run into the heart of the Sharks Defense. Bad Move!!!! The Sharks entire D - the aforementioned line as well as Jackson Mansi, Tommy Carrabes, Jason Dwight, Luke Murphy, Charlie Pyne, Cal Osten, Kyle McFetridge - was in on the tackle.

The Sharks win ... off to a fourth consecutive Super Bowl this Sunday

The Sharks will play in the Super Bowl at 2 pm in Barnstable against the Bridgewater Badgers. Everyone is invited and encouraged to come and support our sixth grade team. Wear blue and white, decorate your cars, bring all the enthusiasm you can to help our boys come home victorious.

grabbed the puck and scored.

In the second period Star's goalie Alexa Henriksen (Marshfield) made several tremendous saves keeping Weymouth off the board. While Defensive players Maddy Welch, Megan Powers, Kathy Moore (all of Marshfield) and Lindsey Beiche (Cohasset) were effective at back checking, breaking up Weymouth's drives and moving the puck back into Weymouth's zone.

Unfortunately Weymouth was able to score twice in the third period against the exhausted Stars to win the game 2-1.

Coastal Stars Girls U14B vs. Hingham

The Star's U14B girls engaged in a defensive battle against Hingham Sunday falling short 1-0.

Hingham's defense was strong, limiting the Stars to only 8 shots in the game. Star's forwards were also very effective with their back checking.

The Star's defensive players, Maddy Welch, Kathy Moore, Megan Powers (all of Marshfield) and Lindsey Beiche (Cohasset) all worked endlessly defending their zone and initiating offensive attacks. The Star's defense were a key element of the game proving great support for goalie Alexa Henriksen. Henriksen did an outstanding job defending the Star's net stopping 14 of the 15 shots that Hingham had.

Squirt B

The Coastal Stars Squirt B team continued their strong season with victories over Tri-County (4-2), Braintree Blue (7-2) and Braintree White (9-0).

They sandwiched the three wins around a tough 5-3 loss to a very strong Hingham team. With three victories and one loss in their last four games the B team improved to 8 wins and just 2 losses on the season.

During the four games excellent play was seen from every member of the Stars B team.

All players played both Forward and Defense allowing everyone to factor in the scoring. The scoring over the four games were seen from Jake Blinn (3 goals, 2 assists), Shane Brait (1 goal, 4 assists), Alex Erikson (1 goal, 3 assists), Michael Fullam (1 goal, 3 assists), Brendan Fullam (2 goals, 2 assists), Matt Hines (3 goals, 3 assists), Sean McIntrye (3 goals, 5 assists), Nick Valianti (2 goals, 3 assists), Jarrod Wright (3 goals, 3 assists), Matt McGrath (3 goals, 2 assists), Brian Melvoen (1 goal, 4 assists), Ben Greer (1 goal, 1 assist) and Jack Fitzpatrick (1 goal, 5 assists). Also two players joined the team for their latest game and played excellent hockey and also contributed on the score sheet with Nick Stephen getting 2 assists and Trevor Perry-Gore adding an assist and excellent defense against a tough Braintree team. In goal Mike O'Toole was his usual brilliant self, getting 3 wins (including his second shutout of the season) with a goals against average of 2.00 (2.33 for the season).

Coach Bryan Erikson was asked about the team's play "I continue to be amazed at the unselfish nature of the team. The passing is the best I have ever seen at this level. Watching these kids play hard, make great passes and truly enjoy being around each other has helped make this one of my most enjoyable coaching experiences."

FIELD HOCKEY

Caitlin DeAngelis scored the winner on a penalty stroke in the Harwich win.

After a scoreless first half, Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano was not worried despite her team's inability to crack the Harwich defense.

"Part of my strategy is to let them play their game," she told the Patriot Ledger. "I give them a lot of leeway. In the way that some (football) coaches let quarterbacks call plays, I let them make decisions on the field, and they usually make good ones."

Giuliano's trust paid off in the second half. Rather then pressing for the big play, Cohasset stayed calm, making necessary stops on defense while smoothly moving the ball in transition offensively.

Much of that was due to senior forward Angela Cipolla, who kept Harwich defenders on their heels by attacking on breakaways. It was this pressure from Cipolla, along with fellow seniors Amber Silvia and Sage Stebbins in the midfield, that gave the Skippers the break that they needed.

Harwich was called for a defensive penalty and the Skippers were awarded a penalty stroke, which pits a shooter one-on-one against a goalie. Taking advantage of the opportunity, senior Caitlin DeAngelis slapped a shot past the Harwich keeper to give Cohasset the 1-0 lead.

On Sunday afternoon, Cohasset took a road trip to No. 3 Bishop Stang in a second round game, a Cohasset 1-0 win in double overtime.

Both teams were evenly matched; neither scored at the end of the second half, sending the game into overtime. But after no score materialized after overtime, double overtime was put into effect.

With 9:13 to go, Cohasset's Caitlyn DeAngelis passed the ball to Angela Cipolla, who whacked it past Spartan's keeper Meredith Gorski to end Stang's season and extend her own season for the second game in a row.

Cipolla scored Cohasset's goal in their 1-0 win over Foxboro in the first round.

Cohasset had only six corners the whole game but made the last one count. Skippers goalkeeper Whitney Jaffe had 10 saves in the game and four in overtime.

"It was such a hard-fought game on both sides," Skippers coach Laura Giuliano said. "Bishop Stang was incredible. It comes down to two overtime periods and then becomes anybody's game. They played both sides like champs. Stang deserves a lot of credit for a great season."

Stang had opportunities but just couldn't capitalize. The Spartans took 14 shots on the day and could not score on any of their 16 corners, including nine in the second half.

"That was such a great game. We're so proud of the girls." Spartans coach Karen Quintin said. "I couldn't have asked anymore from a finer group of young ladies. They played so well today. I really felt we were going to get it the first overtime. By then, after a whole hour of putting your whole heart and soul on the field and having to play overtime, they played so well.

"We had such a great chance at the cage. I thought we were going to go in, and they called a corner. We had great opportunities, so did Cohasset. It was just a really well-played hockey game, and the ball bounced in their favor today in the second overtime. It was a great game by the kids."

In the opener against Foxboro, it was Cipolla netting the game-winner with 17:30 left to play in the first half.

The scored held as Cohasset's defenders and Jaffe held strong.

"Foxboro was a great opponent," Giuliano said. "It was a classic field hockey game. It was a nailbiter to the end."

Giuliano said she was pleased with the defensive effort.

"I've had the luxury of scoring big this season," she said. "It always feels better to be up a couple or at least a goal. This game could have gone either way. Our offense kept pressure on them, but they had some corners and a few rushes. They played a great game."

Giuliano said Jaffe was a big factor.

"Whitney had five saves in the first half," she said. "She had a great game. Her head was really in it."

FALL BASEBALL CHAMPIONS

The Bandits won the Cohasset Fall Baseball 12-U championship, Nov. 5. It was the team's second straight year winning the title.

Cohasset was shorthanded all night, losing star midfielder Jonah Adkins to a hip injury in the first half and limiting playing time for junior forward Nick Tangherlini, who needed 15 stitches in his head after being hurt in the opening round against Bourne.

"That was the most physical game I've seen," Willis said about Bourne. "All the 50-50 balls were contested. There was a lvel of chippiness. Fortunately we kept our heads and got fired up."

Cohasset led 1-0 on a goal by John Mills on a rebound with 24:30 left in the game. Two minutes later, Bourne's goalie was red carded for a late hit on Nick Brown and Cohasset had the man edge the rest of the game.

"I thought they played better when they were a man down," Willis said. "They threw everybody up there, and we didn't get much of a chance to get anything going. We did a good job minimizing that. We kept an extra guy back. It was a good win."

Freshman Sam Morris scored the Skippers' lone goal off a free kick against Old Rochester.

"It was difficult to get a lot of offensive momentum going," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said, "but I have to say the younger kids and the subs stepped up."

Cohasset racked up 295 yards and 15 first downs on 43 plays, including 236 on the ground off 36 carries. The deepest the Clippers got into Cohasset territory was the Skippers' 31-yard line

"The kids played really hard and executed," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Last week against Mashpee, the kids played hard, but didn't execute. I though we played well in every facet. Offense, special teams and defense all contributed."

Cohasset will host Abington on Friday night at 7 p.m. for Senior Night.

While there are no title implications on the line, Afanasiw is expecting a good game.

"There's a lot of parity in this league," he said of the South Shore League. "On any given night, any team can beat any other. You really have to give East Bridgewater and Mashpee credit. They have played well and haven't made big mistakes.

"The'll be playing for the lague title. The rest play for pride."

LIFE AT CHS

November is getting really busy

Powderpuff has started practicing, and the big game is on Wednesday the 23rd. Watch out juniors, the seniors are going to dominate this year! Come to the game and you'll surely be entertained.

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

This week seems to drag on forever! Ironically, it was only three and a half days long...Thursday marked the year's first half day and there was no school for Veterans Day. This long weekend is much needed. As always, teachers piled on the work these past few weeks, desperately trying to add more grades to their books before the term ended on Thursday. Although a lot of people are traveling to visit colleges or family, I plan on resting — it's been such a long fall!

Picture retakes are next Wednesday, November 16th during school. If you don't like your school picture, make sure to dress up for a retake Wednesday! And hopefully, you'll be satisfied this time because there aren't any third chances...

Student council has had a few meetings in the past two weeks and has starting planning some new, exciting activities and fundraisers! The first American Red Cross Blood Drive of the year is in early December, so don't forget to sign up to donate to a great cause.

It's not too late to join clubs, all of which promise to be an easy, fun way to meet new people! The Volunteer Club meets weekly, and so do the Gay Straight Alliance and Yearbook Club. Listen to the morning announcements for information and meeting times.

Powderpuff has started practicing, and the big game is on Wednesday the 23rd. Watch out juniors, the seniors are going to dominate this year! Come to the game and you'll surely be entertained.

The boys' soccer team lost in their second playoff game on Monday, but still had an amazing season. On a brighter note, the field hockey team is advancing to the South Sectional Finals in Taunton this Saturday! Last weekend, the Lady Skippers won 1-0 in a double-overtime thriller against Bishop Stang. Angela Cipolla scored the winning goal. On Tuesday, Caitlin DeAngelis scored Cohasset's only goal to lead Cohasset to victory against league rival Harwich at home in the South Semi-Finals.

The football team's last home game of the season is Friday versus Abington at 7 pm. Be sure to come to see all of the seniors play their last game at the Skipper Dome on Senior Night!

Have a great long weekend Cohasset. Rest easy knowing that although next week is a full week, the week after is only two and a half days, and Thanksgiving is right around the corner!

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 21, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good time to let that intrepid Aries temperament take charge. Your strong leadership will help settle those still-unresolved situations. Support comes from a surprising source.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your problem-solving talents shine as you move to cool down heated emotions. You also inspire trust in all parties when you act with careful consideration of their feelings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) That long-delayed commitment begins to look better to you. But there's still a crucial fact or two you need to know about it. A health problem needs to be taken care of.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't waste time trying to learn why someone you relied on is wavering in his or her support of your stand on a workplace issue. Move on with the help of more steadfast allies.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Relationships enter a brighter period, both at home and in the workplace. Prospects also look good for single Leos and Leonas, who can expect a welcome visit from Cupid.

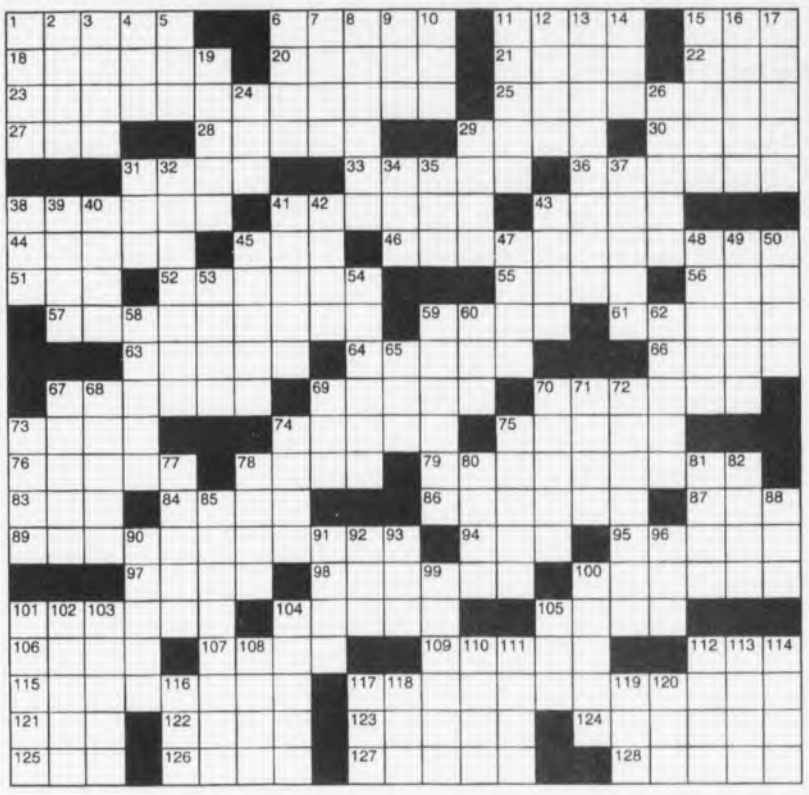
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Those mixed signals that were complicating your life are giving way now to clear, definitive guidelines. This makes it easier for you to weigh your options and make decisions.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Ask your partner for an explanation of what seems to be a sign of strain in your relationship. The sooner you understand the problem, the sooner you can both act to resolve it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new challenge in the workplace holds an exciting promise for the future. But be aware of the fact that you haven't been told about all the demands you might have to meet.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your financial picture brightens as you get into sorting out realistic goals and those that are not reachable at this time. "Caution" remains your fiscal watchword.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're deep into your new project, and that's just fine. But don't neglect your family and friends. Spending time with people you care for is always a wise investment.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Past feelings are suddenly reawakened. This could make you emotionally vulnerable. Be careful about decisions you might be asked to make at this time.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You've come to a place where you'll be facing important decisions that can affect your future. Rely on your strong moral compass to guide you toward making the right choices.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

RTR dinner and auction

Road to Responsibility will its annual Dinner/Auction to feature holiday shopping on Friday, Nov. 18, at Indian Pond Country Club in Kingston.

The difficult ongoing economic times have made fundraising more critical than ever for Road to Responsibility, Inc. (RTR) and the 1,000 adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities served by RTR in residential, work, rehab and private employment programs throughout the South Shore and southeastern Massachusetts. "We really count on our many friends to help us through times like these," stated Chris White RTR CEO. "It's tremendous as families, business partners, old friends and new come out and get involved. It's a great and fun time to enjoy a wonderful dinner and get all your holiday shopping done in one pleasant, hassle-free evening — all the while helping a worthy cause."

The third annual event will run from 6 to 11 p.m. at Indian Pond and also include hors-d'oeuvres, cocktails and both silent and live auctions. There will be something for every wallet from exotic trips, vacations and weekend getaways to great Boston sports tickets/memorabilia, gourmet dinners with media personalities and celebrity chefs, jewelry, electronics, beauty packages, gift baskets and much, much more.

Guest emcee will be Beverly Beckham, columnist for the Boston Globe. There will be a short video featuring individuals served by RTR before the live auction. Sponsors for the event presently include South Shore Savings Bank, Eastern Bank, Stonegate Builders, BlumShapiro, South Shore Magazine/Blackrock Advertising, A.W. Perry Co., Health Plans, Inc., Sigma Mechanical Services, Comcast, Hub International, Unicorn Realty, Image Tech, Rose, Chinitz & Rose, LLC, Futures Healthcore, Mutual Bank, GateHouse Media, W.B. Mason, McDougall Bros. Excavation & Construction, Grady Consulting, Casner & Edwards, LLC and Parent, McLaughlin & Nagle.

A few value-priced tables of eight and 10 and individual tickets, which will not be sold the night of the dinner are available by calling Kara Malone at 781-536-3219 or by going to www.roadtoresponsibility.org. There are also just a few tickets left for the $10,000 raffle, of which only 100 will be sold at $100 each. All proceeds from the evening will go toward the programs serving RTR individuals.

St. Joseph Retreat Center events

St. Joseph Retreat Center, 339 Jerusalem Road, invites the public to the following programs. Besides scheduled events, the retreat house is often available for individual or group private retreats. ON THE JOB

Human resources focus of program

Candidates for a job in today's market place need to understand how the human resources function works in the corporate environment, according to Marie Harris, one of the leaders of "On the Job," a job search support program at New North Church in Hingham.

"This type of knowledge is essential to getting your next job," Harris said. "That's why we have invited Fred Studley, CEO of Transition Solutions, to lead the 'On the Job' session on Monday, November 14th."

The program runs from 8:30 to 10 a.m. at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., and is open to any one who is looking for a job or seeking to change careers.

Transition Solutions was launched 25 years ago and has several offices around the greater Boston area.. Studley was formerly vice president of human resources at Corning, Houghton Mifflin, Raytheon, Computer Vision and Scudder Investments.

"Fred is a great networker with an amazing number of contacts because of his vast experience in the corporate world and he is able to translate that expertise into extremely helpful counsel for candidates who use his company's services," said Rev. Bill Turpie, pastor of New North Church.

Studley is a graduate of Northeastern University in industrial relations and is certified as a senior professional in human resources by the Society of Human Resource Management. A long time resident of Hingham, he also holds several United States patents.

"On the Job" is held every Monday morning in the Ruth Curry Parlor at New North Church, 1 Lincoln Street in Hingham. The group is led by Harris, Turpie, Linda Powers, and Shirley Rydell. The program is free and open to anyone looking to network and improve their job search skills as they seek their next position.

SCHOOL NEWS

Preventing kids from smoking

Each day about 3,500 kids in the United States try their first cigarette and each day 1,000 other kids younger than 18 become new regular daily smokers.

Cohasset Middle School is again participating in the annual anti-smoking program of the Norfolk South District Medical Society, "Smoking Don't Go There," an effort that brings physicians and adolescents together to talk about the dangers of tobacco and smoking. This is the 13th year of this public service program, to be held in conjunction with the National Great American Smoke-Out on Thursday, Nov. 17. Physicians of the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Norfolk South District Medical Society are volunteering their time to reach out to adolescents in the South Shore communities.

The entire sixth-grade class at Cohasset Middle School will participate in the "Smoking Don't Go There" program at 8:20 a.m., on Thursday, Nov. 17.

Dr. John Walsh, president of the Norfolk South District Medical Society and an emergency room physician at South Shore Hospital, is directing the program. Walsh has been enlisting volunteer physicians who will visit elementary, middle and high schools in the South Shore to discuss the perils of tobacco use.

"The link between tobacco and disease – cancer, heart disease, respiratory illness and a host of other illnesses – is clear and well known, as is the danger of second-hand smoke and chewing tobacco," Walsh said. "If you don't smoke, don't start. If you do, stop. Avoiding tobacco is one of the best things you can do to avoid disease and stay healthy."

Other South Shore schools participating are the Abigail Adams Intermediate School in Weymouth, Weymouth High School and Broad Meadow School and Sterling Middle School, the last two in Quincy.

Medical Society officials say such prevention programs have become increasingly important as the state has cut back on tobacco control and education programs. Physicians cite statistics released by the national Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids that called attention to the declining funding levels for anti-tobacco efforts across the nation and here in Massachusetts, despite the 1998 settlement of $246 billion with tobacco companies.

Tobacco use primarily begins in early adolescence. Each day about 3,500 kids in the United States try their first cigarette and each day 1,000 other kids younger than 18 become new regular daily smokers. Ninety percent of all adult smokers begin while in their teens, or earlier, and two thirds become regular daily smokers by the time they are 19.

In addition, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, youngsters who smoke are three times more likely than nonsmokers to use alcohol, eight times more likely to use marijuana and 22 times more likely to use cocaine. Smoking is also associated with numerous other his risk behaviors, including fighting, engaging in unprotected sex and carrying weapons.

"Smoking – Don't Go There" is a program based on an effort developed by the American College of Chest Physicians Task Force on Women, Tobacco, and Lung Cancer. The presentation is approximately 40 minutes long and includes a question and answer session.

ART CENTER COLLABORATION

Printmaking at middle school

The goal of this project is to add a new dimension to the Cohasset students' curriculum studies of Africa.

South Shore Art Center in Cohasset is collaborating with Cohasset Middle High School's sixth grade to enhance the students' studies of Africa. This three-month long collaborative project has been funded by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

On Tuesday, November 15, artists from SSAC will visit Cohasset Middle School to work with the students making Adinkra (block-printing) wall hangings. A centuries-old tradition in western Africa, Adinkra expresses values and philosophies of life through a language of visual symbols printed on fabric and then worn to special occasions. This tradition is still present in Africa and the symbols have become popular to other cultures as well. The students will learn about the cultural background of this unique art form and then create symbols that reflect their own values to print along with their favorite Adinkra symbols. The students' individual pieces will be combined in a huge wall-hanging that will be displayed at the school at a concluding celebration later this fall.

The goal of this project is to add a new dimension to the Cohasset students' curriculum studies of Africa. According to Stephanie Noble, Sixth grade Social Studies teacher, "By experiencing the art forms of African drumming and printmaking, as well as hearing from people living and working in African countries, the students have a much more in-depth understanding of this region."

The printmaking project will take place in a science lab at the Cohasset Middle School, beginning at 7:30 a.m and ending at 2:00 p.m.

You CAN Wear Skinny Jeans!

By Elizabeth Johnson

Many gym-goers know what the advantages are of exercise and improved nutrition: reduced risk of many lethal diseases, improved overall quality of life, and sense of confidence that shines through a healthier body. What about the "why"?

The "why" is the critical piece of the puzzle that makes the goal so important and worth working towards. For some women, being fit, active and healthy for their children is the ultimate reason. For others, it's finally feeling confident in their jeans and t-shirt and wanting to go shopping for more.

Schedule time for yourself to really sit down and think about your health and fitness goals, your plan for reaching them, and why they are important to you. The managers and personal trainers at Get In Shape For Women can do just that with you. The result is a plan for success. Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff holds you accountable by scheduling your appointments, checking in with your nutrition, and focusing on getting you results you want! Our program is composed of weight training, cardio, supportive nutrition and accountability to help you meet your goal. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com. Each franchise is independently owned & operated.

Read Anita's story about why her goal was so important.

Right after getting married, my husband and I decided we were ready for children. But I was having a difficult time conceiving. 1 was always a big girl and I eventually just got used to being the size I was, but in the three years after I had gotten married, I became the heaviest 1 had ever been. My doctor finally said my weight had become a factor in my inability to become pregnant. I couldn't believe how heavy I had really gotten until I saw pictures of myself after a trip to Boston. I decided it was time to make a change.

I always joined gyms with friends, which only gave me more excuses NOT to go when our schedules would conflict. When I got the advertisement in the mail for Get In Shape For Women's Open House, I knew I had to join on my own; I couldn't afford any more excuses. During my interview, when I was asked what my ultimate goal was, my reply was simply: "To become healthy so I can have a baby and be the best mom I can be."

1 learned I didn't need to join the gym with friends; I had made so many friends right here who pushed, supported and motivated me as I attempted to reach milestones on the quest to my ultimate goal. One milestone was to lose 35 lbs. by my 35th birthday. On my 35th, birthday, 1 scheduled a doctor's appointment (for a midlife crisis checkup)! When I got on the scale, I learned I was 4 lbs. shy of my goal... but losing 31 lbs. in 5 months was a huge accomplishment for me. I felt like a new person. That day, the scale wasn't my only surprise. While waiting what seemed a lifetime in the exam room, the nurse and doctor both came in and handed me a pregnancy test. It was positive.

I learned that you CAN reach your ultimate goal, even if you miss some milestones along the way, you just can't ever give up.

SELECTMEN

Yes to financial review

Request to be sent to DOR

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday night to approve Town Manager Mike Coughlin's request for the Department of Revenue (DOR) to conduct a financial management review in Cohasset.

Selectman Leland Jenkins made the motion, although he made it known that he was hesitant to bring in the DOR.

Coughlin reminded the board, "We're free to accept or reject anything they recommend."

The town manager said that he would draft a letter to the DOR. He also told the board that he believes Cohasset will "turn a page with DOR, not only in cleaning up the (financial) mess but by attracting a top candidate" for the open finance director position, vacant since John Stanbrook resigned after nine months on the job.

Selectman Diane Kennedy expressed concern over posting the finance director position before the department "gets its house in order."

"I feel we need to pull everything out of the closet, clean it up and then find the best person (for the job)," Kennedy said. "That's one reason John (Stanbrook) left; he was overwhelmed... I'm not confident to advertise the position. Who's going to want to work in the finance department?"

While Coughlin had taken a similar position back when Stanbrook first announced his departure, he answered Kennedy's concern by explaining how the finance department is making progress.

"I'm the coach and am trying to recruit the best professional I can get," said

Water bills

Discussion continues Dec. 6

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A water billing discussion that began during the Tuesday, Nov. 8 Board of Selectmen meeting will be back on the agenda on Tuesday, Dec. 6, the day after Special Town Meeting.

Last week the discussion was saved for the end of the agenda, and the conversation lasted for over an hour. Few issues were resolved during that time regarding the Water Department's expenditures, its $274,130 deficit, and inability to conduct interdepartmental billing.

SANDY BEACH

Baby seal washes up on beach

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This time of year, spotting seals on a New England beach is a common occurrence. Harbor seals like to come ashore to bask in the sun, nurse their young or just take a nap. But last week in Cohasset, residents came across a dead seal carcass on the north end of Sandy Beach. Concerned citizens called Animal Control and the Sandy Beach Association. Jim Contis of the association then called the New England Aquarium's marine animal stranding network. What he found out was alarming.

Cohasset's seal is one of nearly 150 that have washed up dead from northern Massachusetts to southern Maine since early September. Most of these seals, including the one found on Cohasset's shore, are babies less than a year old and under three feet long.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association (NOAA) issued a statement on November 4, calling this an "Unusual Mortality Event (UME)." This string of seal strandings is three times the average number that normally occur this time of year.

The Sandy Beach seal had likely been dead for a few weeks by the time Cohasset residents found it. Because of this, the New England Aquarium told Contis that the animal would probably not be brought into the lab for a necropsy (animal autopsy). But other, more recently dead seals have been tested for the Influenza A virus. According to NOAA, only five seals examined by the New England Aquarium have been tested

OSHA INVESTIGATING

Worker falls from ladder

At new house under construction

At 8:50 a.m. Tuesday (Nov. 15), the Cohasset emergency dispatch center received a 9-1-1 call from 390 Jerusalem Road that a worker had fallen off a ladder at the house, which is under construction.

Police and firefighters arrived and found the victim, a 34-year-old Braintree man, had fallen off a ladder that was propped up on staging on a landing outside the house.

Police said the man was working off the second floor roof and had put ladder on staging to reach the peak where he was installing shingles. The worker fell from the ladder, hit staging and then hit the second floor roof – a distance of about 11 feet.

He was transported to South Shore Hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

OHSA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) was called to the scene and is investigating.

The worker is employed by a subcontractor, Cooper & Sons that was installing the shingles. The general contractor at the site is Curtain Construction of Weymouth.

Building permits issued last month

The following remaining building permits were issued at Town Hall in October; these were not included in the list recently published due to space constraints::

Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, $101,300, roof repair, flashing, gutters, downspouts; Meehan, 18 Jerusalem Road Drive, $19,000, demo existing dwelling; Hixson, 45 Church St., $21,000, remove existing wallboard, refinish entire basement; Babka, 258 Forest Ave., $33,000, new roof/dormer to master bedroom, remodel master bath.

POLICE BEAT

Cohasset teen hits pole, faces OUI charge

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 19-year-old Cohasset man was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol following a single-car crash at 4 a.m. on Friday (Nov. 11) on Atlantic Avenue.

Police said the teen called 9-1-1 to report he had hit a utility pole between Sandy Beach and Cunningham Bridge. When officers arrived they found a heavily damaged 2007 Saab into a pole. The operator was exhibiting the signs and symptoms of intoxication and failed a series of field sobriety tests. He was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol; negligent operation; marked lanes violation and speeding.

Gas burns

On Friday (Nov 11), at about 9:30am, Cohasset Police and Fire responded to a small car dealership located on Route 3A for a report of fire. On arrival officers found a 44-year-old Pembroke man with burns to his head and face. The man reported that he works as a mechanic and was attempting to transfer gasoline from a tank to a barrel with an electric pump. The pump got clogged and then sparked, which caused the gasoline vapors to ignite, burning his face.

The victim was transported to South Shore Hospital by Cohasset Fire Department ambulance. He had minor burns to his face. OSHA was called to the scene and has taken jurisdiction over the matter.

Break-in

At 11:37 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 7), a walk-in to the police station reported that someone had tried to break into St. Anthony's Rectory where the food pantry is located. Police said there was a hole in the door where the doorknob had been removed. Detectives went to the scene to collect physical evidence. Entry to the food pantry was gained but nothing appeared to be either moved or taken, police said.

Warrant

At 5:20 p.m., on Monday (Nov. 7), a detective on patrol in Cohasset Village observed a 48-year-old Cohasset man who is known to police and who was wanted on a recent warrant for vandalism. Police stopped and placed the man under arrest on the warrant; the detective called for a marked cruiser that transported him to the station where he was booked.

Fire alarm

A 9:20 a.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 9), police went to the middle-high school on a report of a fire alarm that had been pulled inside the school. A 13-year-old boy was found to be responsible and the school is handling the matter, police said.

Found wallet

On Thursday evening (Nov. 10), a Cohasset man who got off the train at the North Scituate station found a wallet with $248 in cash, papers and credit cards and brought them to Cohasset police. The owner of the wallet, a 43-year-old Cohasset man, was contacted and the wallet was returned to him.

Power outages

At 9:40 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 10), weather-related power outages occurred all over town, police said. Streets included North Main Street, Lamberts Lane, Church Street, Beechwood Street, Jerusalem Road, Whitney Woods Lane, King Street, and Forest Avenue. Traffic lights in the north sector were affected, police said. National Grid was contacted and power was out until around 11:30 p.m.

Teen fight

At 11:08 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 10), Police responded to an address on South Main Street where a fight had occurred with a group of teens from Cohasset and Scituate. Police said one of the teens called 9-1-1 after the fight.

Police said witnesses reported that a carload of Scituate teens had passed by the home where a group of Cohasset teens were out front and words were exchanged. The Scituate teens came back in force and a fight ensued. At least two Cohasset teens were beaten up with black eyes and a split lip. The teens range in age from 17-19 years old.

Transport

Hull police contacted Cohasset at about 1 a.m. on Friday (Nov. 11), to transport a 55-year-old man to Scituate. When Cohasset police arrived in Scituate, Scituate police said his family did not want him back in the house so Cohasset took the man back to Hull police.

Larceny

At 3:43 a.m. on Friday (Nov. 11), Cohasset police investigated a report from a Jerusalem Road caller who had heard glass breaking and had seen some teens running away but found nothing. Later that morning at 11:11 a.m., police went to the antique store at West Corner on a report of a breaking and entering. The back window to the store, which is owned by a 53-year-old Hull woman, was broken and entry had been gained. About $100 worth of various antique items was missing, police said. Detectives processed the scene and the case remains under investigation.

Minor accident

Police responded to a minor car accident in the parking lot of the middle high school at 1:16 p.m. Friday (Nov. 11) during the soccer tournament. A 2001 Mercedes sedan, operated by a 34-year-old South Boston man, and a 2009 Chevrolet Aveo, operated by a 25-year-old Sandwich man, collided as the two cars were both backing out of their spaces at the same time, police said. There was minor damage, no injuries and neither vehicle was towed.

Bicyclist fell

A bicyclist, who did not take the "jug handle" fell at the North Main Street grade crossing but was not seriously hurt and continued on his way, police said. The incident occurred at 2:40 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 13). The "jug handle" directs cyclists on an alternative route where they can cross the tracks at a right angle and avoid having the bike tires get trapped in the tracks.

Default warrant

A 36-year-old Scituate man was arrested on a warrant at 7:47 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 13). An officer on patrol observed a 2006 Nissan Pathfinder speeding on S. Main Street and pulled the vehicle over. A computer check revealed the operator was wanted on a default warrant for leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage, police said.

Checked out

A concerned caller notified police at 8:07 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 13) after seeing a man wearing dark clothes including a black hoodie with his hands in his pockets acting in a suspicious manner. Police said the man checked out; he was out for a walk and on his way home.

Music's Quill to perform at First Parish

What

Music's Quill, an acclaimed tenor and lute duo from Portland, Maine, will be performing in the Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset. Their enchanting program is called "Of Ayres and Airs: Lute Songs from England and France." The concert will be Sunday, Nov. 20 at 3 pm. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. For more information about the concert, please contact Allegra Martin at (617) 872-0461.

More about the program

Music's Quill is presenting a program of intimate English airs and romantic French airs de cour ("songs of the heart"). The English portion of the program is from the Age of Shakespeare, and features three composers' renditions of the popular poem "Beauty Sat Bathing" by Anthony Munday. Munday is best known for his contribution to the Elizabethan play "Sir Thomas More", to which Shakespeare supposedly contributed a few pages. While airs de cour as a genre had a profound impact on the development of the English air, they are very different in style, as demonstrated by songs by Antoine Boësset, François Richard, and others. Lute solos by Dowland and François Dufaut fill out the program. Come and hear the music Shakespeare would have heard during his lifetime.

More about the ensemble:

Since its formation in 2000, Music's Quill has communicated the beauty of the lute song and its companion art, the rich tradition of 17th-century poetry, with concert audiences and master classes throughout the Northeast.

Timothy Burris uses the lute's intimate voice to provide an artful harmonic foundation for the vocal line. Timothy Neill Johnson's exceptional tenor beautifully reveals poetic subtleties, introducing listeners to the cast of characters in these miniature dramas, deeply human tales of love and loss.

More information about Music's Quill can be found at their website:
http://baroquelute.com/musics_quill.

More about the performers:

• Tenor Timothy Neill Johnson received a Bachelor of Music Degree from Cal State Los Angeles and continued his studies at the Royal Flemish Conservatory in Antwerp, Belgium. His ensemble repertoire includes the Bach Passions, Mozart's masses, Haydn's Creation, Beethoven's Mass in C, and Britten's Rejoice in the Lamb. He has performed song cycles of Schubert, Schumann, Finzi, Britten and Vaughan Williams, among others. Johnson has performed and recorded with many ensembles here and abroad, including the Roger Wagner Chorale, Los Angeles Baroque Ensemble, La Petite Bande, Collegium Vocale, Boston Cecilia, Handel Society of Baltimore, Le Concert Spirituel of Paris, Portland Symphony, and Apollo's Fire. He presently is on the faculty of Bowdoin College and the University of Maine in Augusta.

• Baroque lute expert Timothy Burris has performed throughout Europe and the US, both as a soloist and an accompanist. In addition to solo recordings, he has done CD projects with Jennifer Lane, Tamara Matthews, Timothy Neill Johnson, New York Baroque, and the Koorprojekt Rotterdam, among others. He can be heard playing Bach's c minor Prelude in "Shock Act", the prize-winning short-film DVD by Seth Grossman. He has degrees from the Royal Conservatory at the Hague and Duke University. Mr Burris taught lute for six years at the Royal Flemish Conservatory in Antwerp, and currently teaches at the Portland Conservatory of Music in Maine and Colby College.

Timothy Burris (lute) and Timothy Neill Johnson (tenor) make up the acclaimed duo, Music's Quill. They will be in Cohasset on Nov. 20 for a performance at First Parish. COURTESY PHOTO

Local peace vigil continues

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

"Give peace a chance" remains the message of a small group of dedicated advocates from Hingham, Cohasset, and Weymouth who have gathered on the sidewalk in front of the Hingham Post Office on North Street every Tuesday morning for nearly a decade.

Their signs bear different messages — "Peace Now," "These Colors [red, white, and blue] Don't Run the World," and "War Is Not the Answer" in keeping with their philosophy to use peaceful means rather than violence to resolve conflicts and bring security.

The original group, the South Shore Peace Forum, was formed by Hingham residents Shirley Brown and the late Katharine Sangree during the first Gulf War and was comprised of Old Ship Church members and friends from neighboring communities. Some of the original members still participate in the Tuesday peace vigils, from 11:30 a.m. until noon.

Regulars, many holding peace and anti-war signs, include Pat Granahan, Harold Thomas, Elizabeth Wilding-Smith, Old Ship Church minister the Rev. Ken Read-Brown, and Peggy Ulrich-Nims, all from Hingham; Donna Ekstrand, Ed Meehan, and Dot Anderson from Weymouth; Gay Dane, Beth Jordan, and Chartis Tebbetts of Cohasset, and others.

"Besides the core group of persistent peaceniks, many people have joined us on Tuesdays on a regular basis for a few years, occasionally, or while visiting Hingham," said Wilding-Smith, a longtime peace advocate. "Sadly, the vigil has been diminished by the death of regulars and people moving away from Hingham."

With the recent departure of longtime Forum members Shirley Brown and Everett Leonard from Hingham to another state, reconsideration of the effort was inevitable.

"We don't want to give up the vigil while peace is still elusive, and we think it's important to keep making a statement for peace," Wilding-Smith said. "So we decided to reshape the vigil and gather only on the first Tuesday of every month, hoping that we can attract some new people to come stand with us and hold a peace sign for half an hour."

Read-Brown participates in the peace vigil when he can "because in a world filled with too much war and violent conflict, there must be those who simply stand for peace," he said. "International politics is of course complex, and we will not end war next month or next year; but some of us must at least suggest by witness and presence that it is possible for human beings to find ways to resolve conflict short of war and violent force — indeed, in a world with nuclear weapons, it is essential."

The response to the post office vigil has changed over time. "In the early years, people would drive by and shake their heads or make negative remarks," Wilding-Smith recalled. "Now we're getting more friendly horn-honking, thumbs up, and general approval. There has been a noticeable change."

In an interview with Brown in early 2003, she explained the reasons behind this peace effort. "Even though the country is at war, we are still working for peace, and not just this particular peace. We're hoping that by our efforts, presence, and dedication people might stop to think and reflect about the possibility that there are other ways to look at things – nonviolent, life-affirming ways."

While some feel peace efforts of this kind undermine troop morale, others hold a different view, believing that seeking a peaceful way is the best solution for the troops, rather than going to war.

The Forum was formed in the early 1990s when talk about a possible Gulf War broke out. The group was active throughout the conflict, hosting forums and vigils. Its purpose is "to witness for peace and call for a new foreign policy based on diplomacy and international cooperation." The premise is that citizens must exercise their civil liberties in order to retain them.

The Forum was reactivated briefly in the late 1990s when the United States threatened to bomb Iraq and again as a means of praying for United States soldiers and Afghan citizens killed in Afghanistan.

The group was part of an effort to collect enough signatures on a petition calling for the immediate end of the war in Iraq to place a non-binding referendum on the November 7 ballot in 2006.

While the group is scaling back its vigils to once a month, its members remain dedicated to their cause.

On the first Tuesday of each month, from 11:30 a.m. until noon, a group of dedicated peace advocates from Hingham, Cohasset, and Weymouth gathers on the sidewalk in front of the Hingham Post Office, holding signs for peace. On Nov. 1 the group included, l. to r., Old Ship Minister the Rev. Ken Read-Brown, Dot Anderson of Weymouth, Harold Thomas of Hingham, Beth Jordan and Gay Dane of Cohasset, Pat Granahan of Hingham, Elizabeth Wilding-Smith of Hingham, Donna Ekstrand of Weymouth, and Kaye Mixon of Cohasset. HEALTH CARE

Town departments reach agreement

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In what Town Manager Mike Coughlin and Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo both called "a historic event," the town and school have reached an agreement for a town employee health plan.

"We have four ratified agreements and one verbal agreement that is to be ratified on Monday (Nov. 21)," Cataldo told the Board of Selectmen during their Tuesday night meeting.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr called this "wonderful news," adding that it has been a "huge effort done in a short amount of time."

Cataldo began her post as Cohasset's Superintendent this past summer and had only a few months to participate in the collective bargaining with the town and come onboard with the health plan, in order for the plan to go into effect by January.

Coughlin commended Cataldo "on her role in getting her unions onboard in a short timeframe," and also wanted to "compliment (interim town manager) Steve Lombard for doing the heavy lifting." Coughlin has said before that the town health care agreements were taken care of and waiting for him on his desk when he assumed the town manager role in August.

Lombard "made my job easy," Coughlin said, while Cataldo "had to take this on single-handedly, with the help of [(chool business manager) Dave DeGennaro and the school committee."

The town is now poised to experience 8.5 percent savings over the expected rate increases for fiscal year 2012, Coughlin said, or around $160,000 starting mid-year. "These are pretty significant savings."

The health plan change for the schools will be effective starting Jan. 5, school committee vice chair Jeanne Astino shared during Wednesday night's school committee meeting.

School committee chair Helene Lieb said that she hopes the school department and the town "can continue to work in such a collaborative way moving forward."

Coughlin concurs, "This is a real victory as we head into the New Year," he said in a phone interview, "and it bodes well for a cooperative town-wide approach.

"It's really the hallmark of what I wanted to occur when I was appointed," Coughlin added, "for myself and the new Superintendent to address common interests and goals."

Coughlin issues football challenge to Hull

Town Manager Mike Coughlin is bringing a Thanksgiving tradition from his previous towns to Cohasset. During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, Coughlin announced the challenge he is issuing to the town manger of Hull, Phil Lemnios.

Coughlin wrote a letter to Lemnios containing a friendly wager — if the Cohasset Skippers lose to the Hull Pirates during the Thanksgiving Day football game, Coughlin will treat Lemnios and the Hull board of selectmen to an Irish dinner at Mr. Dooley's in Cohasset. However, if the Skippers win, Coughlin suggests that Lemnios treat Cohasset's selectmen and Coughlin to dinner in Hull.

Coughlin said that "Coach Silvia," aka Fire Chief Robert Silvia, would be hand-delivering the challenge to the Hull town manager.

Coughlin confirmed in an email Thursday morning that Hull's town manager accepted the challenge.

American Legion Thanksgiving Day Breakfast

The Cohasset American Legion on Summer Street post will host a Thanksgiving Day breakfast next Thursday, Nov. 24 from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. at the George H. Mealy Post 118, 98 Summer St. For $7, attendees can enjoy an all-you-can-eat buffet featuring scrambled eggs, bacon, home fries, baked beans and more. After eating their fill, folks can form groups and head to Hull High School to root for the Cohasset Skippers in their annual Thanksgiving Day football game against the Hull Pirates.

The local Legion will also raffle off a "cash and cheer" basket containing lottery tickets and alcoholic beverages.

Tickets can be purchased at the Legion up until the event for $1 each or six for $5.

Post 118 is also raffling turkeys during its Friday night meat raffle. These tickets are also available for $1 each or six for $5. The turkey raffle will take place this Friday, Nov. 18 at 6 p.m.

Jingle Bell Walk Nov. 25

South Shore Community Center, 3 N. Main St., Cohasset, invites everyone to join in the fun at the 17th annual Jingle Bell Walk on Friday, Nov. 25. Festivities will begin at 2 p.m. when Santa and his Elves, along with some special friends, arrive at Cohasset Harbor at Government Island off Border Street via fishing boat. Join the parade and follow Santa's horse-drawn wagon from the Harbor, through Cohasset Village to the Community Center where hot chocolate, coffee, punch and cookies will await.

There will be holiday carols and the Rusty Skippers Band will be there to provide tunes to get everyone into the holiday spirit. Big Ryan the Storyteller will entertain children of all ages and children will be able to create their own holiday ornament to take home. There will also be open bowling for all to enjoy.

Bring cameras because Santa will be available for holiday photos. People can also enjoy their own Holiday Hayride around the Town Common.

At dusk there will be a tree lighting on the Common and the holiday season in Cohasset will have officially begun.

RSVP seeks volunteers

Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Program is seeking volunteers to assist in elementary school literacy programs in Weymouth and Quincy, Norfolk County.

"Strong literacy skills help to increase a young student's confidence in every area" said Jeannie McLeish, Norfolk County RSVP director. "This is why reading tutors are critically important in the early grades."

Norfolk County RSVP is sponsored by the Norfolk County Commissioners and is affiliated with the Federal Corporation for National and Community Service. RSVP helps recruit and place volunteers who are 55-plus years of age in service positions throughout Norfolk County. Programs include reading tutors, emergency preparedness and other volunteer efforts.

To become a volunteer or for more information, call Elizabeth Larkin at 781-329-5728, or email rsvp@norfolkcounty.org.

Huffing and Puffing? Lose the Stuffing!

By Elizabeth Johnson

It's time for some critical decision-making. In the weeks to come, there will be many occasions where you will have to decide if a food placed in front of you will be worth eating. You will be inundated with selections and varieties of foods that tempt your taste buds, but gradually grow your gut.

Wait ...what? Gut?

That's right. As delicious as these dishes may be, they can be too much of a good thing. This year, instead of shrugging your shoulders and tossing up your hands in an "I forfeit my soul to the food-gods" type attitude, look for ways to critically consider your eating situation, and choose only those foods that you really want to eat on the day that you really want to indulge.

Pick one day to enjoy holiday and family favorites, and the other six days in the week choose to nourish your body with fresh, healthy choices. Food and eating can certainly be an emotional experience, especially around the holidays. However, if you remember to keep it to one day out of the week while still enjoying the stuffing, and you'll be gut-free by January 1st!

"Once a week, take a free day! Forget about the rules, forget about the diet, eat what you'd like and enjoy it! But one day only! Consistency is the key to success!" reminds Brian Cook, President and CEO of Get In Shape For Women. "Results start when you do. So go get started!"

Get In Shape For Women offers the support and accountability that is so hard to come by during the holidays. The certified staff schedules appointments, motivates you through your workouts, and supports you with nutrition guidelines and one-on-one sessions. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com. Each franchise is independently owned & operated.

People thought I was mad, but now 26 pounds lighter, 10% body fat leaner and a pant size down from a 10 to a 2 who says I'm mad now? From the very first moment you walk through the door you are made to feel very welcome and the encouragement from the staff is second to none. AROUND TOWN

Books needed for St. Stephen's book fair

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Early deadline

Hello Cohasset. A not-so-long column this week as everyone is transitioning into the Late fall season and getting ready to start the Holiday season. I hope that everyone has a wonderful Thanksgiving break next week and enjoy family and friends. Also, please remember that due to the holiday week, any news, event information or celebration news should get to me no later than Monday by 5 pm.

Birthday wishes

I want to start today's column by wishing Jen Palmer a very happy birthday, today, Friday, November 18th from all of your family and friends, especially your hubby, Lansing, and Becca, Will and Nelson. Hope the day is super special just like you...

Books needed!

As part of the Cohasset Village Fair (Saturday, Dec. 3) St. Stephen's Church will be hosting their annual Book Fair in the Parish Hall.

Between now and Nov. 30 they are looking for donations of: Good condition hard cover books, paperback bestsellers (no older than 2006), Classics, Children's books (both hard and softcover), DVDs, CDs, audio books (Please do not bring magazines, VHS or audio tapes, or textbooks) All donations can be left at St. Stephen's Church inside the Parish office door. In our town there are many, many voracious readers who might happen to have some gems to be shared. Please support our fair with as many good-condition books as you can. Then join in the fun at the Fair on December 3rd and take home a few good reads for yourself!

SPECIAL GIFT

Cohasset Jewelers recently ran a contest and the winner received one of the store's signature breast cancer pins. The winner was picked by Sharon Cirone, who presented the gift last Saturday to Vanessa O'Leary, who is pictured with Maive O'Leary, 7 months. Sharon, who husband is Mark Cirone, owner of Cohasset Jewelers, Inc., is a breast cancer survivor. COURTESY PHOTO

Powderpuff!

Well, as so many are gearing up for next week, we have the Annual CHS Powder Puff Football game between the Junior and Senior girls on Wednesday afternoon. Come out and cheer for your grade. Let's go Seniors, let's go!

On Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, the CHS Football Team will play against longtime rival, Hull High School. Even though this message is to benefit the "enemy," it all goes to support the Hull Boosters. After the game the Hull Boosters will be holding a Golf Ball Drop, with the top prize being $1000. Golf balls will be sold throughout the game and BOTH sides are invited to take part in the fun. Of course, I know who I want to win, "Way to go Skippers, Way to go, Lets go Skippers..."

That is the news for the week. Send in your items for next week to me no later than Monday by 5 pm.

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Tony Horwitz coming on Dec. 4

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Tony Horwitz is the best-selling author of "Confederates in the Attic," "A Voyage Long and Strange," "Blue Latitudes" and "Baghdad Without a Map." COURTESY PHOTO

"Sometimes there comes a crack in Time itself.

Sometimes the earth is torn by something blind."

Stephen Vincent Benet, "John Brown's Body" ("Midnight Rising" Front Matter).

Who was John Brown, really? Was he a martyr or a lunatic? A brilliant strategist or a mere dreamer? A hero or a criminal? And what does it matter now, 150 years later? The Civil War is over.

Amazon.com lists 113 books about John Brown, the abolitionist whose October 1859 raid on Harper's Ferry in Virginia sparked the American Civil War. Given so much heft, what new insights can Tony Horwitz's newly released "Midnight Rising" possibly offer?

Because Tony Horwitz is one of the finest historians writing today might be one reason to sit up and take note. As the next speaker of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's "Sunday AuthorTalks" on Dec. 4, Horwitz will address the myriad questions that Brown's story raise.

Horwitz's wit, charisma, and renown will draw a huge crowd, so to be assured of a seat, come early.

Tony Horwitz's wit, charisma, and renown will draw a huge crowd, so to be assured of a seat, come early.

Julia Ward Howe immortalized John Brown's spirit in the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," as did Ralph Waldo Emerson in his essay, "Courage." But Brown's iconic image has also been tarnished by historians' conflicting claims of the forces that motivated him.

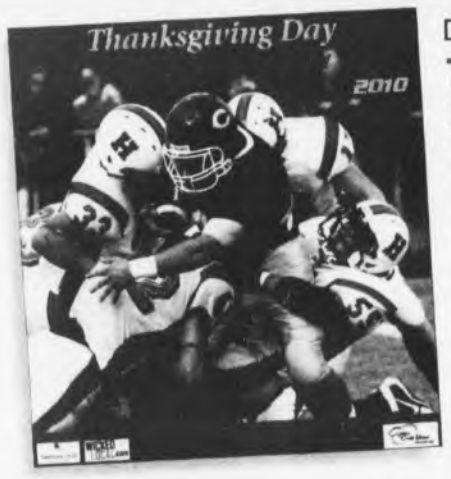
One of the past's stubborn characteristics is its dispassionate custody of truth, especially in matters of human nature, where there is no omniscient voice to assure objectivity. Although Horwitz concedes that Brown was a religious fundamentalist, obsessive in his mission, he leaves clinical assessment to his readers.

In 1858 Abraham Lincoln said, "...not in 100 years at the least [would slavery disappear]." But that was before he comprehended the magnetism of John Brown, whose words were even more powerful than reports of his actions as they spread throughout the country and inflamed its imagination and moral consciousness.

It is all these fuses and connections that make Horwitz's assertion so compelling: The Civil War would not have happened without Brown – not in 1861.

Yet, the question remains, why now? Is Horwitz asking us to consider parallels between 1859 and 2011, or is this over thinking an excellent book?

Tony Horwitz is the best-selling author of "Confederates in the Attic," "A Voyage Long and Strange," "Blue Latitudes" and "Baghdad Without a Map." He is also a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist for The Wall Street Journal and The New Yorker. He lives on Martha's Vineyard with his wife, Geraldine Brooks, and their two sons.



For further information, see Kevin Boyle's review of "Midnight Rising" in Sunday's "New York Times" on Oct. 30, 2011, or go to www.tonyhorwitz.com.

Sunday, Dec. 4, 4 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. A wine and cheese reception will follow. Admission is free but seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library, Buttonwood Books, and Cohasset Historical Society, or call the library at 781-383-1348 to make a reservation. To be certain of seating, arrive early.

Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club. Wine for the reception following the event is generously donated by A Taste of Wine and Spirits, located in the Stop & Shop Plaza.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Solar gets selectmen support

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee, along with the school department's liaisons to the committee, school business manager Dave DeGennaro and school committee vice chair Jeanne Astino, presented two articles for solar panels to the Board of Selectmen to be considered for the Special Town Meeting warrant. The fall Special Town Meeting will be held on Monday, Dec. 5.

The school committee has prepared a request for proposals (RFP) for an energy vendor to install solar panels on the roof of the Middle High school. The article is asking for the town to approve the roof's lease to a solar energy vendor for $1 for up to 20 years.

The Alternative Energy Committee's article similarly asks for the town to lease the town-owned landfill at 81 Cedar Street; it is also a $1 lease for up to 20 years. Committee secretary Marie Caristi-MacDonald told the board that they might consider a 25-year lease, which is what the town of Scituate did when it leased its landfill to a solar energy vendor.

The chosen vendor will then sell the energy produced by the solar array back to the town at a reduced rate (depending on the meter, the town could purchase the electricity for somewhere in the area of $0.6 per kilowatt hour). The project is not only a green energy initiative, but also economically viable to the town.

Caristi-MacDonald and the Alternative Energy Committee's newest member, Tanya Bodell, along with town engineer Tom Gruber, met with Albert Bangert, superintendent of Scituate's Department of Public Works, Monday morning to gain insight on the process Scituate went through when installing its solar array.

While Scituate's solar array is larger than Cohasset's will likely be (the town will be adding solar panels to around 10 acres of land, including the capped landfill and the school roof) Caristi-MacDonald said that Bangert's advice has been "an invaluable resource" for Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee.

"We would not be where we are without him," she said.

The committee learned from Bangert that the town of Scituate has been able to save around $250,000 on electricity each year, although the figure has varied from year to year. Bodell said that Scituate anticipates saving around $3.5 million over a span of 20 years.

"It looks like it's a win-win-win all around," said Bodell.

While Scituate's solar panel project accelerated relatively quickly – the town's RFP went out in the summer of 2010, said Bangert, and energy vendors responded by that September – Cohasset is still in the beginning stages.

"This is one step in a very multi-step process," said Bodell.

Having the warrant articles "allows us to move forward," said DeGennaro.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin shared that the energy consultant Scituate used is the same one used by the town of Westport, where Coughlin last worked as town manager, so he is familiar with the process.

Putting solar panels on landfills, said Coughlin, "is the kind of trash talk we like to hear."

WATER BILLS

The discussion turned quite contentious, particularly between Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio and Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who were often at odds. Both raised voices, with DeCaprio often getting out of his seat and at times leaving the meeting room.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr continually asked for both parties to "calm down" during the meeting, but never brought down the gavel. During the Nov. 14 selectmen meeting, Carr apologized publicly for failing to keep the meeting under control.

"I let the water discussion get out of hand," said Carr, adding that the board strives to "run these meetings on mutual respect."

To Carr's apology, Coughlin said that one has "to have thick skin to be in this business."

Carr also apologized to the school committee in particular; Superintendent Barbara Cataldo, along with school business manager Dave DeGennaro and school committee vice chairman Jeanne Astino attended Tuesday night's meeting to discuss collective bargaining for the new town employee health plan.

The school department often came up during the water billing conversation, with DeCaprio and Leonora Jenkins of the Water Commission claiming that the school had not paid its water bill for years. DeGennaro spoke to the Mariner weeks ago following a school committee meeting to say that the department has paid its water bill for the past seven years, even when they were told they no longer had to under state law.

The Water Commission is technically not allowed to conduct interdepartmental billing, a fact that was debated at length during the Nov. 8 selectmen discussion. Selectman Fred Koed said that he felt the board should contact the legislature to have the law changed in Cohasset, which has more than one water district.

School committee members felt they were being unfairly isolated during this discussion.

"We've been having rather robust discussions on water billing, and the school comes up from time to time," Carr told them. "It's just us taking a hard look at ourselves, the town looking at how to better handle our finances."

Astino replied, "I want to reassure the people of this town that we pay our water bills every month," adding that the school department paid $83K last year and that the amount paid over the last seven years is "a choker."

Cataldo asked Carr to let the school department know when the selectmen would be having the discussion again so that they could be part of it.

School committee weighs in

Following the Nov. 16 school committee meeting, DeGennaro and Astino met with the Mariner to discuss the school's water bill.

Astino presented the school department's billing history for the past seven years, from fiscal 2005 to fiscal 2011. The department is billed quarterly for water, Astino said.

DeGennaro said the department is in the process of paying the bills Fiscal 2012.

"Twice a month, I've reviewed the bills for the past year and a half," said Astino. "We know we had the money in the budget, and at the end of the fiscal year that money is gone."

Astino said the school has paid $422,651.89 over the past seven years (see sidebar).

The school department has been told by both the town manager and auditor Tony Roselli that the water department would no longer be able to charge the school. This is the official word from the state Department of Revenue, DeGennaro said.

Water Commission response

DeCaprio said that he would be happy to discuss the issue with the school department and get it resolved, and that he and Superintendent Barbara Cataldo plan to meet soon.

The problem, the water commissioner explained, is that "Town Hall has a record of (the school department) owing (the water department) $140,000; we have an outstanding balance." DeCaprio added that the water department does not do its own receivables; that is handled by Town Hall.

Both the water commission and the school department have their numbers, but none of them seem to be adding up.

Regarding the issue of interdepartmental billing, DeCaprio clarified that DOR states that "it is not appropriate for a town department to charge another town department, or for an enterprise fund to charge another fund for goods or services because the department operating the enterprise fund is not a separate and distinct legal entity... it is appropriate for those services to be taken into account in the budget process."

"They do have to make accommodations for the water used in their budgets," DeCaprio said of town departments.

As for the matter of overhead allocations that sparked the heated debate during the Nov. 8 selectmen meeting, DeCaprio commented that the Water Commission is speaking out about costs in the $350K town manager's budget that are being allocated to the water department that have "nothing to do with my department."

As decided during the Nov. 8 meeting, a special committee will meet on Nov. 22 at 7 p.m to discuss the overhead allocations. While the issue mainly concerns the water department, DeCaprio believes the discussion will be instructive for other departments as well.

School department's water bill

According to Astino, the school department has paid the Water Commission the following over the past seven fiscal years. The fiscal year runs from July 1 to June 30 of the next year:

Fiscal 2005: $25,518.18
Fiscal 2006: $42,559.96
Fiscal 2007: $60,095.91
Fiscal 2008: $57,923.85
Fiscal 2009: $85,215.72
Fiscal 2010: $69,196.29
Fiscal 2011: $82,059.98

COHASSET COLLEGE STUDENT IS

Helping to build a kitchen for Kenyan orphanage

Lesen Haracz, a graduate of Cohasset High School's Class of 2009 and current environmental engineering student at Syracuse University, is the secretary of SU's branch of Engineers Without Borders, a national organization that works to design, construct and oversee engineering projects in places of need. In August, accompanied by the three other officers of SU's EWB and their mentor, Lesen traveled to South Kinangop, Kenya, to construct a kitchen for an orphanage.

Once arriving on site the students, armed with hard hats and steel-toed boots, worked hand-in-hand with the local construction crew.

"Into Abba's Arms" (http://intoabbasarms.org/) houses more than 30 orphans, many of whom lost their parents or who were abandoned on the streets. The orphanage has a large campus that contains dormitories for the children and volunteers, a chapel, a small library and a kitchen that is the size of an average storage shed. The size of this kitchen forced the children to eat in their dormitory and miss the opportunities to share meals with one another. In Kenya, the traditional cooking style is done over an open, enclosed fire. Having this type of fire in the small, enclosed kitchen caused hazards to health and safety. Due to these conditions, Syracuse's branch of EWB has been working for the past three years to implement a kitchen facility that will allow for the expansion of the orphanage's capacity and ensure the safety of the staff, along with giving the children and staff a dining hall to eat together.

In the winter of 2011, Lesen and the three other current officers and their advisor reviewed designs produced from a local professional engineering firm and wrote in-depth reports explaining their plans for this kitchen facility. In early spring, after presenting their designs and plans to EWB's Technical Advisory Committee, they were approved and given the OK to travel to Kenya.

Once arriving on site the students, armed with hard hats and steel-toed boots, worked hand-in-hand with the local construction crew. They were given the opportunity to experience and learn Kenyan engineering first hand, along with sharing their own knowledge. The kitchen facility is well underway but will unfortunately come to a pause due to lack of funding. The students are planning to go back to Into Abba's Arms in January 2012 to assist in the completion of the project. With some needed fundraising, the students will be able to give back to the orphanage and finally complete the structure that has been under-wraps for over three years. In doing so, this will allow the orphanage's capacity to double in size and to house close to 60 children, allowing other orphaned children to thrive in this loving environment.

Lesen Haracz hoists two of the youngest girls, Faith and Milka, while saying goodbye on their last full day.

To help, visit http://lcs.syr.edu/organizations/ewb/ where people can donate to the fundraising efforts to fully complete this kitchen facility, inside and out. People may also email Lesen at leharacz@.syr.edu and she can provide more information.

*To get the fixed introductory APR (Annual Percentage Rate) shown, you must apply between 10/01/11 and 12/31/11, and take a minimum $10,000 draw on the line at closing. If a minimum $10,000 draw is not taken at closing, a rate of 2.49% APR will apply. The introductory rate will be in effect for the first 18 billing cycles after the line is opened. [1]Thereafter, the rate, including the rate on any existing account balance, will convert to a variable rate APR based on the Wall Street Journal "Prime Rate" published on the last day of the billing cycle (3.25% as of 08/31/11). Maximum APR is 18%. All APRs shown assume a maximum combined loan-to-value ratio of 75%. Valid for 1-4 family owner occupied properties or single family second homes. [2]Trust review fees may apply when applicable. Prepayment penalty of $300 if line is paid in full and discharged within 36 months of closing. Property insurance required. Flood insurance may be required. Subject to credit approval. Other terms and conditions may apply. Consult your tax advisor regarding deductibility of interest. Membership eligibility requirements apply. If you are not a member of Crescent Credit Union, and you live or work in Plymouth, Bristol, Norfolk, or Barnstable counties, a $5 deposit to a Crescent savings account will establish membership. Federally insured by NCUA. NMLS ID# 490403

Bandit thinks he's a person

He's O.K. with children — so if you're contemplating adopting a homeless feline, please bring the whole family in to see if Bandit is the one for you.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Bandit, a Tuxedo male. Bandit is a friendly adult male cat who adores human company, but insists on being an "only" cat, as he tends to be aggressive with those of his own species. He's O.K. with children, so if you're contemplating adopting a homeless feline, please bring the whole family in to see if Bandit is the one for you. He's been the "office cat" for quite some time and will make a great companion cat.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of HSAR's very adoptable cats and kittens, including 6 adorable baby black kittens HSAR even has a few, friendly, but not lap cats, that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo , Tabby, and Tiger kittens, so many to choose from!

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

Bandit is a real people-person, preferring human company to that of his fellow cats. COURTESY PHOTO

Real women on the runway

Cohasset fashions appear in Boston benefit

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Lisa Lynch of Ports and Company show off a dress from her store that will be part of the Fashion Plates Luncheon and Fashion Show to benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's Greater New England Chapter. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Today, 22 women who are fighting MS will be strutting their stuff down a Boston runway. Each model will be sporting clothes from Cohasset's own Ports & Company.

Ports owner Lisa Lynch is proud to participate in the Fashion Plates Luncheon and Fashion Show to benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's Greater New England Chapter. The event takes place at the Sheraton Boston Hotel from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. today, Friday, Nov. 18 and features "real women with real stories" who are battling MS.

Multiple sclerosis is an autoimmune disease affecting the brain and spinal chord. It has a variety of symptoms, and the severity differs in each patient. It is most commonly diagnosed between the ages of 20 and 50, and occurs more often in women than in men.

This is the Cohasset boutique's second year contributing clothes to the fashion show, said Lynch, and "every year gets better and better."

"This show is a celebration of these women, what they've achieved and what they're going through," Lynch said, "and they're not alone. This is a nice way to showcase that."

The Fashion Plates event is being hosted by Lori Grande of WKLB Country 102.5's morning show "JW and Lori." The event kicks off with a networking reception, followed by the luncheon and fashion show. Also on the day's agenda is a raffle of seven gift baskets, each valued at more than $1,000.

Ports & Company is one of several Boston-area businesses contributing to the event, but in a fashion show, clothes are obviously the highlight.

As a fashion professional, Lynch feels that looking one's best goes a long way toward feeling better.

"It always gives you a little extra bit of confidence," said Lynch of fashion. "You feel good when you look good. It doesn't come easy—you have to put some effort into it."

This is where Lynch as a boutique owner comes in. While there are so many fashion options out there, Lynch tries to help women find the styles that work best for them and their individual lifestyles.

For the MS fashion show, Lynch has each model come in to her store in Cohasset to pick out clothes that allow each woman to feel comfortable and express herself.

"I've had 22 models come in," Lynch explained. "They're all different ages, sizes, looks and lifestyles—moms, career women. And they all look beautiful, fabulous."

MS is an issue near and dear to Lynch's heart, both as a store owner who has customers suffering from it and as a friend who has seen her friends go through it. This is why Lynch loves what Fashion Plates committee member, Dr. Barbara Green of Cohasset, has to say about the fashion show.

"Barbara says, 'It's real women with real stories,'" said Lynch. "I like to add, 'It's real terrific women with real busy lives and real fabulous clothes.'"

Real estate activity in Norfolk County

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the first quarter of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 2011. The first quarter was marked by an upswing in sales activity with little mobility seen in terms of average sale prices.

First quarter sales volume reached 1.3 billion this year, a promising 13 percent increase from 2010's first quarter. Integral to this increase is the number of land transfers that took place in Norfolk County from July through the end of September. During this timeframe 3,762 deeds were recorded, an 8 percent increase from last year. There were 2,332 deeds recorded that reflected greater than nominal consideration. This total translates to a 16 percent increase from last year's total. Despite these positive signs of real estate activity the average sale price of deeds over $1,000, both residential and commercial properties, peaked at $564,445, not quite level with last year's average of $582,055.

Mortgage activity for the first quarter revealed signs of slowing down from last year's flurry, which was precipitated by historically low interest rates. There were 8,272 new Norfolk County mortgages during this year's first quarter, down 23 percent from last year's figures. Total mortgage value stood at $3.3 million compared to 2010's $4 million. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

Pertaining to existing Norfolk County mortgages, the first quarter saw a 23 percent decrease from last year in the number of homes lost to foreclosure. During this same timeframe in Norfolk County the foreclosure process was commenced with the recording of 255 Notice to Foreclose Mortgages. While the Associated Press recently reported a spike nationally in foreclosure notices, Norfolk County's numbers have remained relatively constant through three quarters. Although not affording redress against mortgage contracts, Declarations of Homestead are effective in protecting the equity in one's home from certain other types of claims and actions. During this year's first fiscal quarter Norfolk County residents took advantage of the state's new Homestead Law and recorded 3,121 Declarations of Homestead, 30 percent more than last year.

Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. Complementing the Registry's efforts to expand and increase the accessibility of land records the Registry now accepts electronically transmitted documents. E-filing allows a real estate professional from not only Norfolk County but from across the country to send and record documents within minutes at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. To learn more about this technology and/or the other services offered by Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call the customer service department at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

SEAL

for the virus, but all five tested positive; test results for six other potential viral pathogens and biotoxins came back negative.

Additional tests are being done to determine whether the flu virus is the overall cause of death for these seals.

Both NOAA and the New England Aquarium are asking folks to take caution; Influenza A is a group of viruses that could be transmitted to human beings.

Tony LaCasse, spokesperson for the New England Aquarium, wanted to remind those walking their dogs on the beach to be especially careful.

"People enjoy wintertime because they can cut their dog loose on the beach," said LaCasse. "Rover can go behind sand dunes, investigating something you're not familiar with. If by chance your dog interacts with a seal carcass, then comes over to you and you pet him, it increases the odds of transmittal. When a virus can migrate to a new species or host, sometimes it can mutate."

Seals and dogs are also more likely to infect each other since they are closely related species, according to NOAA.

"This time of year, we suggest people keep dogs on leashes unless they are confident they can retrieve the dog under voice command," LaCasse added.

As for those who are just plain curious and want to investigate the seal carcass up close, LaCasse would like to remind folks that it's against federal law to touch a seal.

Seals, along with dolphins, whales and sea lions, are protected under the Marine Mammal Protection Act, making it illegal to touch, disturb, feed or otherwise harass marine animals without authorization. Federal law dictates that people maintain at least 150 feet (50 yards) of distance from a seal.

"This is for your protection as well as the animals'," explained LaCasse.

While live seals appear to be cute and friendly with their doglike faces, they are not as approachable as a household pet.

"The reason seals come out of the water is to rest," said LaCasse. "If there are a lot of people around it, it's not getting rest and becomes highly stressed." And under stress, seals could bite. This is another reason it's crucial to keep "Rover" as far away as possible.

The last time an influenza outbreak led to a UME in the seal population, according to LaCasse, was in the winter of 1979-80, when over 1,000 seals washed up dead along the northeastern seaboard, particularly the outer Cape. This year's UME is even more unusual because the deaths have occurred almost exclusively among pups, "seals born this spring," LaCasse said.

Someone buried the Sandy Beach seal in the sand, and a photo was posted on the association's Facebook page on Wednesday, Nov. 9, the day Contis went to the beach to investigate.

Contis said he is unsure whether someone from the New England Aquarium will come to examine the seal. But at this stage, when the animal has already been decomposing for several weeks, the seal is no longer valuable for a necropsy.

According to LaCasse, it is up to the town's Department of Public Works to dispose of the animal when the time comes.

In April of 2006, the town had to pay to remove a beached whale that washed up on Cohasset's shore. The animal, a Cuvier's beaked whale, was around 13-1/2 feet long and was still alive when it beached itself. The New England Aquarium euthanized the sick creature, and the DPW had to move the animal onto a large flatbed truck for transport to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Falmouth for testing.

The removal of the dead seal, which likely weighs less than 50 pounds, will not be so elaborate. LaCasse said that unless locals protest and want the animal removed immediately, the town could simply let nature take its course.

"There are good sized tides coming," said Contis. "We may figure out a way to get it closer to water's edge."

If you see a seal:

Call NOAA Fisheries Service's stranding hotline at 1-866-755-NOAA (6622) or the New England Aquarium's 24-hour marine animal hotline: 617-973-5247
Stay at least 150 feet away
Keep dogs on a leash and do not allow them to approach seals
DO NOT give the seal food or water
DO NOT pour water on the seal or try to cover it with a towel or blanket
DO NOT try to make the seal move

Coughlin. "I think we're going to be surprised by the number of good candidates we will have."

Sullivan and Rogers, the consulting firm brought in to do the work of the treasurer collector, finished reconciling the cash balance on Tuesday, Coughlin said. The firm, along with consultant Eric Kinsherf who is acting as interim finance director and town accountant, are striving to meet DOR's deadline to submit the balance sheet by Nov. 22. This will enable the town to get free cash certified in time for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting.

"Our package to DOR will probably be the best packet this town has submitted in a long time," said Coughlin.

"Our package to DOR will probably be the best packet this town has submitted in a long time."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

In the meantime, Coughlin told the board that Sullivan and Rogers will likely remain working in the treasurer collector's office past January to help implement SoftRight, the new financial software system the town has been trying to switch over to; Kinsherf may stay on hand for an extra 30 days to help train the new finance director.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE BRIEFS

AP scholars honored

The school committee recognized a group of AP scholars during a recent meeting, and honored two more students during its Nov. 16 meeting: Emily Baumgarten and Julia Canney.

Deer Hill PSO grants approved

The Deer Hill and Cohasset schools Parent School Organization (PSO) will fund the following four teacher grants, which were submitted by Deer Hill teachers:

Request: Six six-position Califone listening centers with one jackbox, six over-ear headphones, one media player and a carrying case. Cost: $1,219.91. Submitted by: Emily Gibbons on behalf of third grade Request: One teacher Premium Glogster subscription for 200 student licenses. Cost: $99. Submitted by: Suzi Corkhum on behalf of fourth grade.

Request: One teacher subscription to BrainPop. Cost: $195. Submitted by: Cassandra O'Brien on behalf of the computer lab.

Request: Six digital Nikon Coolpix L24 14.0 megapixel digital cameras with necessary attachments to download photos into student and teacher computers. Cost: $570. Submitted by: Arna Lewis on behalf of the fifth grade.

Total cost from all the grants is $2,083. The school committee voted to accept PSO's donation.

School wins settlement to fix floors

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo announced during Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting and again during Wednesday's school committee meeting that the school department has won a $5,000 settlement to replace the floors at the High School.

The litigation process began four years ago.

"It's been a long time coming, and we're happy with the result," Cataldo said.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro said the issue began when a chemical stripper was used on the floors and was evidently left on for too long, causing the tiles to erode. While DeGennaro said that the school has been working to replace areas as needed since the damage was done, "there is still a lot of wear and tear."

Bobby Nahill, a high school junior and student representative to the school committee, said that before initial repairs began, the floors were "a mess."

"The whole hallway was a wreck... kids were tripping over (the tiles). It's gotten better, but could definitely use some improvements."

The settlement money will be placed into a revolving account until the school can begin replacing the floors next summer.

"The plan is to have the work done sooner rather than later," said school committee vice chair Jeanne Astino.

America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration

Celebrating America's history

Parade, food festival, concert part of weekend festivities

By Frank Mand
fmand@wickedlocal.com

Look closely at the Vietnam-era vintage helicopter – the Huey, as soldiers referred to it – as it passes you during Saturday's America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration parade in Plymouth. There's more to it than meets the eye.

To begin with, it's a bus. No, not in the sense that it was a workhouse during the Vietnam War, busing soldiers in and out of battle. That's true, too, but this Huey (a nickname based on its original designation, HU-1) is literally a bus.

The top of a retired school bus was cut off so the helicopter could rest up high on a structure that could be driven about, not pulled like some floats.

At the front of the bus there's a platform on which sets a living replica of the famous bronze Vietnam Soldiers Memorial, which is situated in a grove of trees just a short distance from The Wall in Washington, D.C.

It's a "living" replica because, pay attention, this statue is alive.

The perimeter of this float – an actual image of The Wall, itself – was printed by one of the float's sponsors, Sign-A-Rama of Kingston.

When the Huey comes close to your vantage point on the parade route, listen carefully. That sound you are hearing is the actual sound of a helicopter's heavy blades cutting through the air, a sound that has become synonymous with the Vietnam War.

And the Huey, itself? We don't want to spoil the illusion, but you should understand that this replica was the result of hundreds of man-hours of labor. It was built, from the ground up, with 2-by-4s and plywood and insulation and paint.

As you read this, in fact, dozens of volunteers are putting the finishing touches on this Huey, readying it for its first flight – down the main street of America's Hometown.

"A lot of love, sweat and tears has gone into this float," America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration Director Olly deMacedo said this week, speaking from a cell phone as he toured one of the parade work sites. "But, then, that same spirit is evident in all of the floats and in the whole celebration."

DeMacedo is a hard man to get in touch with right now, for obvious reasons.

After 15 years, a small parade has grown into a big parade, big concerts, a food festival, a craft fair, a harvest fair and a drum and bugle corps reunion concert, all under the umbrella of what is called America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration.

The bands, floats, craftspeople and visitors come from all over the world but, deMacedo said, the focus, as always, is on creating something authentically American.

"That's our mission, to preserve the Pilgrim legacy, and to honor all those who have fought to preserve the American way of life," he explained.

"Through concerts honoring military sacrifice and a parade honoring the Pilgrim legacy," the events mission statement reads in part, "spectators will leave with a sense of history and pride."

The parade and other events and activities around town that weekend are considered to be educational, in the best sense of the word.

The parade arranges its floats in order of their historical era.

It starts off with a float celebrating the first people to discover the natural resources of this area and the Native American culture – featuring an authentic "wetu."

A replica of the Mayflower comes next, followed by a display of the First Thanksgiving, and then a giant cornucopia.

"That's one of the messages that we are trying to convey," deMacedo said, "that even though we've seen some tough times, America is still the land of plenty."

America is also, deMacedo emphasized, a land of generous people.

"Please tell people that when they come to the parade, they should bring nonperishable food items," deMacedo said. One of the floats in the parade is designed to look like a giant locomotive that has a hollow center, which parade watchers fill with items for local food pantries.

"Last year, we filled the train with over three tons of food," deMacedo said. "This year, we've added on to the train, and we hope to double the amount of nonperishable items that we collect."

Along with the train – officially called America's Hometown Express – other floats in this year's parade feature historical sites (a replica of the Hedge House), a variety of turkeys in various stages (in the wild and ready to eat.), a Victorian church and carolers, floats that are really floating up in the air and, of course, that "jolly old elf so lively and quick, you'll know in a minute it must be..."

Interspersed between the historical floats there will be marching bands, drum and bugle corps, and military re-enactors in the uniform of American soldiers from the last several hundred years.

At the back of the parade there will also be a long line of motorcycle riders once again honoring Vietnam veterans.

"The parade is the centerpiece, but it's really a full weekend of activities, concerts, festivals and special events," deMacedo said excitedly. "There's an encampment of military re-enactors who will be literally camping out in Brewster Gardens, what we're calling the Portal to the Past. There's also going to be a flyover by a C5, the world's largest plane, and you'll be able to hear the pilot as he passes over, from speakers on Cole's Hill."

There's more to the Huey than meets the eye, and more to this weekend than we can fit here.

"Nobody knows the work that goes into this," one of the hundreds of anonymous workers busy at the parade's workshop in North Plymouth said. "Nobody knows how many people are working, behind the scenes to make this happen."

Now you know.

NEW ENGLAND FOOD FESTIVAL

Area chefs put best food forward

Chefs from all over the region will battle for bragging rights the weekend before Thanksgiving at the New England Food Festival, part of the America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration. And the best part is that guests get to enjoy the fruits of those efforts by sampling all the entries for $12 ($7 for children ages 6-12 and free for children 5 and younger).

"Culinary experts from all over the area will bring their creations to the New England Food Festival," America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration Executive Director Olly deMacedo said. "Not only is the competition fun to watch, but the tasty food from the more than 20 competitors is great to enjoy."

The title of best soups, chowders, desserts, party foods and local and fresh, plus best booth design will all be decided at this one-day culinary festival to be held on the historic Plymouth waterfront from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19.
